Ash Barrel Gifts.

By RUTH CAMERON.

usefulness to bring up sooner or later in the ash barrel.

Who has not received legions of such presents?

Who has not written a gracious thank note for some useless bit of truck which she knew did not represent any real thought on the donor's part, or any attempt to fill a need?

Who has not sighed as she dusted the "feckless" bits of bric-a-brac, who has not fumed as she put in order the impractical bits of feminine finery with which past Christmases have filled her bureau drawer?

And who has not felt guilty, as, after dutifully keeping the unused, unenjoyed article about her for a conventional period, she finally carried it up the stairs and left it to gather dust in the attic until another cleaning day should see it carried down into its ignominious grave, the ash barrel?

Two hatpin holders made out of test-tubes and much ribbon (I can use) although like everyone else whom I have consulted on the subject, I prefer a pin cushion, but I have had five given me during the last few years, a skirt hanger so befuddled with blue forget-me-nots that it was distastefully impractical, and a silver roller blotter on which the blotting paper was bad that I had to recopy any letter on which I thoughtlessly used it, went up into the garret on my last house-cleaning. There were two or three other articles which I started to take to be reneged on because they were such recent gifts that I could not quite bear to throw them away.

Now, nobody needs to give ash barrel gifts.

Isn't a matter of expense at all. It's just a question of thought and intelligence. A quarter will buy a nice handkerchief or one of those expensive but artistic little frames—both, things of which one seldom has too many. And if you have but a few cents to spend, isn't it better to content yourself with a pretty card than to concoct or purchase some useless and inartistic trifle which will embarrass the recipient by its utter utility.

"What's that thing you're making to be used for?" a man once asked his wife.

"Oh that's not to use," she answered. "That's a Christmas present."

One can easily guess the final destination of that present.

"Chinese" Wilson-- Plant Hunter.

"Chinese" Wilson, as the result of four journeys during the last fourteen years into Western China, has brought into the gardens of Europe and America more species of hardy trees and shrubs than were known there before," writes Leonard Barron in the "World's Work."

What He Has Done.

"He has doubled the number of distinct species of woody plants capable of being grown outdoors in that garden spot of the world, old England. He has sent to the Arnold Arboretum, near Boston, Mass. (where they are now growing), more different and distinct trees and shrubs than are to be found native in the cool, temperate parts of Eastern North America. He has collected in the interior of China within the last few years, and successfully introduced into cultivation, more new plants than any other plant hunter who ever went into the unexplored regions of the world in the quest of new things. His travels into unknown lands, in his search for specimens and seeds, compare with the travels of the gold seekers in the age of Queen Elizabeth.

"Mr. E. H. Wilson is a young man, yet, hardly forty years old. At present he is quietly at work at the Arnold Arboretum straightening out the mass of data he gathered in China. But he is contemplating another exploration in unknown parts, but it will not be China. He has two ambitions in life—to write an authoritative book that will live as 'Wilson's Western China,' and second to go down in memory as 'Chinese Wilson.'

"Twenty years ago, which was before Mr. Wilson began his travels, it was the general opinion among horticulturists that practically all the plants of any value to gardens in England and the United States had already been brought into cultivation. Of course, it was known that here and there a stray plant of merit existed. No one dreamed that an effort to recover one or two of these plants would work revolution in horticultural and botanical matters.

"At one of the International Horticultural Congresses, held in London about twenty years ago, I heard Mr. (now Sir) Harry Veitch, perhaps the greatest horticulturist in England, declare that from that time onward for new plants man would have to depend upon hybridisation. Yet it was that same gentleman, as the head of a world-famous nursery, who a few years later sent Mr. Wilson on his first voyage of discovery.

"This journey to China was undertaken for the purpose of bringing back just one tree. The missionaries and some other official travellers had spoken of its existence. It seemed to be a most remarkable tree—a kind of glorified dogwood. Mr. Veitch decided that his establishment, always throughout its history famous as a new plant introducer, must have it. 'That Davidia,' Mr. Wilson told me, 'was the cause of my first journey into China, and I got it.'

From Kew Gardens.

"There was no experienced 'collector' to be had. One must be made. Among the young men at the Government gardens at Kew, the nearest counterpart of our Agricultural Department at Washington, was an Ernest H. Wilson. He had received a practical training in his craft in the usual way—by working in florists' and nursery establishments—and had 'entered Kew' as a journeyman. He was ambitious to learn; from the very first he was a student as well as a worker. Young Wilson was thirsty for exact knowledge; he studied overtime and won a scholarship in the Royal College of Science, South Kensington. The course was just completed and he was hopeful of his chosen profession.

"The authorities at Kew recommended Mr. Wilson to Mr. Veitch. No one else seemed to combine the two requisites—practical gardening and a training in science. There was one interview—and the matter was settled; and so began a most romantic search for new trees and flowers.

Household Notes

In planning a house, the den for the wife should not be forgotten. It is quite as necessary as that for her husband.

Sew a loop to the inside of a hat where it will not show. If you would like to be sure of your hat staying on its hook.

Broom bags of cotton flannel or old underwear should be made with draw strings to tie the securely about the broom handle.

If you hem your table napkins it will be found a great help if the linen is hemmed at each end and washed before cutting.

A two or three pound crock of fine butter is one of the presents a farmer's wife will find very acceptable to her friends.

Pour boiling water over the raisins and let them stand a minute; then pour off and you can pinch the seeds out at each end.

The cellar for winter storage should be neither too dry nor too wet. If there are two rooms, one should be warmer than the other. Granulated sugar makes a coarse grained cake; powdered sugar a fine one, but a moist, light brown sugar is one of the best kinds to use.

Hothouse flowers, like chrysanthemums, can be kept fresh for days if the water in the vase is changed and the room is not kept hot.

In cleaning windows, first remove the dirt with hot, soapy water, then wipe the panes with a paraffine cloth and polish with a piece of paper.

When making cake, save a little of your cake mixture and fill it with raisins and currants or nuts. Then bake in patty pans for the children.

To keep celery fresh and crisp, prepare it for the table, then wash an old piece of clean linen in ice cold water and place the celery on the ice. It will keep a week.

A bag of dried lavender from the garden is a delightful Christmas gift to a friend. Dried rose leaves or lemon verbena or rosemary are equally good.

Salads are a very important part of the diet—even all winter. The cooler and simpler they are, the better, because they are usually combined with rich heavy foods.

Bread flour should always be used for bread, and pastry flour for pastry, for the two are quite different things. The first should absorb the most water and the second the least.

To break a glass jar cleanly, soak a cord in turpentine and tie it around the jar or bottle where you wish to have it broken. Fill the glass with cold water up to the string and set fire to the string.

The beautiful imported handkerchief cases for carrying handkerchiefs are much more satisfactory if stiffened with a card slightly passed and covered with satin. If desired, this can be perfumed with sachet.

Only a very slightly warm iron must be used on flannels. It is said that wiping the iron over with kerosene will prevent scorching. There is no known remedy for scorching on flannels, because the fibers have been destroyed by the heat.

Date balls for the holidays are made of three cupfuls of dates, chopped and stoned, a cupful of black walnut meats, chopped, a teaspoonful of ginger syrup and one of chopped preserved ginger. Run through a chopper make into balls and roll in cocoanut.

To make orange food, wash and dry a dozen fine oranges; rub the rinds with ¼ pound cut sugar and put into a double boiler with the orange juice. Add three eggs well beaten and a pint of thin sweet cream. Stir until thickened, then chill. Serve in glasses.

Sew a shield-shaped piece of material under the arms of corset covers, and they will last much longer.

Had Itching Piles For 27 Years

Often Laid Up for Days at a Time—
A Wonderful Tribute to Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Few people were ever more enthusiastic in praising Dr. Chase's Ointment than the writer of this letter. When you read the description of his case you will not wonder why.

Mr. John Johnson, Coleman, Alta., writes: "Three years ago I was cured of blind, itching piles of 27 years' standing by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. I used to think that death would be the only relief I could ever get from the terrible misery of piles. Often I was laid up for three days at a time, and at other times worked when I should have been in bed."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is worth sixty dollars a box instead of sixty cents. I am a different man since using it. I am farming all the time, and never miss a day. Works fall to express my much about it as it deserves. Anyone doubting this can write direct to me."

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.
