NORTHWEST REVIEW

ifications of an ideal teacher a quickness of perception, good Gugdment and sympathy. Mr many other natural gifts. He is an all-round man in the best sense of the word. Besides being an athlete and an excelwith rare facility in the acquirement and retention of knowledge, and his kindness, amiability and prodence endear him to all his friends. This is, for our French-speaking people, the most popular appointment that was ever made.
His popularity with the public was presaged some ten years ago by his popularity at college, where in his junior year (first year of Philosophy) he was elected secretary, and in his smior year, president of "LAcad-emie Francaise." the literary emie rancty of St. Boniface College societ These functions entail the constant use of the judicia faculty in public criticism essays, recitations and debates Young men living together in the college necessarily become fairly college necessarily become fairly good judges of character and ability, and their choice of Mr Goulet to lead them implies in him the absence of all meanness selfishness or whimsicality, and the presence of a well balanced mind and a conciliatory temper Quoth the English "Catholic Times" of the 2nd inst.: 'We are glad to find the "Northwest Review," of St. Boniface, Mani toba, quoting our "Note of the Week" on "The Oblate Fathers and the War," though we do not understand why it should attribute it to the "Catholic Tribune" instead of to the Catholic Times, the proper source.' Neither do we. The mistake must be due to some absent-minded beggar, the s sors man or the proof-reader

The Sacred Heart Review of the 17 th inst., by crediting the Michigan Catholic with ou editorial note of January 30th on Father Hughes, the inventor of the printing telegraph and the microphone, reveals two facts The first, which we deplore, is that our splendid Boston contemporary's exchange editor does not read our columns as assidu ously as we do his, perhaps owing to the American principle that bigness is the test of value The second fact, which does not surprise us, is that the Michigan Catholic. while copying our note rerbatim et literatim, with the change of "last week"' into "recently" and "the Catholic college of" into "St. Joseph" College," forgot to give due credit to us. This roundabout way of getting a quotation makes the Sacred Heart Review a week late in chronicling a fact aready a week old when w already a week old called attention to it.

We fully agree with the refin ed and sympathetic editor of the Midland Review that Prof Otten's sarcastic and utterly gratuitous allusion to Miss Eleanor Donnelly's "romantic period" was an ungentlemanly and indelicate sneer, which painfuliy shocked us as it must have shocked many other admir
s of Mr. Prenss' "Review."

Eminently thonght-proivoking $\begin{aligned} & \text { Kitchener seem at last to } \\ & \text { Have abide. But in the question jus } \\ & \text { Hon. Senator Bernier's latest } \\ & \text { found the }\end{aligned}$ speech, which we reprint from the Senate report. The commonplace platitudes that abound in most Senator's orations are not to be found in his. Erery senby carrent events, and those ideas are marshalled with a skill that betokens the graduate of a Catholic college; they are not flung in a ghastly heap after the manner of the disjointedly educated. As it contained some unpalatable truths, and was quite unanswerabie, the Senate adjourued immediately after a speech of which many them could

The Telegram and Tribun were both mistaken when the announced yesterday that Mr J. B. Leclerc's new hall over his tore was intended for the use of "secret societies." As Mr Leclerc is a consistent Catholic he could not lease his hall to a secret society. All secret societies are condemned by the Catholic Church. The mistake is, however, a natural one for Protestants, among whom sec recy seems to have all the charm of forbidden fruit. Almost all their fraternal societies are secret; ours are not, and Mr. Le lere's hail is intended for Catholic fraternal societies

From the last number (Feb. 3) that has reached gather that Dr. St. George Mivart must be out of his mind The extraordinary contradictions between his statements in the January "Nineteenth Century" and those that he has since made to Cardinal Vaughan do $n, t$ seem to admit of any other ex lauation, and we cannot hel? oping that he is crazy, as this would free him from responsibility for the heresies which he professes. In the Nineteenth Century he wrote of "devout Catholics, weekly communicants, who believe Joseph to have been the real and natural have been the real and natural father of Jesus." Now he tells he Cardinal that he "did not nean to affirm they were theo ogically blameless, but simply hat they were persons who ookerl upon themselres as Catholics while leading good lives in the ordinary sense of that term," in other words, he Again in the Nineteenth Century he says: "My aim has been $t$ strengthen Catholicity." On the contrary, writing to the Cardi nal, he now says that in 1893, after the publication of the Encyclical 'Providentissimus Deus,' he felt his position as a Catholic was no longer tenable and gradually he came to fee that he must remove the inpression produced by his former writings. "So that," as th Tablet remarks, "though out wardly conforming, he realls ceased to be a Catholic some years ago. That Dr. Mivart, in so short a space [one month], should have persuaded himsel first that he wrote 'to strengthen Catholicity' and then that he Wrote only to weaken its claim is a melancholy phenomenon in is a melancholy phesence of which criticism is disarmed.

The tide of victory seems armor. God grant they may soon end this cruel war. Gen eral French is nobly maintaining his reputation as one of the few accessful British commanders n South Atrica.

Protestants, even though they e professors of Logic, live in such an illogical atmosphere that they cannot help contradeting their words by their acts. Sunday night, the 10th inst., the Free Press tells us, Dr Kilpatrick, of Manitoba College, while championing, in St Stephen's church, Mr. Irwin a a hero for joining Strathconas Horse, and expressly disclaim ing any wish to fix the blame o the South African war on any one, "said war was always a crime and an offence to God and His Son, the Prince of eace." If war is always a crime, then the British Empir must be an incorrigible criminal then every man that joins Strathcona's Horse is a felon then most of the Oid Testament is a special plea for crime Happily the Doctor is not infal lible, and it will ever remain true that a just war may be a most virtuous action and, in pite of the sufferings it entails or rather precisely on account of those trials, a spleudid school of heroism.

We beg to tender to Mr Arthur Prenss our most sincere condolence on the recent death of his dearly loved wife, who was, he himself tells us. "for even years his visible guardian angel." In a heart-broken para graph in the first column o "The Reriew" of the 15th, he most earnestly asks his reader to pray for him and abore all for her, to whom he applies "the words of a more famous, though surely not a better woman: 'de qua nihil unquam homines doluere nisi mortem' (she never grieved others except by her death)." Those who hare learn to look eagerly for Mr. Preuss's fearless review of weekly happenings all over the Catholic world, and who appreciate his manly exposure of humbug and ignorance, will deem it a debt of gratitude to pray for his "faithful, devoted and untiring helpmate.
the recently appoint ED SCHOOL INSPECTOR.

In a long articie last Friday anent the appointment of Mr. R . Goulet, jr., as School Inspector or the French-English schools f the Province, the Free Press will have it that Mr. R. Goulet is far from possessing the required qualifications to occupy quired qualifications to occupy he position with credit to him self or advantage to the cause of ducation. Un the other hand t claims that Mr. Rochon has the required certificates.
The whole of the Free Press article, it is clear, was inspired by its political antipathy for the Hon. H. J. Macdonald's admin istration. We are loath to follow our transpontine contemporary in its political career wherein it anythements of late have prove we intend to endorse all of th new government's appointments Our position is an independen We advocate principles express doubt as to the Free Press own qualifications to pass a proper judgment.
In the first place we would challenge the Free Press to clearly set forth what qualifications are required for the position of School Inspector of FrenchEnglish schools in the province. The Advisory Board, as far as we know, has failed up to the present, to define these qualifications, and to draw up a complete programme of studies for French studeats in the FreachEnglish schools.

Again the Advisory Board, perhaps on account of its lack of knowledge of the French Language has refased to issue or approve of first-class certificates being granted to teachers in the rench-English schools
The Free Press tharefore should realize the difficulties of the position, if it knows anything about thein, and be slow in passing judgment on any chool Inspector of the French English schools. We claim that In this case the qualificationo required are different from those of an ordinary School Inspector Now since the Free Press has entured to establish a com parison between Mr. Kochon and Mr. Goulet-alihough we have no liking for such invid ous contrasto-we are prepared to say that in onr estimation Mr roulet is incomparably a better man for the position than Mr Rochon ever was or ever will be The Free Press says Mr Rochon has the qualifications required, or, what we should suppose amounts to the sam thing - the required certificate thing - the required certificates
We should feel under grest obligation to our contemporary it would consent to let us if it would consent to let us its vouchers for the assertion.
But, be the matter as it may whilst we should not like to sas anything. disparaging of $M$ Rochon, we venture to question his ability to give, say, a lesso of English pronunciation, ability which would be absolnte ly necessary in a School Inspe tor of French-English schools and which exists to an emine degree in Mr. R. Goulet.
Penmanship might also b mentioned as an interesting feature of comparison betwee the two. Mr. Goulet writes most beautiful hand.
Mr. Goulet has not the Norma School training, nor three yegrb experience as a teacher. Grad ed, but many there are or $\mathfrak{m}^{2}$ be whose training will supply them with the judgmen and tact which we know exist in Mr. Goulet. Beside Mr. Goulet may if need be, he is acquainted with routine of his work, follow example of his predecessor, have recourse to some of fellow School Inspectors assist him with their
