Bome Hot Talk.

But Mr. Kelly's Irish blood was up. He suddenly rose to his feet again. "Mr. Speaker, an hour ago Mr. Prevost made an accusation against me. I will state, I may have to withdraw my words. But I will state that if the member for Terrebonne does not make his declaration, he is an infamous liar and a coward."

"I demand that those words be taken down by the clerk," shouted Mr. Lavergne, making his voice heard over the din.

goods house. Five years later he went to New York, where he joined a dry goods firm.

He failed a few years before the outbreak of the civil war, but immediately started a banking business, appreciating that the rebellion would mean a great demand for financiers to handle government loans.

Mr. Morton founded the banking house of Morton, Bliss & Co., in New York, and Morton, Rose & Co., in London, and dealt largely in government bonds.

Just before the close of the war, when he had accumulated a fortune, Mr. Morton gave a dinner to the creditors of his former dry goods firm. Every one found under his plate a check for the amount still owing to him, with interest. Mr. Morton's first essay in polities was in 1878, when he was elected to Congress from a New York district. He might have been President if his loyalty to the wishes of Senator Roscoe Conkling had not made him refuse the nomination for vice-president on the ticket headed by James A. Garfield in 1880.

THE STREET RAILWAY MAN'S (Saturday Night.)

H

(Saturday Night.)

A well-developed sense of humor is one of the assets of the general manager of the Toronto Street Railway, Mr. R. J. Fleming.

On a recent Sunday morning Mr. Fleming and his family drove down from their Wychwood home to atend the service at Trinity Methodist church. When they arrived, the church was crowded and the obliging usher could find no seats. He led Mr. Fleming and family down an asile, almost to the front of the church, but still failed to find room for them.

At last the humorous side of the situation appealed to R. J. Leaning toward the puzzled usher, he said in a quite audible whisper:

"Say, old man, if you can't get us seats, let's hang onto a strap somewhere."

The Montreal police dispersed a peaceful procession of Socialists by clubbing the processionlists. Socialism cannot be crushed by opposing to it official anarchy. That is just what the attack of the Montreal police was—anarchy. For anarchy is lawlessness, and the police acted contrary to the law when they clubbed men who were not breaking the law.
