PREPARE FOR CANNING.

June sees the beginning of the canning season. The Canada Food Board insists that every woman do some canning this year and work with a will to make the most of the supply of fruit and vegetables which the war gardens have already begun to yield.

Before another day passes the wise woman will investigate her cellar or her pantry shelves and find out just what she needs to complete her canning equipment. The season has come and if she is unprepared to meet it she should immediately get to work and secure the materials necessary for canning. It is poor housekeeping for a woman to start preserving and in the middle of it to find that she is short of rubber bands, or that the stoppers are not secure, or that she has not enough containers. After work will be cut out half if she starts canning with everything in good order. Poor tools necessarily make a bad workman. And war time had workmen are expensive to the country.

LAST TRIBUTE TO JOHN KEEFFE

Large Number at Funeral Yesterday—Dr. R. F. Quigley Buried in Newcastle—Other Funerals

One of the largest funerals seen in the city for some time was that of John Keefe which was held yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, from his late residence, 70 Lennox street to the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception, along the line of procession people gathered with bowed heads. It was a very large and representative gathering of citizens who were at the funeral, men from all walks of life in the community; high officials of this military section as well as a representation from the Y. M. C. I., Knights of Columbus and the C. M. B. A. branch 184, and the Union Club. Two large barouches of flowers were a silent but eloquent tribute to the worth of the deceased. Besides representatives of the Knights of Columbus and the C. M. B. A., the Great War Veterans' Association, in which organization Mr. Keefe had taken a deep interest, made a splendid appearance. There were also a large number of officers from local headquarters and other commanding officers of units about the city. The order of procession was: Y. M. C. I. seniors; Knights of Columbus; the Great War Veterans' Association; two barouches laden with beautiful flowers, the hearse, chief mourners and then citizens in general.

At the Cathedral Rev. William M. Duke, pastor, read the usual funeral services. As the hearse was borne into the church, Arthur S. Godson, organist, appropriately rendered "The Lord's Light," and after the service the Dead March and Saul was played. Interment was made in the new Catholic cemetery, along the line of procession people gathered with bowed heads. Among the floral tributes were a large number of pieces from various business houses in the city and from outside, as well as from individuals. Among some of them were: Weath, James Robertson Company, Limited; weath, Iron and Hardware Association; Great War Veterans' Association; weath, Master Plumbers' Association; weath, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Robertson, Montreal; weath, the James Robertson Staff, Toronto; weath, Colonel James J. McAvity and officers of No. 1 New Brunswick Depot battalion, Sussex; weath, Amherst Pounding; crescent, non-commissioned officers and men of the St. John detachment, No. 1 New Brunswick Depot battalion; weath, Mr. and Mrs. Amherst Pounding.

Ryan took place Saturday afternoon from her parents' residence, Horsfield street, to Trinity church, where burial services will be conducted by Rev. Canon Armstrong. Interment will be made in Fernhill cemetery.

Dickson, Bishop O'Leary conducted the requiem service. Rev. F. W. Trudell officiated at the grave. At the morning service Rev. Father Dickson referred feelingly to the deceased. The pall bearers were Hon. John Morley, E. P. Williston, Patrick Wheeler, Charles E. Fish, J. D. Crehan and David J. Buckley of the Knights of Columbus. The St. John knights present were Judge McInerney, Richard O'Brien and Dr. W. P. Broderick. The St. John Law Society was represented by Daniel Mullin, K.C., and E. P. Raymond.

Butchers Reap Riches in Italy

Making More Than Owners of Munition Factories

Beef at $1.50 a Pound—Easily
Acquired Wealth is Being Profusely Spent

Rome, June 13.—There seems to be no doubt that butchers in Italy are earning more money than the owners of munition factories. Easily acquired wealth is profusely spent with an unsparring hand as a rule, in this country, and a proof that butchers are making so much money that it is actually burning in their pockets is afforded by the following episode.

Some time ago a prosperous-looking jeweler entered one of the most expensive jewelry shops in Rome and asked to be shown diamond necklaces. The necklace he selected cost $16,000.

"Haven't you got something better?" the intending purchaser asked the jeweler, who, hiding his surprise, showed them a string of pearls worth $20,000. No time was wasted in bargaining, and without the slightest hesitation as to whether the diamonds should be preferred to the pearls, on the wife's suggestion, the husband paid $36,000 in cash and walked out arm in arm with his wife, forging the utmost indifference, as if buying expensive jewelry was his daily habit.

Of course this man was a butcher, and other butchers in other cities in Italy no doubt are investing their profits in jewelry on the same extensive scale. With beef at $1.50 a pound it is natural that butchers' wives should have diamonds and pearls in abundance.

Consumption is Decreased.

Two meatless days a week were fixed about a year ago, and as the great mass of the people live on bread and macaroni and as a rule abstain from animal food, it was assumed that high prices due to shortage would be sufficient to diminish consumption. This assumption to some extent proved well founded, since, as a matter of fact, meat consumption has been reduced about 30 per cent, but at the same time, since the outbreak of the war, the military authorities have been extensively requisitioning live stock to feed the army, so that the reduction in meat consumption only relates to the civilian population.

But besides eating less meat Italians are paying prohibitive prices for it. The live stock requisitioned for the army is paid for at the rate of about thirty cents a pound on the hoof. This price is fixed by law, and cattle breeders and farmers have to submit to it. The inevitable result is that retail prices keep rising, as butchers refuse to sell meat unless their profits are great, and every attempt to lower prices proves worse than useless, as it renders the shortage still more acute and further disorganizes distribution.

Other Food Costs More.

People in Italy are forced to eat less meat, but bread and macaroni are rationed and vegetables and fruit are exceptionally dear. Very often people get better to eat dear beef instead of poor vegetables. Besides, owing to increased wages, the standard of life of the laboring classes has improved, and while before the war meat was considered a luxury, now in many cases it is included among the prime necessities of life. In such circumstances it is quite natural that butchers should profit and get rich quick.

The food commissioner is blamed for this exceptionally acute situation, which, it is said, might have been averted had a rationing scheme been timely adopted. Possibly to some extent this is true, but rationing pure and simple is bound to prove a failure in a country like Italy, where the customs are different in each province, and where most people experience a great amount of satisfaction in evading a law, especially if food restriction is its object.

The military commissioners appointed to requisition live stock for the requirements of the army in future will requisition it as well for the civil population under identical conditions and at the same price. The food commissioner will decide the amount of beef and other kinds of meat assigned to each province, namely the weight and number of cattle to be requisitioned every month, and when they are slaughtered under state control the beef will be distributed among specially licensed butchers whose rate of profit is fixed by law.

No meat is to be sold on Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays, and butchers must sell only the meat given to them. Middlemen are practically abolished. Farmers and cattle breeders cannot compensate their losses by increasing the market price of cattle and the people will have to be satisfied with what they get.

Killed by Blood Poisoning

Used an old razor for paring his corns. Fooled, because a 25c bottle of Putnam's Corn Extractor will cure all the corns in a family for a year. Safe, because purely vegetable. Use only Putnam's Extractor, 25c at all dealers.

"CONDUCTOR 2471."

(Toronto Globe).

He was a young man, working on a Queen street car traveling down Rosses-vaies avenue about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The number on his cap was "2471." He was not officious, did not aim to attract attention—yet before the car had gone many blocks he had won the attention and the admiration of the passengers. It started at the Dundas street "Y," when approaching vehicles caused a nervous, white-haired little woman, with a big parcel in her arms, to be held at the sidewalk curb. Conductor 2471 saw her predicament, was at her side in a moment, carried her parcel over her arm, and assisted her on the car.

At the next stop—the College street intersection—several passengers were waiting. One was a woman with a baby in her arms and two other little children. He lifted on the youngsters, assisted the mother to a seat, and looked after the grip. "Thank you so much," exclaimed the surprised and appreciative recipient of his courtesy. And he went on with his business of collecting fares.

But by this time the young conductor was being noticed by passengers realizing that their comfort and convenience was part of his concern. A farmer who inquired regarding a street was given direction. A seat was found for a standing little girl.

Courtesy counts. A business man alighted at the Sunnyside stop to transfer. As he left he turned to four fellow-passengers standing on the rear platform. "Employees of that kind," he observed, nodding in the direction of the conductor, "would make the most hated corporation popular."
