

THE BEST

and nothing but the best goes in the garment made at Maunder's. Our assistant cutter and foreman tailor have just arrived from New York, where they have been studying the very latest in Cut and Style and how it is done.

Remember, we have the largest selection of up-to-date tailoring goods in the city. Come right along and have the "Maunder make." Certainly some style.

JOHN MAUNDER,

281 and 283 Duckworth Street.

The Evening Telegram.

W. J. HERDER, Proprietor --- W. F. LLOYD, Editor

ST. JOHN'S, N.F.L.D., TUESDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1913.

THE LIBERAL MANIFESTO.

The Manifesto of Sir Robert Bond, has been accepted as a Statesmanlike statement of a programme which will have considerable influence on the future prosperity of the country. Sir Robert Bond announces his intention of placing the finances of the country on a sound and economic basis. The extravagant expenditure of the Morris administration has alarmed the country. Eighteen months ago thousands of fishermen throughout the North gave expression to their feeling of alarm at the mad panic of expenditure that was going on and did their best to put an end to it by petitioning the Legislature to place their prayer for a General Election twelve months ago before the proper authorities. Their prayers met with insult and contumely, and although backed by that powerful organization of the fishermen, the P. P. U., the request was turned down, and wanton waste and wild extravagance was continued on a greater scale than ever in order forsooth to gain over the electorate by gigantic giveaways. No wonder was it that the P.P.U. turned their attention to the Liberal Party and did their best to induce a Statesman whose great reputation is based on economical management of public affairs to lead a united Opposition against the party led by Sir Edward Morris, pledged themselves to give a loyal support to the Government which Sir Robert Bond expects to form next month, and to do their best to put him in charge of the next Government and to help his government there to carry out the Manifesto he published on Saturday last. One of the worst features of the administration of Sir Edward Morris is the extraordinary additions which have been made to the cost of administration and the last year of the Bond administration, the cost of carrying on these departments was increased by nearly Seven Hundred Thousand Dollars, and since the Legislature met last, officials have been pensioned and political supporters put into their place, mainly for political expediency and not to the advantage of the people. Is it any wonder then that Sir Robert Bond pledges himself to grapple with the frightful situation created by the Morris Government, and that Sir Robert Bond promises

1.—A thorough expert examination into the financial condition of the Colony, with a view to establishing its finances upon a sound basis.

2.—A revision of the whole Civil Service with a view to dispensing with the services of unnecessary and unsuitable officials, and secure greater efficiency and economy in the conduct of the several departments of the Government.

3.—The re-establishment of the credit of the Colony both at home and abroad by a sane and judicious expenditure of the Colony's revenues.

Price Of Fish Going Up Provisions Going Down.

This to a very large extent is the direct result of the Coaker agitation. Vote on the side of the Fishermen's Union and you vote for a steady upward tendency for fish prices.

Vote for the Tory Government and you vote for reduced prices for your fish; reduced prices for your seals; increased revenue taxes, and heavier price for your ordinary supplies.

Fishermen, look to your own interests. Under the Bond Government supported by the P.P.U., twenty quintals of fish will be as good as 25 under the reckless spendthrift Government that is now "on their last ones."

For Sale by
BAINE JOHNSTON & Co.,
Mixed Oats,
Bran,
Cattle Feed,
Corn,
Round and Split Pease.
At Lowest Market Prices.

SOUTHSIDE ACCLAIMS THE LIBERAL CANDIDATES

Over 800 Voters do honour to the Party Candidates, Messrs. Ellis, Cowan and Scott. The First Public Meeting of the Liberal Candidates for Saint John's West was held last night in Harvey's Store, Southside.

Accompanied by some of their committee the candidates left the committee rooms at 7.30 and proceeded up Water Street to the Long Bridge. On their approach they were met by a large and representative delegation from the South Side who with words of welcome and enthusiastic huzzas and amidst the intermittent roar of musketry welcomed the party of their choice, the men who are to set up once again in St. John's West the good old Liberal Standard which with Judas-like tactics characteristic of his life, the traitor Morris endeavoured and so nearly succeeded in uprooting.

Along the South Side Road lit up by hundreds of torches and flaring stage powder the party then proceeded to Harvey's store where the meeting was held.

The assemblage was called to order at about 8 o'clock and on motion carried Mr. Plemon C. Taylor took the chair and addressed the meeting. This, the South Side, was his native district here on these hills he had first seen the light of day and it was indeed a proud moment of his life to have the privilege of addressing his fellow citizens of the South Side in support of Liberalism and truth in support of that party which had ever stood for the honest, safe, and progressive Government and he would urge not only upon those whom he had the honour of addressing but upon the whole district of St. John's West that the safety of our country and the honour of our people depended on their turning out the bangers now in office and giving the reins of power to the George Washington of Newfoundland, Sir Robert Bond.

Mr. Ellis then rose to speak and the pent up enthusiasm of that great concourse breaking forth, cheer upon cheer resounded through the hall in his honour. For three quarters of an hour he spoke on the condition of our country and our people. There was a time in the life of very many men when they saw with anxiety that they were not performing their accustomed work with the same vigour and the same success, their productive power was becoming diminished, their health impaired and what was the cause?

They were overworked, the human fabric was strained through continued and restless labour; it was necessary for them to stop, to mark time for a while until they had recuperated and the vital tissues had regained the force and strength necessary to continue the business of life. So it was with the life of every country. Newfoundland to-day was overworked.

The country's finances, its internal economy had been strained to breaking point. It was necessary, if we wished to continue in the race for colonial health and colonial importance to stop and mark time. His Leader Sir Robert Bond had outlined a policy which he considered essential to the safety of the country and with that policy he was in full accord and he would ask the people to pay heed to the facts they set forth and by returning the three Liberal Candidates and play their part in the return of the Liberal Government.

The chairman then called upon Mr. Scott, who amidst great applause and continued cheering came forward to address them. For eight years he had and he hoped faithfully represented the district of St. John's West. All his life he had been a supporter of the Liberal Party, because history had proved that only under the Government of the Liberal Party could the country attain that prominence in the Empire which was her due. Was it possible or probable that a Government which had shown itself so incapable, a Government which had been guilty of the reckless extravagance and ever present boodling which characterizes the "People's" Party would bring Newfoundland to that niche of Prosperity and Independence which we all hoped for. He thought not; he hoped the people would stand by them in the fight for clean government and that on the 30th of October Ellis, Cowan and Scott would poll a bigger vote than St. John's West had ever achieved in the representatives of the past.

Upon the request of the chairman, Mr. Cowan then rose to speak, but for many minutes it was worse than useless, cheer after cheer reverberated through the building. The rafters rang with tremendous applause, the trumpet note of victory. For over an hour in language most impressive and convincing he dealt with the issues at stake; one by one he took up the points outlined in the Manifesto of Sir Robert Bond. The exhausted state of our finances; the incompetency displayed in the railway contract; the various land scandals; the broken pledges and bluff of the Morris platform. The agricultural fizzle and the educational policy, all received his minute consideration and criticism.

In glowing terms he paid a tribute to his leader, Sir Robert Bond. He showed the insincerity of the Morris Party; when in town the Tory papers proclaimed that if you vote for Bond you vote for Coaker as Coaker controls Bond, and at one and the same time Donald Morison in Bonavista says that if you vote for Coaker you vote for Bond, since Bond controls the Party. This sort of bluff and insincerity would not go down with the people and he would ask them to do justice to themselves and the country by voting for the Liberal Party and the three Liberal Candidates, Ellis, Cowan and Scott. After cheers had been given for the Liberal Candidates and the singing of the National Anthem the meeting adjourned and the crowd proceeded to the Committee Rooms where the candidates and some of the committee addressed them on the plan of campaign. For the remaining time the candidates will address the committee and their friends every night at the rooms and deal minutely with the respective policies of Sir Robert Bond and Sir Edward Morris.

The chairman then called upon Mr. Scott, who amidst great applause and continued cheering came forward to address them. For eight years he had and he hoped faithfully represented the district of St. John's West. All his life he had been a supporter of the Liberal Party, because history had proved that only under the Government of the Liberal Party could the country attain that prominence in the Empire which was her due. Was it possible or probable that a Government which had shown itself so incapable, a Government which had been guilty of the reckless extravagance and ever present boodling which characterizes the "People's" Party would bring Newfoundland to that niche of Prosperity and Independence which we all hoped for. He thought not; he hoped the people would stand by them in the fight for clean government and that on the 30th of October Ellis, Cowan and Scott would poll a bigger vote than St. John's West had ever achieved in the representatives of the past.

Upon the request of the chairman, Mr. Cowan then rose to speak, but for many minutes it was worse than useless, cheer after cheer reverberated through the building. The rafters rang with tremendous applause, the trumpet note of victory. For over an hour in language most impressive and convincing he dealt with the issues at stake; one by one he took up the points outlined in the Manifesto of Sir Robert Bond. The exhausted state of our finances; the incompetency displayed in the railway contract; the various land scandals; the broken pledges and bluff of the Morris platform. The agricultural fizzle and the educational policy, all received his minute consideration and criticism.

In glowing terms he paid a tribute to his leader, Sir Robert Bond. He showed the insincerity of the Morris Party; when in town the Tory papers proclaimed that if you vote for Bond you vote for Coaker as Coaker controls Bond, and at one and the same time Donald Morison in Bonavista says that if you vote for Coaker you vote for Bond, since Bond controls the Party. This sort of bluff and insincerity would not go down with the people and he would ask them to do justice to themselves and the country by voting for the Liberal Party and the three Liberal Candidates, Ellis, Cowan and Scott. After cheers had been given for the Liberal Candidates and the singing of the National Anthem the meeting adjourned and the crowd proceeded to the Committee Rooms where the candidates and some of the committee addressed them on the plan of campaign. For the remaining time the candidates will address the committee and their friends every night at the rooms and deal minutely with the respective policies of Sir Robert Bond and Sir Edward Morris.

The chairman then called upon Mr. Scott, who amidst great applause and continued cheering came forward to address them. For eight years he had and he hoped faithfully represented the district of St. John's West. All his life he had been a supporter of the Liberal Party, because history had proved that only under the Government of the Liberal Party could the country attain that prominence in the Empire which was her due. Was it possible or probable that a Government which had shown itself so incapable, a Government which had been guilty of the reckless extravagance and ever present boodling which characterizes the "People's" Party would bring Newfoundland to that niche of Prosperity and Independence which we all hoped for. He thought not; he hoped the people would stand by them in the fight for clean government and that on the 30th of October Ellis, Cowan and Scott would poll a bigger vote than St. John's West had ever achieved in the representatives of the past.

Upon the request of the chairman, Mr. Cowan then rose to speak, but for many minutes it was worse than useless, cheer after cheer reverberated through the building. The rafters rang with tremendous applause, the trumpet note of victory. For over an hour in language most impressive and convincing he dealt with the issues at stake; one by one he took up the points outlined in the Manifesto of Sir Robert Bond. The exhausted state of our finances; the incompetency displayed in the railway contract; the various land scandals; the broken pledges and bluff of the Morris platform. The agricultural fizzle and the educational policy, all received his minute consideration and criticism.

In glowing terms he paid a tribute to his leader, Sir Robert Bond. He showed the insincerity of the Morris Party; when in town the Tory papers proclaimed that if you vote for Bond you vote for Coaker as Coaker controls Bond, and at one and the same time Donald Morison in Bonavista says that if you vote for Coaker you vote for Bond, since Bond controls the Party. This sort of bluff and insincerity would not go down with the people and he would ask them to do justice to themselves and the country by voting for the Liberal Party and the three Liberal Candidates, Ellis, Cowan and Scott. After cheers had been given for the Liberal Candidates and the singing of the National Anthem the meeting adjourned and the crowd proceeded to the Committee Rooms where the candidates and some of the committee addressed them on the plan of campaign. For the remaining time the candidates will address the committee and their friends every night at the rooms and deal minutely with the respective policies of Sir Robert Bond and Sir Edward Morris.

The chairman then called upon Mr. Scott, who amidst great applause and continued cheering came forward to address them. For eight years he had and he hoped faithfully represented the district of St. John's West. All his life he had been a supporter of the Liberal Party, because history had proved that only under the Government of the Liberal Party could the country attain that prominence in the Empire which was her due. Was it possible or probable that a Government which had shown itself so incapable, a Government which had been guilty of the reckless extravagance and ever present boodling which characterizes the "People's" Party would bring Newfoundland to that niche of Prosperity and Independence which we all hoped for. He thought not; he hoped the people would stand by them in the fight for clean government and that on the 30th of October Ellis, Cowan and Scott would poll a bigger vote than St. John's West had ever achieved in the representatives of the past.

Upon the request of the chairman, Mr. Cowan then rose to speak, but for many minutes it was worse than useless, cheer after cheer reverberated through the building. The rafters rang with tremendous applause, the trumpet note of victory. For over an hour in language most impressive and convincing he dealt with the issues at stake; one by one he took up the points outlined in the Manifesto of Sir Robert Bond. The exhausted state of our finances; the incompetency displayed in the railway contract; the various land scandals; the broken pledges and bluff of the Morris platform. The agricultural fizzle and the educational policy, all received his minute consideration and criticism.

In glowing terms he paid a tribute to his leader, Sir Robert Bond. He showed the insincerity of the Morris Party; when in town the Tory papers proclaimed that if you vote for Bond you vote for Coaker as Coaker controls Bond, and at one and the same time Donald Morison in Bonavista says that if you vote for Coaker you vote for Bond, since Bond controls the Party. This sort of bluff and insincerity would not go down with the people and he would ask them to do justice to themselves and the country by voting for the Liberal Party and the three Liberal Candidates, Ellis, Cowan and Scott. After cheers had been given for the Liberal Candidates and the singing of the National Anthem the meeting adjourned and the crowd proceeded to the Committee Rooms where the candidates and some of the committee addressed them on the plan of campaign. For the remaining time the candidates will address the committee and their friends every night at the rooms and deal minutely with the respective policies of Sir Robert Bond and Sir Edward Morris.

The chairman then called upon Mr. Scott, who amidst great applause and continued cheering came forward to address them. For eight years he had and he hoped faithfully represented the district of St. John's West. All his life he had been a supporter of the Liberal Party, because history had proved that only under the Government of the Liberal Party could the country attain that prominence in the Empire which was her due. Was it possible or probable that a Government which had shown itself so incapable, a Government which had been guilty of the reckless extravagance and ever present boodling which characterizes the "People's" Party would bring Newfoundland to that niche of Prosperity and Independence which we all hoped for. He thought not; he hoped the people would stand by them in the fight for clean government and that on the 30th of October Ellis, Cowan and Scott would poll a bigger vote than St. John's West had ever achieved in the representatives of the past.

Upon the request of the chairman, Mr. Cowan then rose to speak, but for many minutes it was worse than useless, cheer after cheer reverberated through the building. The rafters rang with tremendous applause, the trumpet note of victory. For over an hour in language most impressive and convincing he dealt with the issues at stake; one by one he took up the points outlined in the Manifesto of Sir Robert Bond. The exhausted state of our finances; the incompetency displayed in the railway contract; the various land scandals; the broken pledges and bluff of the Morris platform. The agricultural fizzle and the educational policy, all received his minute consideration and criticism.

In glowing terms he paid a tribute to his leader, Sir Robert Bond. He showed the insincerity of the Morris Party; when in town the Tory papers proclaimed that if you vote for Bond you vote for Coaker as Coaker controls Bond, and at one and the same time Donald Morison in Bonavista says that if you vote for Coaker you vote for Bond, since Bond controls the Party. This sort of bluff and insincerity would not go down with the people and he would ask them to do justice to themselves and the country by voting for the Liberal Party and the three Liberal Candidates, Ellis, Cowan and Scott. After cheers had been given for the Liberal Candidates and the singing of the National Anthem the meeting adjourned and the crowd proceeded to the Committee Rooms where the candidates and some of the committee addressed them on the plan of campaign. For the remaining time the candidates will address the committee and their friends every night at the rooms and deal minutely with the respective policies of Sir Robert Bond and Sir Edward Morris.

The chairman then called upon Mr. Scott, who amidst great applause and continued cheering came forward to address them. For eight years he had and he hoped faithfully represented the district of St. John's West. All his life he had been a supporter of the Liberal Party, because history had proved that only under the Government of the Liberal Party could the country attain that prominence in the Empire which was her due. Was it possible or probable that a Government which had shown itself so incapable, a Government which had been guilty of the reckless extravagance and ever present boodling which characterizes the "People's" Party would bring Newfoundland to that niche of Prosperity and Independence which we all hoped for. He thought not; he hoped the people would stand by them in the fight for clean government and that on the 30th of October Ellis, Cowan and Scott would poll a bigger vote than St. John's West had ever achieved in the representatives of the past.

Upon the request of the chairman, Mr. Cowan then rose to speak, but for many minutes it was worse than useless, cheer after cheer reverberated through the building. The rafters rang with tremendous applause, the trumpet note of victory. For over an hour in language most impressive and convincing he dealt with the issues at stake; one by one he took up the points outlined in the Manifesto of Sir Robert Bond. The exhausted state of our finances; the incompetency displayed in the railway contract; the various land scandals; the broken pledges and bluff of the Morris platform. The agricultural fizzle and the educational policy, all received his minute consideration and criticism.

In glowing terms he paid a tribute to his leader, Sir Robert Bond. He showed the insincerity of the Morris Party; when in town the Tory papers proclaimed that if you vote for Bond you vote for Coaker as Coaker controls Bond, and at one and the same time Donald Morison in Bonavista says that if you vote for Coaker you vote for Bond, since Bond controls the Party. This sort of bluff and insincerity would not go down with the people and he would ask them to do justice to themselves and the country by voting for the Liberal Party and the three Liberal Candidates, Ellis, Cowan and Scott. After cheers had been given for the Liberal Candidates and the singing of the National Anthem the meeting adjourned and the crowd proceeded to the Committee Rooms where the candidates and some of the committee addressed them on the plan of campaign. For the remaining time the candidates will address the committee and their friends every night at the rooms and deal minutely with the respective policies of Sir Robert Bond and Sir Edward Morris.

The chairman then called upon Mr. Scott, who amidst great applause and continued cheering came forward to address them. For eight years he had and he hoped faithfully represented the district of St. John's West. All his life he had been a supporter of the Liberal Party, because history had proved that only under the Government of the Liberal Party could the country attain that prominence in the Empire which was her due. Was it possible or probable that a Government which had shown itself so incapable, a Government which had been guilty of the reckless extravagance and ever present boodling which characterizes the "People's" Party would bring Newfoundland to that niche of Prosperity and Independence which we all hoped for. He thought not; he hoped the people would stand by them in the fight for clean government and that on the 30th of October Ellis, Cowan and Scott would poll a bigger vote than St. John's West had ever achieved in the representatives of the past.

Upon the request of the chairman, Mr. Cowan then rose to speak, but for many minutes it was worse than useless, cheer after cheer reverberated through the building. The rafters rang with tremendous applause, the trumpet note of victory. For over an hour in language most impressive and convincing he dealt with the issues at stake; one by one he took up the points outlined in the Manifesto of Sir Robert Bond. The exhausted state of our finances; the incompetency displayed in the railway contract; the various land scandals; the broken pledges and bluff of the Morris platform. The agricultural fizzle and the educational policy, all received his minute consideration and criticism.

In glowing terms he paid a tribute to his leader, Sir Robert Bond. He showed the insincerity of the Morris Party; when in town the Tory papers proclaimed that if you vote for Bond you vote for Coaker as Coaker controls Bond, and at one and the same time Donald Morison in Bonavista says that if you vote for Coaker you vote for Bond, since Bond controls the Party. This sort of bluff and insincerity would not go down with the people and he would ask them to do justice to themselves and the country by voting for the Liberal Party and the three Liberal Candidates, Ellis, Cowan and Scott. After cheers had been given for the Liberal Candidates and the singing of the National Anthem the meeting adjourned and the crowd proceeded to the Committee Rooms where the candidates and some of the committee addressed them on the plan of campaign. For the remaining time the candidates will address the committee and their friends every night at the rooms and deal minutely with the respective policies of Sir Robert Bond and Sir Edward Morris.

The chairman then called upon Mr. Scott, who amidst great applause and continued cheering came forward to address them. For eight years he had and he hoped faithfully represented the district of St. John's West. All his life he had been a supporter of the Liberal Party, because history had proved that only under the Government of the Liberal Party could the country attain that prominence in the Empire which was her due. Was it possible or probable that a Government which had shown itself so incapable, a Government which had been guilty of the reckless extravagance and ever present boodling which characterizes the "People's" Party would bring Newfoundland to that niche of Prosperity and Independence which we all hoped for. He thought not; he hoped the people would stand by them in the fight for clean government and that on the 30th of October Ellis, Cowan and Scott would poll a bigger vote than St. John's West had ever achieved in the representatives of the past.

Upon the request of the chairman, Mr. Cowan then rose to speak, but for many minutes it was worse than useless, cheer after cheer reverberated through the building. The rafters rang with tremendous applause, the trumpet note of victory. For over an hour in language most impressive and convincing he dealt with the issues at stake; one by one he took up the points outlined in the Manifesto of Sir Robert Bond. The exhausted state of our finances; the incompetency displayed in the railway contract; the various land scandals; the broken pledges and bluff of the Morris platform. The agricultural fizzle and the educational policy, all received his minute consideration and criticism.

In glowing terms he paid a tribute to his leader, Sir Robert Bond. He showed the insincerity of the Morris Party; when in town the Tory papers proclaimed that if you vote for Bond you vote for Coaker as Coaker controls Bond, and at one and the same time Donald Morison in Bonavista says that if you vote for Coaker you vote for Bond, since Bond controls the Party. This sort of bluff and insincerity would not go down with the people and he would ask them to do justice to themselves and the country by voting for the Liberal Party and the three Liberal Candidates, Ellis, Cowan and Scott. After cheers had been given for the Liberal Candidates and the singing of the National Anthem the meeting adjourned and the crowd proceeded to the Committee Rooms where the candidates and some of the committee addressed them on the plan of campaign. For the remaining time the candidates will address the committee and their friends every night at the rooms and deal minutely with the respective policies of Sir Robert Bond and Sir Edward Morris.

The chairman then called upon Mr. Scott, who amidst great applause and continued cheering came forward to address them. For eight years he had and he hoped faithfully represented the district of St. John's West. All his life he had been a supporter of the Liberal Party, because history had proved that only under the Government of the Liberal Party could the country attain that prominence in the Empire which was her due. Was it possible or probable that a Government which had shown itself so incapable, a Government which had been guilty of the reckless extravagance and ever present boodling which characterizes the "People's" Party would bring Newfoundland to that niche of Prosperity and Independence which we all hoped for. He thought not; he hoped the people would stand by them in the fight for clean government and that on the 30th of October Ellis, Cowan and Scott would poll a bigger vote than St. John's West had ever achieved in the representatives of the past.

Upon the request of the chairman, Mr. Cowan then rose to speak, but for many minutes it was worse than useless, cheer after cheer reverberated through the building. The rafters rang with tremendous applause, the trumpet note of victory. For over an hour in language most impressive and convincing he dealt with the issues at stake; one by one he took up the points outlined in the Manifesto of Sir Robert Bond. The exhausted state of our finances; the incompetency displayed in the railway contract; the various land scandals; the broken pledges and bluff of the Morris platform. The agricultural fizzle and the educational policy, all received his minute consideration and criticism.

In glowing terms he paid a tribute to his leader, Sir Robert Bond. He showed the insincerity of the Morris Party; when in town the Tory papers proclaimed that if you vote for Bond you vote for Coaker as Coaker controls Bond, and at one and the same time Donald Morison in Bonavista says that if you vote for Coaker you vote for Bond, since Bond controls the Party. This sort of bluff and insincerity would not go down with the people and he would ask them to do justice to themselves and the country by voting for the Liberal Party and the three Liberal Candidates, Ellis, Cowan and Scott. After cheers had been given for the Liberal Candidates and the singing of the National Anthem the meeting adjourned and the crowd proceeded to the Committee Rooms where the candidates and some of the committee addressed them on the plan of campaign. For the remaining time the candidates will address the committee and their friends every night at the rooms and deal minutely with the respective policies of Sir Robert Bond and Sir Edward Morris.

The chairman then called upon Mr. Scott, who amidst great applause and continued cheering came forward to address them. For eight years he had and he hoped faithfully represented the district of St. John's West. All his life he had been a supporter of the Liberal Party, because history had proved that only under the Government of the Liberal Party could the country attain that prominence in the Empire which was her due. Was it possible or probable that a Government which had shown itself so incapable, a Government which had been guilty of the reckless extravagance and ever present boodling which characterizes the "People's" Party would bring Newfoundland to that niche of Prosperity and Independence which we all hoped for. He thought not; he hoped the people would stand by them in the fight for clean government and that on the 30th of October Ellis, Cowan and Scott would poll a bigger vote than St. John's West had ever achieved in the representatives of the past.

Upon the request of the chairman, Mr. Cowan then rose to speak, but for many minutes it was worse than useless, cheer after cheer reverberated through the building. The rafters rang with tremendous applause, the trumpet note of victory. For over an hour in language most impressive and convincing he dealt with the issues at stake; one by one he took up the points outlined in the Manifesto of Sir Robert Bond. The exhausted state of our finances; the incompetency displayed in the railway contract; the various land scandals; the broken pledges and bluff of the Morris platform. The agricultural fizzle and the educational policy, all received his minute consideration and criticism.

In glowing terms he paid a tribute to his leader, Sir Robert Bond. He showed the insincerity of the Morris Party; when in town the Tory papers proclaimed that if you vote for Bond you vote for Coaker as Coaker controls Bond, and at one and the same time Donald Morison in Bonavista says that if you vote for Coaker you vote for Bond, since Bond controls the Party. This sort of bluff and insincerity would not go down with the people and he would ask them to do justice to themselves and the country by voting for the Liberal Party and the three Liberal Candidates, Ellis, Cowan and Scott. After cheers had been given for the Liberal Candidates and the singing of the National Anthem the meeting adjourned and the crowd proceeded to the Committee Rooms where the candidates and some of the committee addressed them on the plan of campaign. For the remaining time the candidates will address the committee and their friends every night at the rooms and deal minutely with the respective policies of Sir Robert Bond and Sir Edward Morris.

The chairman then called upon Mr. Scott, who amidst great applause and continued cheering came forward to address them. For eight years he had and he hoped faithfully represented the district of St. John's West. All his life he had been a supporter of the Liberal Party, because history had proved that only under the Government of the Liberal Party could the country attain that prominence in the Empire which was her due. Was it possible or probable that a Government which had shown itself so incapable, a Government which had been guilty of the reckless extravagance and ever present boodling which characterizes the "People's" Party would bring Newfoundland to that niche of Prosperity and Independence which we all hoped for. He thought not; he hoped the people would stand by them in the fight for clean government and that on the 30th of October Ellis, Cowan and Scott would poll a bigger vote than St. John's West had ever achieved in the representatives of the past.

Upon the request of the chairman, Mr. Cowan then rose to speak, but for many minutes it was worse than useless, cheer after cheer reverberated through the building. The rafters rang with tremendous applause, the trumpet note of victory. For over an hour in language most impressive and convincing he dealt with the issues at stake; one by one he took up the points outlined in the Manifesto of Sir Robert Bond. The exhausted state of our finances; the incompetency displayed in the railway contract; the various land scandals; the broken pledges and bluff of the Morris platform. The agricultural fizzle and the educational policy, all received his minute consideration and criticism.

In glowing terms he paid a tribute to his leader, Sir Robert Bond. He showed the insincerity of the Morris Party; when in town the Tory papers proclaimed that if you vote for Bond you vote for Coaker as Coaker controls Bond, and at one and the same time Donald Morison in Bonavista says that if you vote for Coaker you vote for Bond, since Bond controls the Party. This sort of bluff and insincerity would not go down with the people and he would ask them to do justice to themselves and the country by voting for the Liberal Party and the three Liberal Candidates, Ellis, Cowan and Scott. After cheers had been given for the Liberal Candidates and the singing of the National Anthem the meeting adjourned and the crowd proceeded to the Committee Rooms where the candidates and some of the committee addressed them on the plan of campaign. For the remaining time the candidates will address the committee and their friends every night at the rooms and deal minutely with the respective policies of Sir Robert Bond and Sir Edward Morris.

The chairman then called upon Mr. Scott, who amidst great applause and continued cheering came forward to address them. For eight years he had and he hoped faithfully represented the district of St. John's West. All his life he had been a supporter of the Liberal Party, because history had proved that only under the Government of the Liberal Party could the country attain that prominence in the Empire which was her due. Was it possible or probable that a Government which had shown itself so incapable, a Government which had been guilty of the reckless extravagance and ever present boodling which characterizes the "People's" Party would bring Newfoundland to that niche of Prosperity and Independence which we all hoped for. He thought not; he hoped the people would stand by them in the fight for clean government and that on the 30th of October Ellis, Cowan and Scott would poll a bigger vote than St. John's West had ever achieved in the representatives of the past.

Upon the request of the chairman, Mr. Cowan then rose to speak, but for many minutes it was worse than useless, cheer after cheer reverberated through the building. The rafters rang with tremendous applause, the trumpet note of victory. For over an hour in language most impressive and convincing he dealt with the issues at stake; one by one he took up the points outlined in the Manifesto of Sir Robert Bond. The exhausted state of our finances; the incompetency displayed in the railway contract; the various land scandals; the broken pledges and bluff of the Morris platform. The agricultural fizzle and the educational policy, all received his minute consideration and criticism.

In glowing terms he paid a tribute to his leader, Sir Robert Bond. He showed the insincerity of the Morris Party; when in town the Tory papers proclaimed that if you vote for Bond you vote for Coaker as Coaker controls Bond, and at one and the same time Donald Morison in Bonavista says that if you vote for Coaker you vote for Bond, since Bond controls the Party. This sort of bluff and insincerity would not go down with the people and he would ask them to do justice to themselves and the country by voting for the Liberal Party and the three Liberal Candidates, Ellis, Cowan and Scott. After cheers had been given for the Liberal Candidates and the singing of the National Anthem the meeting adjourned and the crowd proceeded to the Committee Rooms where the candidates and some of the committee addressed them on the plan of campaign. For the remaining time the candidates will address the committee and their friends every night at the rooms and deal minutely with the respective policies of Sir Robert Bond and Sir Edward Morris.

The chairman then called upon Mr. Scott, who amidst great applause and continued cheering came forward to address them. For eight years he had and he hoped faithfully represented the district of St. John's West. All his life he had been a supporter of the Liberal Party, because history had proved that only under the Government of the Liberal Party could the country attain that prominence in the Empire which was her due. Was it possible or probable that a Government which had shown itself so incapable, a Government which had been guilty of the reckless extravagance and ever present boodling which characterizes the "People's" Party would bring Newfoundland to that niche of Prosperity and Independence which we all hoped for. He thought not; he hoped the people would stand by them in the fight for clean government and that on the 30th of October Ellis, Cowan and Scott would poll a bigger vote than St. John's West had ever achieved in the representatives of the past.

Upon the request of the chairman, Mr. Cowan then rose to speak, but for many minutes it was worse than useless, cheer after cheer reverberated through the building. The rafters rang with tremendous applause, the trumpet note of victory. For over an hour in language most impressive and convincing he dealt with the issues at stake; one by one he took up the points outlined in the Manifesto of Sir Robert Bond. The exhausted state of our finances; the incompetency displayed in the railway contract; the various land scandals; the broken pledges and bluff of the Morris platform. The agricultural fizzle and the educational policy, all received his minute consideration and criticism.

In glowing terms he paid a tribute to his leader, Sir Robert Bond. He showed the insincerity of the Morris Party; when in town the Tory papers proclaimed that if you vote for Bond you vote for Coaker as Coaker controls Bond, and at one and the same time Donald Morison in Bonavista says that if you vote for Coaker you vote for Bond, since Bond controls the Party. This sort of bluff and insincerity would not go down with the people and he would ask them to do justice to themselves and the country by voting for the Liberal Party and the three Liberal Candidates, Ellis, Cowan and Scott. After cheers had been given for the Liberal Candidates and the singing of the National Anthem the meeting adjourned and the crowd proceeded to the Committee Rooms where the candidates and some of the committee addressed them on the plan of campaign. For the remaining time the candidates will address the committee and their friends every night at the rooms and deal minutely with the respective policies of Sir Robert Bond and Sir Edward Morris.

G. Knowling.
EAST END.
CENTRAL
WEST END
STORES.

SPECIAL SALE

G. Knowling.
EAST END.
CENTRAL
WEST END STORES.

BLANKETS.

We have just received 107 pairs of special Woollen Blankets direct from mills at special concession in price to clear, which enables us to offer a

A SPLENDID WOOLLEN BLANKET
AT A PRICE

Far Below Ordinary Values.

To those that know the comfort and lifelong wearing virtues of good Wool Blankets it is not necessary to explain the merits of this really splendid and unusual pure wool opportunity. One only wants to examine them to be convinced at once of their value and splendid wearing and warmth without weight properties.

WOOLLEN

Blanket

BARGAIN.

A beautiful, soft, special value Woollen Blanket; wonderful wearing qualities, delightfully warm.

$4.25

per pair.

We could only secure about sixty pairs of these splendid bargains; their regular price would be about $6.50.

WOOLLEN

Blanket

BARCAIN.

Strength, durability and comfort, a marvel of cheapness for such high grade goods.

$3.00

per pair.

We could only secure about 30 pairs of these specials; the regular price would be about $4.50.

We have also received a large stock of Bed Spreads, Eider Quilts, Wadded Quilts, Cotton Blankets, Wool Blankets, Colored Blankets.

East End,