FREDERICTON JUNCTION.

Central Blissville, Tracey Station and

Fredericton Junction derives its importance from its position as the centre from which travellers go to Fredericton and up river points, Bangor and points west or St. John and southern localities. There is a train, either freight or passenger, at the station during each hour of the day, and the baggage master, John Maynard, is kept pretty busy, as besides looking after baggage, he has the freight and express business also to attend to. He is a popular man with both travellers and trainmen, and the junction would not be the same place if he was not around. Jas. Buchanan, station agent, is too well known to all to require many words. Sufficient to say that he is one of the best on the road and is

About three and a half miles from Fredericton Junction is Tracey Station. This was for many years an important milling centre, but the fires also swept away a world of lumber wealth. There is enough lumber growing, however, to supply the wants of the neighborhood and the mill does considerable work. It is believed that the district is rich in coal. the specimens found being of the best quality, and steps are to be taken the coming summer to make a thorough test there be any considerable quantity of coal as is believed, the future of the village is assured. Coming back to the junction and taking the train to Rusagornis Station, we there leave the track and strike off eastward 'across the lake" as it is generally termed. The lake is known as French goose ground, besides being a favorite resort for gaspereau. It is one of the places grass when the water has gone down and ducks and geese when the fall freshets come.
