

Latest

FROM EUROPE.

The Royal Mail Steamer Canada, Capt. James Stone, &c., arrived Tuesday morning at Halifax, at about 8 o'clock, after a fine passage of 23 days from Liverpool.

The news is not important.

Parliament was prorogued by Her Majesty on the 8th instant.

The political news from the continent is barren of interest.

France has put her party spirit aside, in order to entertain her distinguished visitors, the civic dignitaries of London.

MONDAY was one of the warmest and liveliest days we have had in the metropolis during the present season; and accordingly there was a very numerous concourse of visitors at the Crystal Palace.

Between nine and eleven o'clock the Kensington and Knightsbridge road had a most animated appearance, owing to the two confluent streams of vehicles—one caused by the usual Monday-morning excursions to Hampton Court, &c., and the other by an enormous influx of visitors to the Crystal Palace. During the first two hours about 40,000 persons entered the building; and up to one, there was more than 50,000 visitors.

As may be imagined, the heat was excessive.

The entire number of visitors during the day was 60,000.

The receipts were—

Season Tickets, £32 0 0
At the doors, 3,000 18 0

Total, £3,028 18 0

The Crystal Palace is, by a vote of the House of Commons, ordered to be preserved until the 1st May, 1852.

This was made an attempt to remove the park itself as the building.

The government did not appear to advantage in the debate;

they displayed not merely an indifference to the public wishes, but a wayward disposition to oppose them. The Chancellor of the Exchequer declared that the building was erected only for a temporary purpose, and that purpose being effected, it must come down.

The most solemn pledges, he added, had been given that it should come down, and these pledges must be redeemed.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer may be a wise man and we are unfortunate in not having been able at any time to discover his wisdom, but it really does seem to us that his remarks in the present case were more than ordinarily absurd.

To whom were the pledges given? If there are pledges to be redeemed, let them be redeemed, but let us first ascertain that they really exist, and that their fulfillment is required before we go about to destroy a very beautiful piece of art, the merits of which will be admitted even by Sir Charles Wood.

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

Parliament was prorogued on the 8th instant. The application for adjournment to the House of Lords was greater than on any previous occasion. The weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme. Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPEECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

SPECH:

My Lords and Gentlemen; I am glad to be able to release you from your attendance in Parliament and I thank you for the diligence with which you have performed your laborious duties.

I continue to maintain the most friendly relations with foreign powers. I am happy to be able to report that the weather was beautiful, and for many years there has not been so large a concourse of people to view the procession.

Near to the entrance to the house, the crush was extreme.

Her Majesty entered the building at two o'clock, and the usual ceremonies having been gone through, delivered the following

&lt;