Even before his death Bishop Fleming had the consolation of seeing the good effects of his work, and he wrote in glowing terms of what had been done by the Nuns since their advent into the Colony. "Hundreds of children" he says, "nay, thousands are annually sent forth from their schools, trained in the highest principles of virtue and honesty, conferciples of virtue and honesty an ring on our country the blessing incomparably rich, producing a race of Military Road, and other Sisters of nothers of families which Newfoundland may be proud of as having no

With how much greater force and truth could these words be used today after the lapse of seventy-five years than when they were spoken by the great and zealous Bishop. It is permissible to recall thus briefly the glorious traditions of the Presentation Order on this unique occasion when four of its veteran Nuns are celebrating their Golden Jubilee. In the great and glorious work which has been accomplished by the Presentation Order in Newfoundland the four venerable full share. They complete to-day the work of fifty golden years' work in different parts of the country, work unknown it may be except to their Sisters in the Cloister. To-day they see the completion of fifty years filled with days devoted to the honor and religion all individuality is lost, and ceive acording to the time honored traditions of the Order the mystical crown of their fifty years of labour. When they look back to-day in retrospection over the years that have passed to the day when in the fervour of youth they knelt to receive the White Habit of Religion and to that other day some years later when they received the Habit of Profession they will remember that the "Veni coronaberis" (Come, thou shalt be crowned) of their Reception and the "Veni, accipe coronam" (Come, receive the crown) of their Profession find their partial realization to-day. To-day particularly will their thoughts bring them back to that far-off morning when they spoke their solemn vows before the Altar of God fifty golden years ago. They will hear again but with a new and added meaning the strains that greeted them as they moved towards the Altar, they will hear again the "Veni, coronaberis" of their Reception and the "Veni, accipe coronam" of their Profession. Not yet, however, have they received their final crown. The beautiful promises of their Reception and crown that awaits them when their life's work here is done." Solemn High Mass was then sung by His Lordship, Rt. Rev. Bishop March, (Harbor Grace); Rev. Dr. J. W. Carter, (Cathedral), acting as eacon and Rev. Fr. Dee as sub-deacon, Rev. F. McGrath, (Bell Island), as
