Tired Out

"I was very poorly and could hardly get about the house. I was tired out all the time. Then I tried Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and it only took two bottles to make me feel perfectly well."—Mrs. N. S. Swinney, Princeton, Mo.

Tired when you go to bed, tired when you get up, tired all the time. Why? Your blood is impure, that's the reason. You are living on the border line of nerve exhaustion. Take Ayer's Sarsaparilla and be quickly cured.

Ask your doctor what he thinks of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. He knows all about this grand old family medicine. Follow his advice and you will be cured.

Dosing a Fowl.

Pills are a convenient form, and for poultry they never need be larger than four or five grains; but better than these pills are gelatine capsules, which my own poultry will pick up off the ground. If I want to give one of my own fowls a dose of medicine, I have only to take it into a corner by itself and throw down a raspberry-colored capsule, and the bird will pick it up of its own accord and swallow it whole. This is in reality far better than having to get a fowl and force a pill down its throat, and I want to emphasize the importance of treating a sick fowl as you would treat a sick child; do not make it worse by having a struggle every time a dose of medicine is necessary. Failing a capsule, a small pill will generally be taken without difficulty by a fowl if it is placed in the middle of a little piece of moist bread.

There is another point. Most people seem to have very crude ideas as to what constitutes a "dose" for a fowl. I come across people sometimes who think nothing of giving a large pinch of cayenne pepper to a fowl. I have known as much as a quarter of a teaspoonful to be given to one unfortunate bird. When the farmer is tempted to give cayenne pepper to his birds, let him remember that one grain of cayenne pepper makes eight doses for a full-grown fowl. The use of cayenne pepper is as an occasional—very occasional—internal irritant, the object of which is to act slightly upon the liver or to excite the digestive organs and make them a little more sensitive than usual. The folly of overdosing must be one which causes more suffering to poultry than to any other members of the animal kingdom. I can give another instance. I hear of people giving a tablespoonful of cod-liver oil to a fowl, and I always tell them that if they would give a full-grown fowl fifteen drops (that is to say, just exactly one-sixteenth of a tablespoonful) three times a day it would do a great deal more good; for the system of a fowl can only assimilate a small quantity of the chlorides and the bromides and the phosphates and the iodides in cod-liver oil, and what is given beyond that is waste, or worse than waste, for it tends to cause hypertrophy of the liver. Small doses of medicine given frequently and regularly are infinitely better than big doses given unsystematically and spasmodically.—W. M. Freeman, in American Cultivator.

The Story of Morning Tiredness

It is told by impure blood, poor digestion, sluggish liver and tired nerves. It is a warning of very serious trouble ahead, and should prompt sensible people to take a bracing tonic like Ferrozone, an energetic invigorant and re-builder. Ferrozone will give you a sharp appetite, promote good digestion and sound sleep; it will feed and energize the enfeebled organs, strengthen the nerve and vital forces and regulate the heart. Ferrozone changes that tired feeling into vigor, strength and ambition, and does it quickly. Remember the name and insist on having only Ferrozone; it's the best tonic made. Price 50c a box, or six boxes for $2.50. At Druggists or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.
