Sound Kailway Legislation In the dominion parliament railway leg islation is moving in the right direction The Grand Trunk bill has been read a third time and passed in the house, but with some very important amendments. The Montreal Herald claims, and with good reason, that in urging these amendgood reason, that in urging these amendations are the compounding for sins that he's inclined to the same time it is clear that Mr. Mitchell's efforts as a private member must have failed had not the Government taken hold of the matter, and come out decidedly morally they make up in brass, impudence, the result's side. The bill in question duplicity and tergiversation. Bear withing the same of the wise, but Brother tors mentally and otherwise, but Brother to the compounding for sins that he's inclined to By damning those he has no mind too. Still there is no doubt some foundation for what he says even here in Canada. We have the satisfaction however of knowing that what our legislators lack mentally and otherwise, but Brother to the compounding for sins that he's inclined to By damning those he has no mind to what he says even here in Canada. We have the satisfaction however of knowing that what our legislators lack mentally and otherwise, but Brother to the compounding for sins that he's inclined to By damning those he has no mind too. on the people's side. The bill in question is a private bill, and the government might have to a large extent shirked responsibility, had it chosen to take this course. But it had been determined that there should be no shirking, and on Wednesday Sir Charles Tupper came to the front with the sentimation, in substance, that the amendments urged by Mr. Mitchell should be adopted. More than that, he announced that he would introduce a bill extending the provisions of the consolidated railway act of last year so that the Grand Trunk act of last year so that the Grand Trunk as well as other railways should be prohibited from dealing in the stocks and bonds of other roads. To show that this was no sudden impulse of the present time, either, it has to be added that it was promised by him last session-that is, that railways then remaining exempt from the restriction should be included. Sir Charles is thus reported :-

application of the funds should be for a double track between Montreal and Toronto, and he would say that he intended to introduce an amendment to that effect. The government also intended this session to amend the consolidated railway act, so as to extend the clause prohibiting the amalgamation and leasing of railway lines, without the express sanction of parliament, to the Grand Trunk and all other railway companies in Canada which were now exempt from its operation.

"It might have been." What might have been, let us ask, had Sir Charles Tupper or some other champion of the principle of national policy in railway matters, stood in Mr. Pardee's place in the Ontario government two years ago, when the Grand Trunk-Midland gobble was before the provincial assembly? A Mexican reply to this would be, quien sabe-who knows? But doesn't it look odd that Sir Charles, a Nova Scotian, should be in very deed and fact the most potent defender of Ontario's railway rights to-day?

Nor should Mr. Mitchell's services, not alone to the dominion generally, but to Ontario in particular, be forgotten. He pressed the amendment which makes the double tracking between Toronto and Montreal compulsory, whereas before the hill was like the witches' prophecy in alone to the dominion generally, but to Montreal compulsory, whereas before the bill was like the witches' prophecy in Macbeth, leaving the company free to keep the word of promise to the ear, while breaking it to the hope. Further, he insisted upon it, and carried it, that the bill must be accepted by a two-thirds majority of Grand Trunk pro-prietors, instead of by a bare majority, as Trenton, Ont., March 20, 1884. S.J.H. public security; in another way it unquestionably concedes what the Grand Trunk appears to have been very anxious to obtain-the sanction of dominion law to the fusion. And, finally, Mr. Mitchell drew from the minister of railways, speaking for the government, the positive assurance that the new issue of securities does not take precedence of the government's claim. On this point a mistaken impression has prevailed; but now we know that the dominion claim remains as good as it was before, and in fact better.

the Grand Trunk should have every proper facility given it for raising money for that most necessary work-double-tracking the road from Toronto to Montreal. We have at the same time contended that the legislative permission asked for should be coupled with full security taken on behalf of the public interest. And not only this, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent most favorable f made of the power of the commonwealth made of the power of the commonwealth in railway matters generally. It must be the verdict of the people that the dominion government has handled this Grand Trunk will well and has chown that the multibill well, and has shown that the public have rights which railway companies are

A Paris correspondent describes the seene during the night prior to the issue of shares in the new French loan, when well-to-do investors and agents hire persons, who, in turn, hire others yet poorer to keep places for them until the hour when the office opens. It was motley and distressing. A poor widow, with seven children of a tender age, the youngest about 8, had been standing there since 10 o'clock. The eight places would fetch something like five or six franca—a fortune for a day. A charitable soul sent them some hot coffee, some bread and cold meat, and the look of delight at the victuals told a heartrending tale of privation.

All roads lead to Rome. So all the interviews between the Meeks and the Wilkinsons with the members who were to be bought lead to the Mail office and to Mr. Bunting. Wilkinson and Meek were the steerers into Bunting's office.

The Mail changed its attitude toward Kirkland yesterday. It saw that it was dangerous to make a scapegoat out of him for My Runting's benefit. for Mr. Bunting's benefit.

According to him and the person he left in charge of the party (a thoroughly honest and honorable person) the timber limit laws or regulations are the most absurd and ridiculous possible to imagine. I thought it strange they should attempt to secure limits under and recently regulations and told them as such regulations and told them so The regulations surely must have been passed so that limits up there could be reserved for and bestowed on political sup-

Catarrh-A New Treatment. Perhaps the most extraordinary succe that has been achieved in modern medicin has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 2000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all.
