A record beaten. Not in running, nor in jumping, nor in hammer-throwing but in rink-making. Never in the history of the Small Yard was there such early (almost unseasonable for Ottawa) skating. To have a sheet of ice for the second of December gave the Junior Editor of 1902 an occasion to boast. But what is the second of December to the twenty-first of November! To hear the ring of skates, the clash of hockeys and the thud of pucks before the feast of St. Catherine; before Yale and Harvard had played their Thanksgiving-Day game is a record that will take a deal of hustling and good luck to beat. Walter thought that Father Veronneau must have noticed that the fur of the foxes was thick this year, to have begun his rink so early. But where is our boasted rink now (Dec. 12)! Oh, the mild unkindness of that December thaw!

The smile that never comes off—Gr-v-l.

Why is it that McCarney and Farley have never been on speaking terms, ever since they both came to College.

Wonders never cease! McM-h-n has been suffering from a peculiar soreness in the heel (we hope it will not prove contagious) which, so far, has baffled medical skill to diagnose. As soon and as often as there is snow to be cleaned off the rink the torture seizes him and the best he can do is to view the shovelling and sweeping operations from the window. But strange to say the moment the rink is clean, the soreness disappears as sudden-
