MANY "DARK" HORSES

President Wilson Receives But Two Votes On Last Ballot.

San Francisco, Cal., July 5.—The Democratic national convention went into its ninth session and its twenty-third ballot today for a presidential nominee. There was nothing to indicate inird ballot today for a presidential nominee. There was nothing to indicate that any marked change was in prospect from the last roll call of Saturday night. The twenty-second ballot had left the four leaders: Cox, 430; McAdoo, 372½; Palmer, 166; Davis, 52. A remaining 70 votes were scattered among the favorite son contenders, Owen, Glass, Cummings, with two recorded for President Wilson and a couple for Champ Clark. Both McAdoo and Cox supporters were emphatic in claims for victory today, but they had no definite basis for their confidence to make public. It has been a rule of Democratic conventions under the two-thirds nomination rule, that the first man to secure a majority, which would be 548 votes on the full roll of this convention, got the nomination at Baltimore in 1912 was an exception into which unusual circumstances entered.

Dark horse speculation still was running riot today. Almost every living Democrat who ever got headline prominence in a newspaper, was trotted out at one time or another.
