Germany, before the war, got nearly all the paim kernels from the British ACCIDENT VICTIMS colonies in Africa and ground them into oil for soap, for margarine, cattle food. The annual value of the export is $25,-000,000; four-fifths of it went to Germany. The British Government has had an export duty of $10 a ton placed on the nuts which will hereafter be ground in British mills. Bonar Law took up the question with the colonies and got the export duty put on. We should follow that example with nickel.

The National Issue Is This: Liberals and Conservatives may differ as to the questions of Preparedness, Tariff Revision and Woman's Suffrage. But all parties, all candidates and all statesmen agree that, after all, Humanity—its prob-lems and its dangers—is the big national issue today. "Is Humanity in The Grip of Evil?" is the startling question that has presented itself.

WHAT DO YOU SAY? Do 3 pelieve that, despite the apparent trend of the world toward all that is base and ignoble, all that is bypocrisy and deceit, God and Right will eventually triumph? Perhaps you can better decide after reading

John Burton, the hero of this great continued picture story, inherits a fortune and goes forth to discover whether or not evil is really on the increase. Go with him in his search. See him probe into the schemes of grafting politics. See him study the problem of the poor as well as the rich. See him suppose sham and deceit in business circles, in society life, and in the home. "The Grip of Evil" is a master tale show-ing the real side of Humanity.

Whether the Russians will pursue the Austrians as far as possible HELD RESPONSIBLE into Galicia without giving them respite or to allow them to form them-selves on the suggested new lines while the Germans are being attacked is a question for thee future to decide. The retreast of the Austrians beyond the Zlota Lipa River will leave the German lines in the north upon the Stokhod disposed in a tempting salient, and the Russians may suddenly wheel their forces northward to attempt to cut this salient off by combined pressure against it from the south and the north. This sort of pressure George Webb and May Mchind the lines of the Bug.

On the other hand, if the Russians should succeed in driving the Aus trians back to the Carpathians and to middle Galicia and in seizing Lemberg, and with it the Galician railway system, they would be in about the same geometrical position in respect to the Teutons as the Teutons were to GUILTY OF NEGLIGENCE them about thirteen months ago, especially if the Germans remained as at present advanced in Poland, Volhynia and Poliesie. So if the Russians choose they could divert their arms northward and compel the Germans to evacuate the country to the east of it by driving northward and exerting pressure against the lines of Von Hindenburg in Courland. But the ence of such action along the Dwina lines up to the present time would lead to the supposition that the Russian aim is to follow up the Austrian army in its retreat, leave sufficient men behind in Galicia to protect its communications, and proceed to the invasion of Austria-Hungary by advancing across the Carpathians.

** * * * * In the west the forty-fifth day of the battle of the Somme was marked by the making of no advance by the British forces. These were hampered by bad weather and were also employed in consolidating their gains of Sunday morning. The Germans did the usual amount of shelling along the British front and more particularly on the Mametz Wood, Pozieres, the vicinity of Arras and British trenches north of the Vierstraat-Wytschaete road. The German shelling of the neighborhood of Arras indicates that they expect that the British army is about to launch attacks from that vantage point. The British lines in this region take the form of a shallow salient looking down hill towards Bapaume, and the German front between Arras and Pozieres bulges out into the British lines. Pressure from the vicinity of Arras would eventually force the enemy to evacuate the 18 miles or so of front between Arras and the present Somme

* * * * On the French side bad weather again held up active infantry operations, but it did not prevent the big guns from engaging in an artillery duel of some intensity south of the Somme. The Germans once more treated Rheims to an exhibition of frightfulness by dropping incendiary and other bombs from aeroplanes on the town and by bombarding with their batteries various quarters. A hospital and a dispensary were destroyed by the enemy and six civilians were killed. * *

The British torpedo boat destroyer Lassoo was sunk by a torpedo fired from a German submarine off the Dutch coast on Sunday. The British Admiralty takes exception to the German official communication that the Lassoo was sent to the bottom in the English Channel, probably because the channel is kept clear of the submersibles. Six of the crew of the Lassoo are missing, the rest of course being saved.

Having mastered the fortress of Gorizia and pushed the Austrians back to lines several miles east of the town, the Italians are proceeding with the second phase of their operations, the clearing of the enemy from the Carso Plateau. The securing of this strong defensive position is necessary in order to permit of an advance on Trieste. It may not be necessary once the Carso Plateaeu falls, for the Italians to drive the enemy from his second system of defence east of Gorizia, for that system, perhaps, may be turned by a march along the coastal route. That Trieste road is flanked on one side by mountains and on the other side by the sea, and it is probably capable of being commanded all the way by warships. It was imperative on the Italians to take Gorizia for the simple reason that it is a wrong principle of war to leave in one's rear a fortress in the hands of the enemy.
