London Manager and Star Finds Ideas Not Acceptable to Press.

London, Oct. 8. - Arthur Bouchier, essee, manager and star of the Garrick Theater, has bowed to the London critics. When he opened with 'Morals of Marcus"he announced that no tickets would be issued to the critics for first performances thereafter at his theater. Criticism was not due, he believed until a play had been given a chance. At the end of the first week, when he invited criticism of of his production, only one paper noticed it.

"In justice to the author and actors playing in 'Morals and Marcus' I would ask you in your courtesy to allow criticism of this play to appear in your columns," is the way the actor-manager concludes a letter expressing regret if he has caused the press to take offense.
