LONDON - CANADA:

JOHN CAMERON, President and

Manag. Mr.

London, Saturday, June 27.

The Brightening Outlook.

A contemporary rather exults over the difficulties that may confront Mr. Laurier and those who will be his colleagues in carrying on the administration of public affairs. No doubt there will be the usual difficulties, and these it is never wise to underestimate. But the thing to do with difficulties is to overcome them. Examples in this regard are Sir Oliver Mowat and his colleagues in the Ontario Government—and, by the way, Sir Oliver will be a member of the Laurier Administration.

The dying Government has made no such record for economy, honesty or administrative ability as will make it difficult to equal. The new Government will start out with a clean slate, a free hand, and no obligation to rush at things without careful deliberation. The people of Canada have given Mr. Laurier their confidence. They do not propose to crowd or hurry him, but on the contrary to give him whatever of time or opportunity he desires to work out his ideas for the good of our common country.

Dr. Montague did not get a majority of the votes in Haldimand. He polled 2,106; Mr. Davis, 1,513, and Mr. Bee, 707. Too bad Mr. Bee was prevailed upon to remain in the field.

The New Premier.

Old men feed upon the past, young men upon the future. A man must be judged by what he is, not by what he has done or will do. During the recent campaign Sir Charles Tupper expressed himself as at a loss to know why the country should wish on, Wilfrid Laurier as leader, who says has accomplished nothing for the country, and reject himself, who, alleges, has done so much for it. Judge doesn't pardon a murderer because he has done a kind of or two in his life; nor is a thief pardoned because he has performed formerly some acts of generosity. Only high tax governments do such things, as in the case of McCreary.

The reason why the country wished to be rid of Sir Chas. Tupper and his colleagues was because they had no assurance that what they would do, whether good or bad in itself, would not be tinged with dishonesty or dishonesty. The country did not want men who can build public works in over-abundance. "It is better for a country to be without public works than to have them, and be disgraced by their execution, as Canada has so often been in the past years of high tax government. Truth, honesty and justice are more excellent national monuments than any public works can be. Any group of ordinary business men can build the national works that Canada needs to-day, or carry out that part of the Tupperian programme relative to public works. The country wants men who will carry them out in such a way that they will not be lasting monuments, not merely of national folly, but of disgrace to the country. The man who could have prevented the public scandals which have occurred in the construction of our national works during the regime now at a close would be a man more worthy of the nation's honor than all or any of the Ministers who have built the public works in whose construction honesty, economy and national interests have been totally disregarded. The country had no assurance that under Tupper the past course of folly would cease. Under Laurier they have reasonable grounds for believing that it will.

No doubt, Walpole, looking back upon all the achievements of his long regime, could not understand why England should prefer Pitt, young and inexperienced, as her guide and leader. Walpole was a man dead to all the finer instincts of manhood, with no honor or honesty himself, and not believing in their existence in any one else. Pitt, though young and untried, had a store of courage, honor, honesty, truth and justice, and awoke England from her moral torpor and so enthused and inspired her with his own spirit, and rendered her capable of illustrious and noble deeds, that the period during which Pitt guided her destiny is perhaps the most brilliant epoch in her history.

Such is Canada's persuasion of Hon. Wilfrid Laurier. Sir Charles Tupper, still feeding on the dead past, and incapable of sympathizing or appreciating the spirit and aspirations of the Canada of 1894, wonders why Canada should desire Laurier, whose whole heart and soul are with the new generation of Canada, with their new sympathies, and new aspirations.

The work of Confederation is done. We honor the men who accomplished it. A nobler and grander work remains: the consolidation of Canada, making of her different races and religions one people, harmonious in their sympathy and objects, united in their love for the whole, tired of dissension and disunion, and determined to lay the foundations of the national life on truth, honesty, toleration and justice to all. From this standpoint Laurier is the hope of Canada. In him and in no other leader in the Dominion can be found the ground of a united, harmonious nationality. The character, disposition and religious tolerance of Laurier refute the statements and dispel the doubts of those—and they have been, and are many—who have said there can be no united Canada with two opposing races and religions.

Zellow-countrymen, do you stop to think of the greatness of this leader? Do you realize what grandeur of spirit, nobility of purpose and breadth of vision it indicates for a man brought up with this environment to take the stand he has taken, and advocate the principles which he advocates? Mark the nobility and honesty of purpose that characterized him, when he passed through our Province in the recent campaign, promising you no public works, offering you no bribes to influence your verdict, appealing only to your nobler sentiments, and trusting solely to your love of truth and justice.

Contrast the nobility and grandeur of such conduct with the debauching and corrupting policy of promises and bribes carried on by his opponents. Contrast Laurier appealing to all classes, his cause so just, his sympathy so wide, that it knows no party bounds, with Tupper appealing only to the old party ties and trusting only to party adherence to sustain him. Laurier needs not tell you what he will do in the matter of public works, which largely compose the programme of his opponents. It is easy work to "do"; it is another thing to do what is right and just. Wherever public works are necessary they shall undoubtedly be built, but necessity and economy shall determine and characterize the construction, and they shall be built in the interests of the country, not in the interests of a party. Tupper represents a policy to a large extent the very opposite of this.

The Canadian people have shown that they feel that it is time disunion and race and religious prejudices should abate or cease, and they recognize that nothing but the spirit of Laurier can accomplish it. It is because of what Laurier is and represents that Canada has not desired him. Laurier represents the future, Tupper the past. Let the dead past bury its dead.

Canada will be happy yet.—Boston Herald.

Canada is happy now.

A Matrimonial Question.

While Canadians have been engrossed in the work of selecting a new Parliament and a new Government, some unusual developments have taken place in the Imperial Parliament. The House of Lords has passed to a second reading the bill legalizing marriage with a deceased wife's sister. This is equivalent to the adoption of the measure, the third reading in the Lords being regarded as a matter of form. The Prince of Wales has always been a strong advocate of the measure, voting on it on every occasion on which it has been before the Upper Chamber, and he not only voted for its adoption, but succeeded in inducing his brother, the Duke of Connaught, and his son-in-law, the Duke of Fife, to do likewise. For over twenty years, during which time the bill has over and over again been before Parliament, the Commons have carried it by a large majority, but each time it has been thrown out in the House of Lords. This opposition on the part of the Lords, spiritual and temporal, is the more remarkable when it is remembered that marriage with a deceased wife's sister is recognized, not only in every other Christian country, but also in the most important of the British colonies. It is not against the law of Canada for a man to marry his deceased wife's sister, and we have had a number of notable instances of Englishmen who came to Canada to have such a marriage carried out. The late Rev. William Morley Punshon came here for that purpose. Those who favor the "bill for the abolition of aunts," as the measure has been flippantly described in Great Britain, generally take the ground that, all other things being equal, when the mother of a young family dies, no one could more appropriately take her place as head of the household than her own sister. The measure has been long agitated and persistently opposed by the majority of the peers and bishops in the House of Lords, but it is now likely to become law, and its fearful opponents will, by and bye, wonder why the evils arising from its passage do not come to pass.

Don't swear and revile the season because you have to barter the lawn. Remember you did the same thing a few months ago when you had to shovel snow off the sidewalk.

President for Twenty Years.

When a nation secures the services of an able ruler, it certainly exhibits good sense in retaining him at its head. Such a man is President Diaz of Mexico, who has just secured his fifth nomination amid an eruption of popular enthusiasm, and with hardly a sign of opposition from any quarter. Diaz is a dictator, practically, but he gives the Mexicans the firm but mild rule which they seem to require, and in the twenty years of his sway the country has made vast strides of progress. In marked contrast with the condition of affairs which have prevailed in the South American republics has been the record of Mexico during the incumbency of President Diaz. What they have been torn with dissensions and bloodshed, Mexico has advanced steadily ahead and has not had a serious revolution. With results so satisfactory flowing from his rule, it would be a mistake to suppose Diaz aside and adopt the United States rule, which prevents the re-election of a President for a third term.

Lord Dufferin's Retirement.

It is a coincidence that the Liberal party should regain power in Canada just as the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava formally bids farewell to British official life. The Earl of Dufferin was Governor-General of Canada when the last Liberal Government held sway, and he was one of the warmest admirers of Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, the Prime Minister of that era, bearing testimony, on his defeat in 1873, to the sturdy statesman's honesty and patriotism. At that time, Lord Dufferin was a veteran in the service, and since then he has been serving the empire in almost every section of the diplomatic world. An eventful, busy life has Lord Dufferin led. He has been:

A lord-in-waiting.
Under-Secretary of State for India.
Under-Secretary of State for War.
Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Paymaster-General.

On a special mission to Egypt.

Governor-General of Canada.

Ambassador at St. Petersburg.

Ambassador at Constantinople.

Viceroy of India.

Ambassador at Rome.

Ambassador at Paris.

Nor have honors been wanting. Lord Dufferin is a K.P., G.C.B., G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., G.C.M.G., P.C., D.C.L., LL.D., and F.R.S. His Lordship has also been Chancellor of the Royal University of Ireland, Lord Rector of St. Andrew's University, and Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports and Constable of Dover.

SIR JOHN'S PROPHECY.

Berlin News.
The editor of this paper a year or so before the death of the late Sir John A. Macdonald had an interview with the great chieftain, when the latter spoke in the most prophetic manner of Mr. Laurier. He said they were the warmest personal friends, and without doubt the day would come when that gentleman would be Canada's Premier.

Warm Weather Hints.

I have generally found that the heat or the cold, the wet weather or the dry, the windy or the calm, has affected me very little if I went calmly on and made the best of it. One's work should occupy one's thoughts and hands so fully that one has no time to be troubled about surroundings of atmosphere. The busy girl is happier than the indolent girl, for the reason that the latter is taken up with something worth while.

A little caution about fans. Don't fan so vigorously that you put yourself into a heat by the exertion. Never fan the back of your friend's neck if you are sitting behind her. Fan with a gentle fan, and motion, so that waves of air strike your own face, but not so that you send icy shivers down your neighbor's spine.

On a very sultry day nothing is gained by drinking a great deal of ice-water. The more one drinks, the more thirsty one grows. A little water held in the mouth a moment, and allowed to trickle slowly down the throat, will relieve thirst more effectively than a gobletful hastily tossed off.

The question comes up every summer, how shall we keep our homes cool during the sultry months of the day? Shall we close them and shut out the heat, or simply, darken them and allow the air to come in? My way has been to open every window both at the top and at the bottom, early in the morning, flooding the house with the sweet cool air. Then, about 10 o'clock, or earlier, close the windows, except for a few inches at the bottom, and fasten shutters and blinds so that they may not open. Darken every room which you are not using until the sun goes down. But do not sit to read, sew, or practice in the dark. Use electric lights, plenty of light. When you go into the darkened rooms, do so to rest, not to work.—Harper's Round Table.

CUT TO PIECES BY A REAPER.

Millersburg, Ind., June 27.—A Jesuit, aged 15, fell in front of a reaper yesterday morning and was cut to pieces. Both legs and the right arm were severed from her body. She was riding on the reaper, when the horses took fright and threw her in front of the machine.

MISTOOK GASOLINE FOR WATER.

Coopersville, Mich., June 27.—Mrs. James Conklin, living near Coopersville, mistook a pitcher of gasoline for water and started to turn it into a kettle. The gasoline took fire and burned nearly all her clothing off. She died at 3 p.m.

THE WRECKED STEAMER.

St. Johns, Nfld., June 27.—Little hope exists of saving the wrecked steamer Capulet, and she is going to pieces rapidly. Hundreds of men are trying to save the cargo of tin and lead aboard, which is valued at $500,000. No more mail has been recovered.

GOLD VEIN DISCOVERED.
Port Arthur, June 27.—Mr. Proudfoot, civil engineer, has returned from the Seine River district. On mining location A. L. 199 he has discovered a large vein about 100 feet wide, from which he has broken off some marvellously rich specimens of fine gold. Messrs. Morley Bros., of Detroit, are commencing to operate an iron pyrites vein near Schreiber. It is proposed to export this to the United States to be used in the manufacture of sulphuric acid.

The Business Outlook.

A Hopeful Feeling in Trade Circles.

But No Marked Improvement Except in the Best and Shoe Trade—Good Crop Prospects.

BRADSTREET'S STATEMENT.

New York, June 27.—Bradstreet's review says: A more hopeful feeling in trade circles within the past ten days explained as due to the adoption of a gold plank at St. Louis has been given undue weight. Interviews with merchants in staple lines at 25 centers show that aside from the increased strength in wool in the hands of interior holders (reflected at Boston and Philadelphia), an improved demand for hardware at Providence, for clothing and shoes at Baltimore, shoes and drygoods at Memphis, and in similar lines at St. Louis, there has been no improvement in trade. At Chicago there is a more hopeful sentiment, but no increase in business. A canvass of leading jobbers at important cities shows no expectation of a revival in general trade until after election, and at some points no real improvement is expected until next year. There are 215 business failures reported throughout the United States this week, a striking decrease as compared with a week ago, when the total was 255. One year ago the week's total was 215. The total volume of bank clearings shows a falling off of 13.4 per cent from last week. Exports of wheat, flour, included as wheat, from both coasts of the United States and from Montreal, amount to $37,000,000, compared with $30,000,000 bushels last week, 1,940,000 bushels in the week a year ago, 1,717,000 bushels in the week two years ago, and 3,711,000 bushels in the fourth week of June, 1893.

IN CANADA.

Business at Montreal and Toronto is without other feature than that of a quiet and steady recession. At Halifax the outlook is unsettled, and unfavorable weather has had an effect upon current business. New Brunswick finds the demand for lumber better than expected. Bank clearings at Winnipeg, Hamilton, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax amount to $17,000,000 this week against $19,000,000 last week, $19,569,000 in the fourth week of June, 1895, but as compared with $16,175,000 in the corresponding week in 1894. There are 19 business failures reported throughout the Dominion this week, as compared with 35 last week, and 28 in the corresponding week in 1895 and in 1894.

DUNN'S REVIEW.

The monetary outlook is not clear to some. The strength shown in recent conventions by advocates of silver currency and expectation that all the elements favoring that policy may yet be concentrated, incline them to a waiting attitude.
