

hears him then was the next to come. - She had lived with my Aunt Elizabeth on King St in Dorset where I was a little lad. - I suppose 6 or 7 years of age, of just 7 days. She said she was in the 6th office, and asked me if I had seen 'Willie' - that was the William - to whom she had been engaged. - as I recalled she and her brother also was a friend of Miss Knollys' but no relation came to me with Aunt Elizabeth after Willie's death - which affected her life. She never married but was at home, where she married an Italian workman and lived a dreamer in very comfortable circumstances. I don't recall his name & never saw her. Some in the very early days. - When I spoke of the house, she spoke of the pump that was in the hall, ^{means} behind of the main kitchen, I recall it well. - she spoke of the cooking and the meat being here on the sideboard of the dining room - there are outside the only things I can remember - except some 'pebbles' arranged there have always to go out somewhere in afternoon tea. - and the square was the house on one side of which the Congress lived. She kept saying how 'marvellous' their conversation was, 36. - to our surprise, when I spoke of William, it was she? I think, was said that William was the 'Saint' of the family - (He may have been Aunt Elizabeth)

Sophia (her father's sister) - This seemed to be an evening of family relations - the two children's family, with Mary or well, - then came some of Godfrey's relations, Mrs. Aunt Sophia - the object of the family being all together, that this was a ^{happy} ~~great~~ "trial" ~~from which it was hoped they had been to part. When he had nothing to be back at the time of the war -~~ Now asked if she were working for the blind - she said there are no blind here.
