NEW YORK'S LATEST MURDER CASE

Thaw, the Pittsburg Millionaire in Police Court --Has Been and is Insane

New York, June 30.—Perfectly calm, Harry Kendall Thaw, who recently shot and killed Stanford White, a prominent architect, faced a coroner and a number of police officers, absolutely refusing to make any statement as to the motive which led up to the tragedy on the roof of Madison Square Garden, as the first night's performance of "Mamelle Champagne" was being sung to a close.

While Thaw, in immaculate evening dress, sat in a cell in the Tenderloin police station, detectives were scouring the city for the wife, formerly Evelyn Florence Nesbit, before her marriage a chorus girl and artists' model.

Mrs. Thaw disappeared as her husband was being hurried from the play house by a policeman and after throwing her arms around his neck and crying: "Oh, Harry, Harry, why did you do it, Harry?" she is said to have entered an automobile and been whisked away before the crowd or police recovered from the excitement caused by one of the most sensational tragedies in New York's latest criminal history.

The search for Mrs. Thaw was continued throughout the night. During the forenoon Captain Hodgins, of the Tenderloin station, said that he had not been located, but that he did not intend to do anything but watch her for the present at least.

Long before the time set for the arraignment of Thaw in the Jefferson Market police court, his valet went to the Tenderloin station, where a change of clothing for the prisoner, so that he would not be obliged to appear in evening clothes which he was when taken into custody.

It has been reported on the authority of several persons interested in the case that Thaw's defense will be that he was and is insane. It is said that at his trial he will be represented by the best and most noted lawyers of the day, who will ask for the appointment of a commission in lunacy to examine as to the state of Thaw's mind.

"There can be no doubt," said one of these men, "that Thaw was and is hopelessly insane, and that the commission will report him so."

Harry Thaw was taken to a police court and arraigned, charged with the murder of Stanford White. He was remanded to the coroner. From the police court, he was taken to the mental court, presumably to be arraigned before the coroner.

Thaw's trip to headquarters was made only after the strongest protests on the part of his friends had been overruled. Several friends of the prisoner were permitted to visit him in his cell, however. When the detectives, accompanied by Inspector Schmitzberger, entered the cell to take Thaw to headquarters, Thaw inquired whether it was necessary for him to be handcuffed. "Yes," the inspector replied, "it is necessary. We always handcuff murderers. There was then led out of the Tenderloin station handcuffed to a detective. He was dressed in a neat gray suit, and wore a white straw hat. He looked cool and self-posessed. He was quickly placed in the patrol wagon and driven to police headquarters.

At headquarters Thaw was taken to the detective bureau and then to the top floor, where is located the roquet gallery and the rooms of the photographers and the officers in charge of the Brilliance measurement system. Thaw's picture was taken and his measurement recorded. In the detective bureau he was lined up before the detective sergeant who had charge of the desk, in a line with fifteen other ex-convicts, convicts men and other criminals who had been picked up during the night. First Deputy Commissioner Rhinelandter Waldo, who knows Thaw personally, was present at the time. Thaw was given no precedence over the others. Thaw then was taken down to the patrol wagon and hurried to Jefferson Market Court. An immense crowd had gathered around the building and the police were forced to fight their way to the patrol wagon.

At the police court the patrol wagon had to force its way through another big crowd to reach the jail entrance of the building. Thaw was then conducted to an office where he was permitted to consult briefly with Lawyers Daniel O'Reilly, Lawyer Joseph J. Brewster and his friend, Burr McIntosh. O'Reilly told Thaw not to say a word about his case to any one. He said that if there was any statement to be made to the public, he (O'Reilly) would make it. Thaw assented.

The proceedings before Magistrate Barlow, when Thaw was arraigned, were brief. Captain Hodgins, appearing as the complainant, asked that Thaw be remanded to the custody of the coroner. "I direct that that be done," said Magistrate Barlow. Thaw was taken back to the patrol wagon and started for the coroner's office.

At the conclusion of the hearing before the coroner, Thaw was committed to the Tombs without bail. With the police, coroner's and district attorney's office working practically day and night to learn all the details of the events which led up to the murder of Stanford White by Harry K. Thaw, and all sources being shut as to their discoveries, there was much room for speculation on all phases of the case. The motive for the murder, the police believe, was outlined in Thaw's brief statement that his home had been ruined, and with this as a basis of investigation, detectives were sent in various directions looking up Thaw's habits in New York and investigating the many stories told and published concerning Stanford White's conduct. Thaw, advised by some of the most prominent lawyers of New York and England, is silent. Mrs. Thaw, with friends ready to respond to a call from the district attorney's office. Perhaps the most interesting development was the announcement that Mrs. Thaw told her husband's lawyers that she had received many letters from Mr. Thaw since her marriage. One of these she threw on her bed and told a few days ago, and her husband found it and vowed vengeance on the writer. While the finding of this letter may have been the direct cause of the tragedy, Thaw's jealousy of and hatred for White were of long standing and the young man made frequent threats to kill him.

TOWN COUNCIL

The regular monthly meeting of the town council took place last night, his Worship the Mayor, and Councilors Longmire, Cabrer, Freeman and Harlow were present. Councilor Gasker moved that Com. Freeman take the place of Councilor Foster on the various committees and the motion was agreed to.

The following bills were passed: Charles Rowe, $95.00; Pay roll for June, 1.00; Streets, 111.27; Water, 3.10; Jacob Whitehouse, 21.00; Alden Walker, 56.80; Charles Isbell, 1.00; John Chute, 2.50; Elias Hamby, 3.00.

A bill from Dr. DeWitt for services rendered to the town, was given the three months' hoist. It was shown that this bill was contracted without authority from the town doctor.

The committee appointed to ascertain the damages on the L. R. Mill property had no report to make as they had each depended on the other to visit the property and none had gone. It was found that the recorder was the only one who had visited the place and he had no authority to do so. The matter was left over to the next meeting.

A letter was read from the manager of the Union Bank in reference to a new sidewalk around their building. The bank would pay half the cost if the town would pay the other half. The matter was referred to the water committee.

The water committee was instructed to repair the corporation water boxes throughout the town. After the minutes were read the council adjourned.

The Baptist Sunday school picnic at Hampton on Dominion Day was very largely attended. There must have been between three and four hundred people present. The grounds have been fitted up for the purpose and it forms a pleasant spot for day's outing. The school wishes to express its appreciation of the kindness of the gentlemen who furnished teams to carry the scholars; also to the friends who donated ice cream, and especially to Mr. Jewett for the very enjoyable refreshment table arranged for by him in the interest of the school. The picnic was the largest ever held at the school and one of the most enjoyable. The children came home tired but happy.

Our Weekly Sermon

And the walls of the city had twelve foundations, and in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb.—Rev. 21, 14.

The future of this world is as bright as the promise of God. Before and not behind us are the halcyon days of human history. It is said that the great Roman emperor Augustus found Rome brick and left it marble. Jesus Christ found the world mud. He shall ultimately lay it at the feet of God pure gold, garnished with all manner of precious stones.

The twenty-first and second chapters of the book of Revelations are highly figurative and symbolical. But if language means anything it is evident from these chapters that there is a glorious era before men. This seems to be the outlook that we gather from the pages of the Word of God. From the dawn of human history there has been written on the walls against the evils that have ravaged the human race that our weight in the balances and found wanting. The serpent's head is to be crushed. The nations of the earth are to be blessed through the agency of the seed of Abraham. God himself has given the promise and he cannot lie. For three shall come forth a shoot out of his stock of Jesse and a branch out of his roots shall bear fruit and the spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and of understanding, the spirit of knowledge and the fear of the Lord, and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, but with righteousness shall he judge the poor and reprove with equity the meek of the earth, and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked. And the wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid and the falling together and a little child shall lead them. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea. For behold, says the Lord, I will open rivers on the bare heights and fountains in the midst of the valleys. I will make the wilderness a pool of water and the dry lands springs of water. I will plant in the wilderness the cedar, the acacia and the myrtle and the olive tree. I will set in the desert the fir tree, the pine, the box tree together, that they may see and know and understand that the hand of the Lord hath done this. And of the Old Testament and the New unite in describing for us an era in which sorrow and sighing shall flee away and our Lord shall have dominion from the rivers unto the end of the earth. Men have longed for this. They have struggled for the attainment of it. Augustine saw in the church the nucleus of the City of God. The Pope Hildebrand tried to work it out. To him the Roman church was the city of God. All the nations of the earth were to bow down before him. The kings of the earth were to bring their glory and honor into the church of which he was the earthly head. In latter days the Puritans also aimed at the visible city of God. They crossed the water that in the new world they might build up a state in which righteousness should have the sceptre. But thefulness of the times has not yet come. The work is still rolling onward to the distant place of light. We see it ahead and in the accomplishment of it we have our little part.

This is the fact that I wish to impress upon our hearts. It is declared to us by this scripture. And the walls of the city had twelve foundations and in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb. What does this mean? Why are the names of the apostles in the foundation stones? Does it not signify that they had a basal fundamental part in the bringing in of the glorious era that is predicted by this fifteen hundred square mile city. They were the sent ones. This was their mission. To build this imperial four square bride city of the Lamb—Standing on the hill top in Galilee Jesus called to his apostles, so ye shall go into all the world and preach the gospel in every creature. And he who is called, says the Lord, I will hill top the seer of Patmos looked and beheld he saw breaking through the blue of the canopy of heaven a light at first perhaps as a star, then as a sun with the brightness above the sun and as it came nearer and nearer he sees that it is a mighty city such as earth has never known and such as earth never will know. He looks and sees in the foundations of it the names of the men who on the hill top in Galilee were sent forth to preach the Gospel of the Son of God. On the Galilean hill top there is a cross. On the Apocalyptic hill top there is a cross. They are seed and harvest. They are command and fulfillment. They are the day dawn and the morning splendor of the perfect day. Do we ask the missionary enterprises of the church essential for the regeneration of the world. The answer is here. Here we have a city expressive of regenerated humanity and right in the foundation of it as the thing on which the golden era is built are the names of the sent ones, the missionaries of the cross of Christ. Science, invention, governments have their place, but the golden era is built upon the gospel. We need only to look upon the peoples of the heathen world to see that there is no hope for them in their political organizations. Neither is there hope for them, as the keenest minds have seen, in our political systems. They have nothing to expect from their religion. It is not nanking a paradise but a desert, but there is a remedy for their ills as for ours and this is in the Christian faith.

And this gospel is in our hands. A mighty angel is seen flying through the midst of heaven having the ever lasting gospel to preach to all people, but in their four square city vision of regenerated humanity the work of giving the life transforming principle is not in the hands of angels, but of men. In the twelve foundations were the names not of
