Mr. Talmage on Debauchery. WE ADMIRABLE HIS CONGRATULATION WITH A SELECT ILLUSTRATION FROM HIS OWN EXPERIENCE.

N. Y. World of Monday. Mr. Talmage preached a sermon to young men yesterday from the brief and fragmentary text: "As an ox to the slaughter." There is nothing, he began, in the voice or the manner of the butcher which intimates to the ox that death is ahead.

Now, my dear reader, when you find you have taken cold, just take a warm bath, then drink a bowl of hot ginger and cayenne tea, or, if prepared, some warm herb drink. If you are feverish, a teaspoonful of spirits of nitre added will be found beneficial, and eat nothing but gruel for a day, and my word for it, you will find your cold nearly well. Always stay indoors when you have a cold until you get over feeling chilly on going into the open air.

A Husband's Responsibility for his Wife's Debts. The English House of Lords, in its judicial capacity, decided a case two or three weeks ago which has an interesting bearing upon the question of a husband's responsibility for debts incurred by his wife.

More Bitter than Death. The Root of all Evil, a Bitter Assessment, Germaine, Milkmaid, The Sin of a Lifetime, Married and Single, Madeline's Lover, Publicans and Sinners, Struggles and Triumphs, Pearl and Emerald, A Broken Faith, Hope Meredith, Taken at the Flood, Ought we to Visit Her, Who Breaks her Faith, Pain and Out, Only a Woman, The Fallen Leaves, And 500 others, all by the best authors. Don't wait till they are sold, as we sell large quantities of these popular books every week.

After this interesting and instructive anecdote, Mr. Talmage took up his own case. He had a sister who was the second great engine by which they were being slaughtered was irrigation. "If you want to destroy a young man in a double quick order," said he, happily addressing his suggestion to no one in particular, "take away his Bible. A student of 1,500 miles out at sea with a broken rudder and leaking fifty gallons a minute—laughter—is not in a worse condition than a young man without his Bible. Infidelity is splitting up the life boats and tearing down the life escapes. Do you want to know my opinion of the infidel who seeks to rob young men of their Bibles? Well, think of the meanness that you offer him and find yourself at the top of a flight of stairs 100 miles long. Go down these stairs and find a ladder 1,000 miles long. Descend the ladder and look from the edge of a precipice down to a chasm twice as deep as the distance from here to China and then you'll find the level of his detestable, indescribable meanness. After this what more could Mr. Talmage say?

How to Cure a Cold. At this season of the year colds prevail to a greater or less extent, and, if neglected, they often end in consumption. How often we hear it said of persons, they took a cold last winter and never recovered well afterwards, and now Dr. says they have consumption and must die! How many precious lives might be saved yearly by the knowledge and application of a few of the simplest laws of nature.

the escape of the perspiration, the natural channel through which the impurities of the system find an outlet. Thus the lungs and other internal organs have more to do than they ought. The air passages of the nose and lungs become inflamed and the patient feels chilly on going into the air, the chilly sensation being followed by fever fits. Now the first thing to be done in the breaking up of a cold is to open the pores. This can best be accomplished by taking a warm bath followed by a brisk rubbing with dry flannel. The object is to obtain almost entirely from eating for at least twenty-four hours. That old adage, "Stiff a cold and starve a fever," being believed in and followed, has made as much practice for the doctor as the medicine, or sleeping cough. I think the author of that must either have been a fool or he meant that if one did stuff a cold he would have to starve a fever. When a person has a cold he is always more or less feverish, and as food taken into the stomach tends to keep up and increase the heat of the system, any sensible person can see at a glance that it must be the height of folly to expect to cure a disease by doing the very thing to produce it.

Now, my dear reader, when you find you have taken cold, just take a warm bath, then drink a bowl of hot ginger and cayenne tea, or, if prepared, some warm herb drink. 'Well, Patrick,' asked the doctor, 'how do you feel to-day?' 'Och, doctor, dear, I enjoy my poor health, entirely. The rheumatism is very distressing, indeed; but I go to sleep I swell as big as a goose every egg, so when I stand up I fall down immediately.'

Mark Twain. A VALUABLE CONTRIBUTION TO THE REFUGAL OF A BROTHER'S WIFE.

The success of the sprightly little paper entitled the Bazaar Bulletin has exceeded all expectations. Mark Twain's promised story was published in yesterday's issue, and it caused a brisk demand for the paper. Here-with we print the sketch, which will be found entirely characteristic of its author.

A TALE FOR STRUGGLING YOUNG PEOPLE. Well, sir, once there was a young fellow who believed that a poet, but the main difficulty with him was to get anybody else to believe it. Many and many a poet has split on that rock—if it is a rock. Many a man has a poet will split on it yet, thank God. The young fellow I speak of used all the customary devices for a candid opinion—praises and didn't take any; he sent specimens of his poetry to famous poets, and they all said it was a splendid specimen of a puff, and didn't get it; he took advantage of dead persons and obtained a notice for a candid opinion, but it made him no friend—certainly none among the dead. But at last he heard of another poet, a young man, who was going to the Honorable Fair, and he accompanied by the usual indolent paper, and the editor of that paper offered a prize for the best original poem on the usual topic of 'Spring' no poem to be considered unless it should possess positive value.
