John Hollett, of Beaufet, in the Southern District of Newfoundland, planter, a member of the Church of England, solemnly and sincerely declares, that I was in the Church of Beaufet, upon the first Sunday after the cleaning up of it, in expectation of the arrival of the Lord Bishop, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty one, when there were two new mould candles placed over the Communion Table, and that there were not any other candles in any other part of the Church.

That a short time afterwards, in a conversation I had with the Rev. William Kepple White, upon asking him whether he had an intention of having evening services in the Church, he informed me that he had not; and upon my further enquiring what then was the use of the Candles above alluded to, he, the said William Kepple White, expressly informed me, that he was sworn and bound by three oaths to have those two Candles upon or over the Communion Table.
And I, the said John Hollett, make this solemn declaration, &c., &c.
