SAYS QUEBEC DID VERY WELL

Newspaper Gives Figures and Explains Reasons for Limitation

Quebec, April 19.—Commenting on enlistment figures for Canada during the war, L'Evenement, the official Unionist organ in Quebec City, demonstrates that the French-Canadians took a proportionately good part in the manning of the Canadian armies overseas.

It quotes official figures from the department of militia, stating that 72,000 young men from Quebec province enlisted and served. It says that among the 450,000 young Canadians who donned the uniform, there was certainly a fair proportion of Quebec-born enlisted in other provinces where, it says, some 10,000 or 12,000 Quebec-born have moved to live previous to the war.

Of the 72,000 Quebec province men enlisted, says the paper, it is safe to state that at least 36,000 were French-Canadians, so that comprising the 10,000 or 15,000 other French-Canadian descendants that enlisted elsewhere in Canada or the British Isles, French-Canadians have furnished a contingent of some 50,000 young men to the armies of the empire.

Reasons for Non-enlistment.

The paper further states that had French Canada been given more "show" at the time of enlistment this group of 50,000 French-Canadians would have been enlarged considerably. Among the things that the paper states as responsible for the non-enlistment of larger numbers of French-Canadians are:

1. The small number of French-Canadian officers and non-coms. compared to the number of English-speaking officers and non-coms.
2. The ignorance of the English language and of military affairs among the rural and laboring French-Canadian classes.
3. The inexperience and blunders of recruiting officers who worked under Sir Sam Hughes.
4. The fact that French-Canadians have greater responsibilities to family affairs than the majority of English-speaking Canadians, owing to the large families in Quebec and so forth.

These reasons, says L'Evenement, are admitted and recognized today by the serious element in Canada at large.

Another, More Serious, Reason.

There is another reason, and the most serious of them all, but which certain elements fail and refuse to understand yet, and that is, says the paper, the historic fact that French-Canadians for hundreds of years were naturally less inclined to shoulder arms for the cause of the Allies, because they cannot love Britain with the same love as the English-speaking element does, because they have been so long isolated and separated from France, because their political leaders had taught them, through a lack of provision of the grave events that occurred, that the law and just duty obliged them to fight only for the defense of Canada, their country.

Could Have Forestalled Crisis.

L'Evenement adds that at the very outset of the war, if those that attacked Quebec could have been silenced, we could have forestalled the crisis that in the end divided the two large races in

RED ROSE TEA "is good tea"

HERE'S a welcome to the returned soldier and his bride. May their wedded life be a long and happy one.

If she is a "British Bride" she will be very fond of tea—and good tea, at that.

She will first be attracted to Red Rose Tea by the name which will remind her of the "Red Rose" of "Old England".

And when she tries it she will again be reminded of the "Homeland", for she will find Red Rose Tea the same kind of Tea that she has used at home—a rich, full-flavored blend, consisting chiefly of ASSAM teas grown in British-owned plantations in northern India.

Red Rose Tea is sold always in sealed packages.
