right to say each night, "God bless the cans!"

Poor, pathetic mites! Many of them four and five years old! And in states where the laws are precise for the protection of the infant oyster and the young shrimp.

Thanksgiving(!) Cranberries

Nor may the cranberry—Thanksgiving joy—escape the shame that stains the shrimp, the oyster, the fruit and the vegetable. As one stands amid the marshes of New Jersey, watching a creeping army of men, women and children strip the vines of their fruit, there is evident the same hopelessness, helplessness, and misery. Each year the tenements of Philadelphia pour their hundreds into the cranberry bogs. A padrone herds them and drives them, and not even Legree, in his day of glory, ever exercised more autocratic power over human beings. He charges his victims double railroad fare, operates a commissary at which his herd must buy bad food at exorbitant prices; and, as a final gouge, exacts money "presents" at the end of the season.

Children as young as five are in the army that the padrone herds across the bogs from dawn to dusk, for there is the fear of frost; and what is human health in comparison with a perishable crop?

When night comes, and the tired wretches are allowed to take swollen hands and aching knees to bed, what then? For their housing there are rudely built barracks with rooms five and one-half by six and one-half. A four-foot bunk occupies half the space, under which are the mattresses for the children, and this one room, filled with flies and mosquitoes, serves for the cooking, eating and sleeping of an entire family.

Sickening Housing Conditions

Evil housing conditions, such as would shame a tenement, characterize the entire canning industry. Whether New Jersey, New York, Delaware or the Gulf Coast states, there is the same emphasis on squalor. Rude barracks, rough sheds, old box cars, ruined carriage houses—anything seems to be regarded as "good enough" for the canning families. Delaware, however, holds the record with a chicken coop converted into a dwelling for seventeen children and five adults.

This, by way of illustration, from the report of New York's commissioner of labor on canneries: "The surrounding grounds were frequently littered with filth, while the shanties and dormitories were so thoroughly congested that at times families of from six to ten members were compelled to live, sleep, and eat in a single room."

LLOYD GEORGE AND THE LORDS

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, speaking mainly in Welsh at Carnarvon, to an enthusiastic audience of 10,000 of his countrymen, made a brilliant attack on the revolutionary policy of the Lords, declaring that there was a deliberate conspiracy to thwart democratic government by denying a mandate for every Liberal Bill and assuming it for every Tory measure. The Parliamentary system was disintegrated and made futile when a Liberal Prime Minister had to go round to Belgrave, like a grocer's boy, and ask the butler what orders my lords had for the day. Every Tory measure was escorted politely to the Palace of the King, every Liberal measure was scowled at as a plebeian intruder in an aristocratic drawing-room. The Lords were now inciting to violence against the Liberal Acts—forgetting that they were giving the signal for a people's defiance of the Acts they hated, such as Enclosure and Game Laws. The Chancellor devoted one sentence only to the reform of the House of Lords. The present House, he said, must be abolished, and there would be a new Second Chamber, in which "all parties, all sections, all creeds" would have "equal treatment." But the Liberal trouble is that if this House of All the Virtues is set up, it becomes a rival to the House of Commons.—The Nation.

BRITISH COMMONS ADJOURNS

(Free Press Special Cable Service)

London, Aug. 20.—Deep regret for the recent Balkan war and hope for the permanence of the peace pact at Bucharest, was the keynote of the King's speech read by the Lord Chancellor at noon today, adjourning the British Parliament until November 3. The King also expressed extreme gratification at the amicable co-operation of the great powers in the Balkan negotiations. The session terminating is known officially as III. George V.

The Irish and Welsh bills will go on the calendar of the Commons again next year. The Commons passed for the first time a bill abolishing the present system of plural voting whereby those qualified to vote for members of parliament may vote in every constituency where they hold land. This was also rejected by the Lords.

Woman suffrage failed of enactment for the third time in three years. According to Lloyd George this action is due entirely to the "organized lunacy" of the militants. Early in the session the "cat-and-mouse" act was passed. As a cure for militancy it has proved a failure and the general antagonism is so bitter that it may be repeated next year.

The closing was marked by the usual stately scenes. The Commons, headed by the speaker and escorted by the usher of the Black Rod, appeared at the bar of the Lords to hear the reading of the King's message and the list of bills receiving his favor.
