

Prepared from the finest Virginia leaf procurable, GEM Cigarettes remain unequalled in flavour, purity and reputation.

Imperial Tobacco Co.
Newfoundland, Ltd.

Positively
None
Better

oct 26, 30.

Now let me see. Was it raining chestnuts in the last story? Well, I guess it was, for the Ragged Rabbit Giant was shaking the big chestnut tree, sending down to the ground such a shower of burs and nuts, that had dear Uncle Lucky been standing beneath his precious wedding stovepipe hat would have been beaten in. But he wasn't. No, sir, he was safe in his Savings Bank in Rabbitville.

"There, guess you'll find enough to fill all the sacks and bags you have with you," exclaimed the Ragged Rabbit Giant, seeing that not a nut remained on the many branches. "Pack the burs in the bags. They dry and open if you store them away in the attic. That's what we used to do when I was a boy."

"Dear me," sighed timid Cousin Cottontail, from a safe distance. "The Ragged Rabbit Giant seems very friendly." However, she stood still where she was, her five little cotton-tails gathering close about her.

"Don't be afraid of me," laughed the Ragged Rabbit Giant, thrusting his big hand into his coat pocket. The next minute he carefully, almost tenderly, drew out his pretty yellow bird. "My little bird, isn't afraid of me. Why should a little bunny be?"

Perching on his shoulder, the tiny yellow bird began to sing:

"Although his hand is big and strong, He often sings a lullaby. A tender, plaintive little song When stars are shining in the sky."

As the pretty bird finished, Cousin Cottontail and all the little rabbits and bunnies gathered around the Ragged Rabbit Giant. They felt that a big man who was gentle with a bird, would be kind to an animal. Yes, sir, they were right. For people who love birds and animals are kind to one another. Remember that, little reader of my stories. You, too, must be kind to all God's creature in feathered or furry coat.

"Now I must be going," said the big giant. "Would you like me to shake another tree before I leave?"

"I'd like to take home some beech nuts to mother," tried the little rabbit, all of a sudden remembering how friendly.

"Well, here goes," laughed the Ragged Rabbit Giant, grasping a beech tree near the top. "Look out for the nuts," Pitter, patter, down they came, the careful old giant taking pains not to hurt the beautiful crown of green that topped the tree. Many of the brown, spiny husks were open, thanks to Jack Frost's nimble fingers, and although the beech nut is small, so small that often the wind scatters them in all directions, it is very sweet.

"Now, goodbye," laughed the big giant, raising his tattered hat, and away he strode through the valley, and up the mountain side in his seven league boots, back to his Tip Top, Sky High Castle, leaving the happy bunny boys and rabbit girls to fill their baskets. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Perching on his shoulder, the tiny yellow bird began to sing.

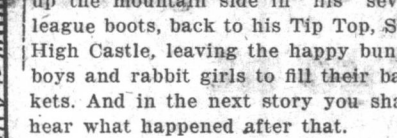

Richard Hudnut
Three Flowers Face Powder

The Face Powder that is Different. Having the Particularly Desirable Quality of Adhesiveness and being Gained with the Delicacy and Appealingness of These Flowers. In All Popular Shows.

"I say, Bob," asked an acquaintance "why did the foreman sack you yesterday?"

"Well, here goes," laughed the Ragged Rabbit Giant, grasping a beech tree near the top. "Look out for the nuts," Pitter, patter, down they came, the careful old giant taking pains not to hurt the beautiful crown of green that topped the tree. Many of the brown, spiny husks were open, thanks to Jack Frost's nimble fingers, and although the beech nut is small, so small that often the wind scatters them in all directions, it is very sweet.

"Now, goodbye," laughed the big giant, raising his tattered hat, and away he strode through the valley, and up the mountain side in his seven league boots, back to his Tip Top, Sky High Castle, leaving the happy bunny boys and rabbit girls to fill their baskets. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Perching on his shoulder, the tiny yellow bird began to sing.

"Although his hand is big and strong, He often sings a lullaby. A tender, plaintive little song When stars are shining in the sky."

As the pretty bird finished, Cousin Cottontail and all the little rabbits and bunnies gathered around the Ragged Rabbit Giant. They felt that a big man who was gentle with a bird, would be kind to an animal. Yes, sir, they were right. For people who love

birds and animals are kind to one another. Remember that, little reader of my stories. You, too, must be kind to all God's creature in feathered or furry coat.

"Now I must be going," said the big giant. "Would you like me to shake another tree before I leave?"

"I'd like to take home some beech nuts to mother," tried the little rabbit, all of a sudden remembering how

friendly.

"Well, here goes," laughed the Ragged Rabbit Giant, grasping a beech tree near the top. "Look out for the nuts," Pitter, patter, down they came, the careful old giant taking pains not to hurt the beautiful crown of green that topped the tree. Many of the brown, spiny husks were open, thanks to Jack Frost's nimble fingers, and although the beech nut is small, so small that often the wind scatters them in all directions, it is very sweet.

"Now, goodbye," laughed the big giant, raising his tattered hat, and away he strode through the valley, and up the mountain side in his seven league boots, back to his Tip Top, Sky High Castle, leaving the happy bunny boys and rabbit girls to fill their baskets. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Perching on his shoulder, the tiny yellow bird began to sing.

"Although his hand is big and strong, He often sings a lullaby. A tender, plaintive little song When stars are shining in the sky."

As the pretty bird finished, Cousin Cottontail and all the little rabbits and bunnies gathered around the Ragged Rabbit Giant. They felt that a big man who was gentle with a bird, would be kind to an animal. Yes, sir, they were right. For people who love

birds and animals are kind to one another. Remember that, little reader of my stories. You, too, must be kind to all God's creature in feathered or furry coat.

"Now I must be going," said the big giant. "Would you like me to shake another tree before I leave?"

"I'd like to take home some beech nuts to mother," tried the little rabbit, all of a sudden remembering how

friendly.

"Well, here goes," laughed the Ragged Rabbit Giant, grasping a beech tree near the top. "Look out for the nuts," Pitter, patter, down they came, the careful old giant taking pains not to hurt the beautiful crown of green that topped the tree. Many of the brown, spiny husks were open, thanks to Jack Frost's nimble fingers, and although the beech nut is small, so small that often the wind scatters them in all directions, it is very sweet.

"Now, goodbye," laughed the big giant, raising his tattered hat, and away he strode through the valley, and up the mountain side in his seven league boots, back to his Tip Top, Sky High Castle, leaving the happy bunny boys and rabbit girls to fill their baskets. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Perching on his shoulder, the tiny yellow bird began to sing.

"Although his hand is big and strong, He often sings a lullaby. A tender, plaintive little song When stars are shining in the sky."

As the pretty bird finished, Cousin Cottontail and all the little rabbits and bunnies gathered around the Ragged Rabbit Giant. They felt that a big man who was gentle with a bird, would be kind to an animal. Yes, sir, they were right. For people who love

birds and animals are kind to one another. Remember that, little reader of my stories. You, too, must be kind to all God's creature in feathered or furry coat.

"Now I must be going," said the big giant. "Would you like me to shake another tree before I leave?"

"I'd like to take home some beech nuts to mother," tried the little rabbit, all of a sudden remembering how

friendly.

"Well, here goes," laughed the Ragged Rabbit Giant, grasping a beech tree near the top. "Look out for the nuts," Pitter, patter, down they came, the careful old giant taking pains not to hurt the beautiful crown of green that topped the tree. Many of the brown, spiny husks were open, thanks to Jack Frost's nimble fingers, and although the beech nut is small, so small that often the wind scatters them in all directions, it is very sweet.

"Now, goodbye," laughed the big giant, raising his tattered hat, and away he strode through the valley, and up the mountain side in his seven league boots, back to his Tip Top, Sky High Castle, leaving the happy bunny boys and rabbit girls to fill their baskets. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Perching on his shoulder, the tiny yellow bird began to sing.

"Although his hand is big and strong, He often sings a lullaby. A tender, plaintive little song When stars are shining in the sky."

As the pretty bird finished, Cousin Cottontail and all the little rabbits and bunnies gathered around the Ragged Rabbit Giant. They felt that a big man who was gentle with a bird, would be kind to an animal. Yes, sir, they were right. For people who love

birds and animals are kind to one another. Remember that, little reader of my stories. You, too, must be kind to all God's creature in feathered or furry coat.

"Now I must be going," said the big giant. "Would you like me to shake another tree before I leave?"

"I'd like to take home some beech nuts to mother," tried the little rabbit, all of a sudden remembering how

friendly.

"Well, here goes," laughed the Ragged Rabbit Giant, grasping a beech tree near the top. "Look out for the nuts," Pitter, patter, down they came, the careful old giant taking pains not to hurt the beautiful crown of green that topped the tree. Many of the brown, spiny husks were open, thanks to Jack Frost's nimble fingers, and although the beech nut is small, so small that often the wind scatters them in all directions, it is very sweet.

"Now, goodbye," laughed the big giant, raising his tattered hat, and away he strode through the valley, and up the mountain side in his seven league boots, back to his Tip Top, Sky High Castle, leaving the happy bunny boys and rabbit girls to fill their baskets. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Perching on his shoulder, the tiny yellow bird began to sing.

"Although his hand is big and strong, He often sings a lullaby. A tender, plaintive little song When stars are shining in the sky."

As the pretty bird finished, Cousin Cottontail and all the little rabbits and bunnies gathered around the Ragged Rabbit Giant. They felt that a big man who was gentle with a bird, would be kind to an animal. Yes, sir, they were right. For people who love

birds and animals are kind to one another. Remember that, little reader of my stories. You, too, must be kind to all God's creature in feathered or furry coat.

"Now I must be going," said the big giant. "Would you like me to shake another tree before I leave?"

"I'd like to take home some beech nuts to mother," tried the little rabbit, all of a sudden remembering how

friendly.

"Well, here goes," laughed the Ragged Rabbit Giant, grasping a beech tree near the top. "Look out for the nuts," Pitter, patter, down they came, the careful old giant taking pains not to hurt the beautiful crown of green that topped the tree. Many of the brown, spiny husks were open, thanks to Jack Frost's nimble fingers, and although the beech nut is small, so small that often the wind scatters them in all directions, it is very sweet.

"Now, goodbye," laughed the big giant, raising his tattered hat, and away he strode through the valley, and up the mountain side in his seven league boots, back to his Tip Top, Sky High Castle, leaving the happy bunny boys and rabbit girls to fill their baskets. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Perching on his shoulder, the tiny yellow bird began to sing.

"Although his hand is big and strong, He often sings a lullaby. A tender, plaintive little song When stars are shining in the sky."

As the pretty bird finished, Cousin Cottontail and all the little rabbits and bunnies gathered around the Ragged Rabbit Giant. They felt that a big man who was gentle with a bird, would be kind to an animal. Yes, sir, they were right. For people who love

birds and animals are kind to one another. Remember that, little reader of my stories. You, too, must be kind to all God's creature in feathered or furry coat.

"Now I must be going," said the big giant. "Would you like me to shake another tree before I leave?"

"I'd like to take home some beech nuts to mother," tried the little rabbit, all of a sudden remembering how

friendly.

"Well, here goes," laughed the Ragged Rabbit Giant, grasping a beech tree near the top. "Look out for the nuts," Pitter, patter, down they came, the careful old giant taking pains not to hurt the beautiful crown of green that topped the tree. Many of the brown, spiny husks were open, thanks to Jack Frost's nimble fingers, and although the beech nut is small, so small that often the wind scatters them in all directions, it is very sweet.

"Now, goodbye," laughed the big giant, raising his tattered hat, and away he strode through the valley, and up the mountain side in his seven league boots, back to his Tip Top, Sky High Castle, leaving the happy bunny boys and rabbit girls to fill their baskets. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Perching on his shoulder, the tiny yellow bird began to sing.

"Although his hand is big and strong, He often sings a lullaby. A tender, plaintive little song When stars are shining in the sky."

As the pretty bird finished, Cousin Cottontail and all the little rabbits and bunnies gathered around the Ragged Rabbit Giant. They felt that a big man who was gentle with a bird, would be kind to an animal. Yes, sir, they were right. For people who love

Ministers Hope Canada to Share Pact Obligations

BRITISH BELIEVE OTTAWA SIGNATURE WILL BREAK DOWN OPPOSITION.

LONDON, Oct. 29.—While Canada and the other Dominions agree to share in the obligations of the Security Pact? This is the question which Ministers are asking with some anxiety, since they believe that if they can persuade Canada to assume them they will break the back of the opposition to the pact, and refute the charge of endangering the unity of the Empire.

No definite decision on the point is expected from Canada and Australia just now, owing to the elections, but it is confidently believed that New Zealand will sign the pact while the attitude of South Africa is regarded as highly doubtful. Opponents of the pact are emphasizing the fact that the Dominions do not realize how the Pact affects them, and that when they do they will have a great deal to say. They assert also that Canada cannot escape the Pact, even if she wishes to.

If Britain, for instance, goes to war because of a sudden violation of the Pact Canada, as a member of the British Commonwealth, will be automatically at war, whether she signs the Pact or not, since from the international point of view she cannot contract out of war without leaving the Empire. These opponents say that no doubt Canada will help Britain in the same spirit that they did in 1914, but they urge that Canada ought to realize the extent of her obligations under the Pact.

Diplomatic Eyewash.

Then, further, if in the future the League endorses war, Canada, as a member of the League, is bound to contribute her quota, so that either way Canada will be involved as well as the other Dominions, and they say that this is perilous for the unity of the Empire. In every European war the exact origin is never quite clear, and the idea that the Dominions, by not being asked to sign are not included in the Pact, is mere diplomatic eye-wash. Opponents of the Pact also laugh at the idea that after Britain has gone to war, because of sudden aggression, the Council of the League can then sit down and determine who the aggressor is. Once war was started it would be impossible for the League to adjudicate the issue.

Officials of the Foreign Office, questioned on these points, say that the basic idea of the Pact is peace, and not war, and they say that Canada herself has to decide whether she will come in or stay out.

Would Like Signature.

There is no obligation, they say, on Canada or any other Dominion as to whether she will sign or not, but they admit that if war broke out it would be most difficult to keep Canada out.

"We are not troubling just now about war, or the possibilities of war," said a Foreign Office head, "since we know that if war breaks out Canada will make her decision as she did in the last war, and since we only go to war in case of clear and violent breaking of the Pact there will never be the slightest doubt who is the aggressor."

"We would like to see Canada sign the Pact, but we do not think she need have the slightest fear about the obligations she will have to assume for a single moment, and we will certainly take an early opportunity of explaining this fully to her. Yet the decision rests entirely with her and she is fully cognizant of our wishes in the matter."

Meanwhile, there is much speculation here as to whether, when the Pact is ratified, Britain will have to proceed to make military preparations for either France or Germany, or for both, in case of aggression that leads to open hostilities. This, of course, is pure speculation at present since the chief concern of the Government now is to proceed towards disarmament.

Wear a Flanders Poppy on Remembrance Day.
oct 29, 31

Cook's £11,000 a Year
oct 29, 31

M. da Luca, chef to Lord Treagh, who has just died, is said to have been one of the best paid culinary artists in the world, but even so his salary must have fallen far short of that enjoyed by M. Eugene Kratz, chef to the late Czar of Russia. Kratz had complete control of all the kitchens in all the palaces of the Imperial family, and made a tour of inspection six times a year, besides on special occasions, personally preparing dishes for his master's table. His social rank was equal to that of an army general, and his salary was £11,000 per annum!

Wear a Flanders Poppy on Remembrance Day.
oct 29, 31

In all the French models and comes one notes a distinctly up-in-the-front movement.

CONFEDERATION LIFE.
aug 17, 3mo

Excellent for street or country wear is the coat dress of tweed worn over a heavy silk slip of contrasting color.

The skirt of a frock of black crepe de chine.

"Well," was the reply, "a foreman is one who stands around and watches his men work."

Thin gold kid is used in trimming a two-piece frock of brown satin, with Chinese collar and long, full sleeves.

"I know; but what's that got to do with it?"

I Have Changed
My Trim of Jaeger
Goods

which I have been showing at the Fair, during the past week

So that I might be able to display the various lines of Jaeger Underwear, Hosiery and other Wool Goods for men which are so seasonable just now.

If you've not got time to visit the store, meet me at the Fair where I will be very pleased to give you any information regarding Jaeger, and incidentally take your order for JAEGER Fall and Winter Wool Goods.

They will be delivered at your home within the hour.

You Know There are None Better.

Kearney's

THE JAEGER MAN.

oct 27, 17

Free! Free!
YOUR CHOICE
One All-Wool
RIVERSIDE MOTOR RUG or 4-lbs. of
RIVERSIDE KNITTING YARN

To the person forecasting the correct or nearest correct number of people visiting the Industrial Fair the following day, we will give one of the above prizes.

THERE ARE NO STRINGS TO THIS OFFER.
When you purchase your admittance ticket at the rink, you will receive a card, which you will fill in and deposit in a box provided for that purpose, at the RIVERSIDE MILLS BOOTH.

Make sure you receive one of these cards, and write your name and address plainly, as prize will be sent to address written on card.

In the event of two or more making the correct or nearest correct forecast, the prize will be awarded to first one drawn. Read this advertisement every day, as the winner of each day's forecast will be announced in this space, also at the rink. You may be the lucky winner.

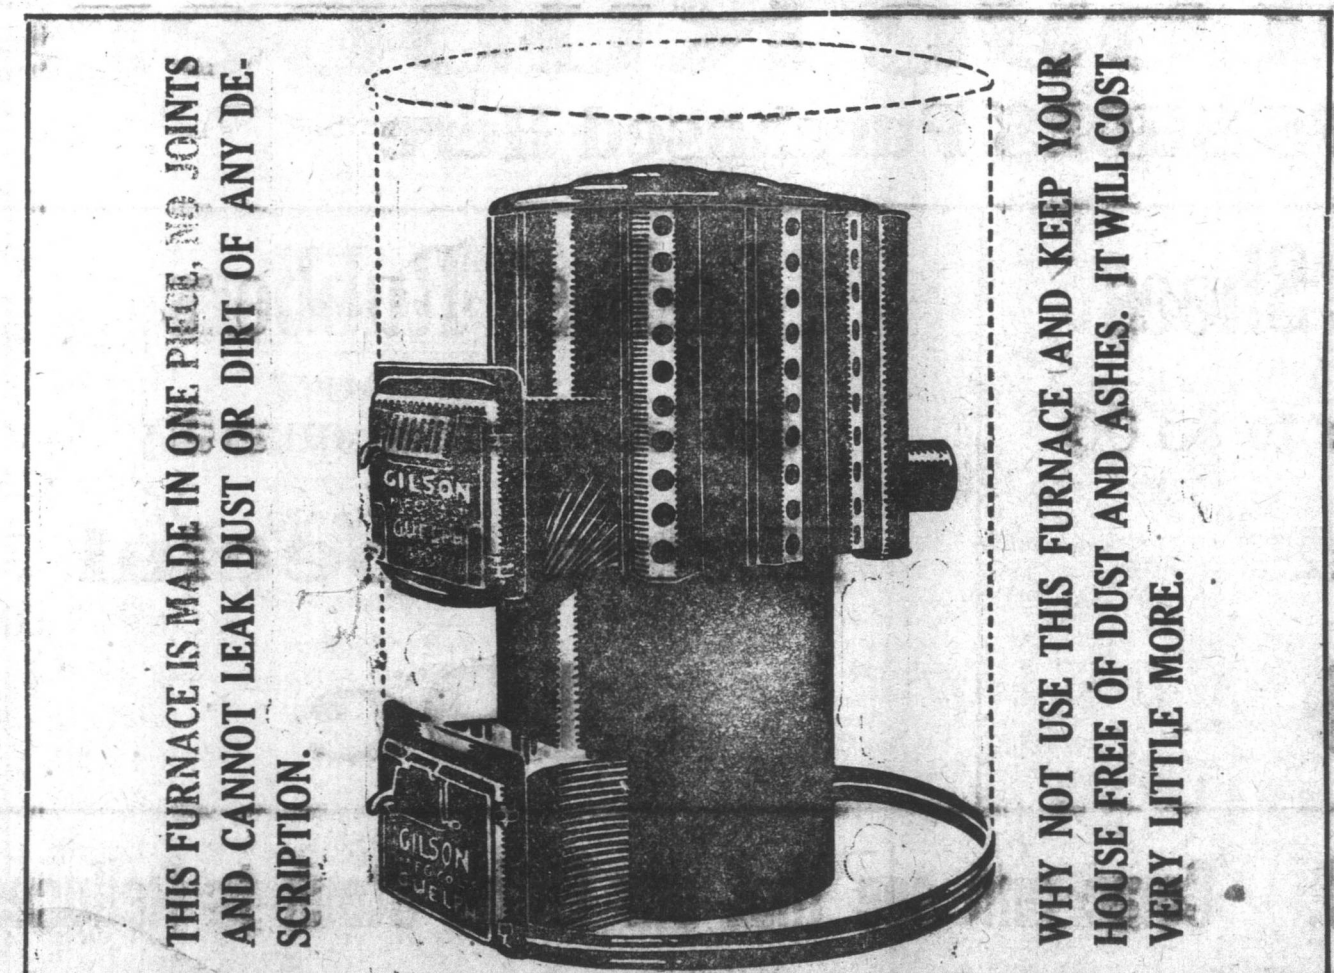

Winner of Prize, Tuesday, A. Thompson, 85 King's Road.

Winner of Prize, Wednesday, M. L. Bendell, P.O. Box 1015, City.

The Riverside Woolen Mills Ltd.
Riverside, Brigus, Nfld.

oct 27, 41

GET OUR PRICES
ON THIS GILSON MAGIC HOT AIR FURNACE

This Furnace is Suitable for Homes, Stores, Churches and Schools, etc.

GEAR & CO., Ltd., 340 Water Street

oct 28, 30, 17

"At the Sh
and Sa

Br
Fire
Cook

The very British Po
ful Primro Hygenic.
FAIR.

Leave y
BOOTH on

S. Ric

Phone 1476

(Oppos

oct 19, 2, m. 13

The Mari

THE HOME

Professional

Prices. Experi

Quality of Platwork tak

your plates

Plates repair and Bridge

W. J. W.

Full Upper

Painless Extr

176 V

Phone 62.

M. S. P

(Graduate of

lege, Garre

Surgey.)

Gen

oct 8, 10, 17

Local

F

124 New dated

70 Bell

tion

35 New

Com

10 Stev

Lim

58 Har

Shoe

50 New

Shoe

195 Stan

ing

Price

Bernar

Inves

Room 12

oct 22, 10

STATU

All person

The Estate of Brigus, in t

Port de Grav

foundland, p

by required

thereof in w

the undersig

Executor of ceased on or

November, a late the said to distribute