GERMANS GIVE UP TWO WARSHIPS LOST FORTS BOMBARDED

For Various Reasons.

VPRES NOW STORM CENTRE OUTRANGED BY THE ENEMY

Gen. French Must Bear Brunt of the Fighting and Six German Army Corps Are Said To Be Advancing Against Him From Courtrai - Genera' German Retreat Is Now Anticipated.

LONDON, Nov. 4.- That the German army has abandoned its attempt te back its way along the Belgian coast to Calais is .. greed by all the official reports last night. A combination of inundated country, the remmant of the Belgian army under King Albert and the activity of the British warships seemingly all contributed toward ending the costly struggle.

A Ber!in official report attributes the failure of the Germans entirely to the flooded state of the country, where the water in places is over a man's head; but it is declared that the army of Emperor William withdrew in good orier and without

After nearly three weeks of desperate fighting, the brunt of the attack has now shifted to the Ypres region, where the British a.my of Field Marshal Sir John French, reinforced by Indians and territorials, apparently must meet another onslaught. To the scene of this contemplated battle, according to reports, Emperor William has gone to give encouragement to his men by his presence. News comes from Havre that the Germans near the coast are retreating to the eastward, abandoning their dead and wounded. The Belgian troops are moving on toward the Yser. They are discovering numerous evidences that the Germans are in precipitate flight in that vicinity. Germany yesterday began the assembling of six new army corps at Coutrai, Belgium, for an attack on the allies' line between Ypres and Arras, France. British aviators reort large forces of Germans marchng toward Ypres, which is expected be the vortex of the battling for the next week. The Germans seem to have abandoned their attempt to out their way through to Saint Omer, ontheast of Calais.

A special to The Times, dated Pas de Calais, says: "The desperate at-tempt of the Germans to take Ypres by storm has failed. The British still ld the town with rifle and bayonet. The German soldiers, even in overwhelming force, are no match for ours. Their infantry has been driven ack eastward and their artillery has again come into action at long range. Their shells fall short of the town. That was the position yesterday. On Saturday and Sunday, when the situation was critical, thousands of the inhabitants left the town. It is not yet safe for them to return. The enemy's attack has been repulsed but not yet finally crushed. The outposts of the two opposing armies are almost within a stone's throw of each other. Our sentries can hear the gramophone and the singing of the oldiers in the enemy's trenches. The battlefield is strewn with German to leap over them.

The Standard has the following from Paris: "The newspapers here are not allowed to give any details to substantiate their belief, but more than one declares itself in a position to affirm that the Germans are hurriedly preparing to retreat and may start falling back in force at any time. Particulars have already appeared in the London press of differ ent defence works thrown up by the enemy to enable them to clear out of Belgium in the best order possible while telegrams have arrived here stating that similar preparations are being made on the eastern frontier and in Alsace, particularly near Stras-

The Germans resumed their bom bardment of the city of Rheims with great violence on Sunday and Mon day, according to a despatch from Government Takes Drastic Action Bordeaux.

Germans Surprised.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 4 .- The Gerbrief period last week, had an unpleasant experience. They entered the town singing, as is their custom "Die Wacht am Rhein." The allies guns in the garrets of some of the houses and left sufficient men concealed to work them. The Germans were preparing to stay in the town all night, when suddenly the allies opened fire from the ment of a dangerous character, would be followed immediately by suppresleaving 1.000 killed.

Advance on Calais Is Abandoned | Monmouth Sunk and Goodhope Damaged by German Cruisers.

Idmiral Graf Von Spee Reports Having Met Goodhope, Monmouth, Glasgow and Otrante Off Coronel - Explosion on Goodhope Sets Ship on Fire-Glasgow

Now Interned In Coronel. VALPARAISO, Nov. 4 .- The British cruiser Monmouth was sunk and the cruiser Goodhope was badly damaged off Coronel, Chile, yesterday, when the German warships Gneisenau, Scharnhorst, Nurnberg, Leipzig and Dresden attacked the British fleet. It is declared that the crew of the Monmouth have all perished.
At last reports the Goodhope was on fire and it is believed she cannot be saved. At mid-day yesterday the German cruisers Scharnhorst, Nurnberg and Gneisenau were at anchor, unbarmed, in Valparaiso harbor, Admiral Graf Von Spee, commander of the German fleet in Pacific waters, arrived here yesterday morning and made the following report concerning a naval engagement with the British warships at sea off Coronel, last Surday evening: "On Sunday, Nov. 1, between six and seven o'clock in the evening, during a heavy rain and rough weather off Coronel, we sighted the British men-o'-war Goodhope, Monmouth and Glasgow and the armored cruise Otranto.

"An agagement ensued immediately. All the ships opened a brisk cannonade with all their artillery The Monmouth was sunk and the Goodhope after a great explosion on board, took fire. Her subsequent fate is unknown owing to darkness having set in.

vented our obtaining knowledge of the extent of it. "Our ships, the Scharnhorst and Nurnberg, were not damaged. The Gneisenau had six men wounded. The rest of our ships were undamaged." The British cruisers Goodhope, Monmouth and Glasgow were under command of Rear-Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock, and had been searching the coasts of South America for several weeks with the object of engaging the German cruisers which had been destroying the British merchant vessels

The British cruiser Monmouth, reported sunk in the engagement yesterday, was 440 feet long, 66 feet beam and of 9,800 tons displacement. She carried fourteen 6-inch guns, eight 3-inch guns, three 3-pounders and was atted with two 18-inch torpedo tubes. Her complement was 655 men. The Monmouth was built in 1899. The Goodhope, also reported lost, was the flagship of the squadron. She was 500 feet long, 71 feet beam and displaced 14,100 tons. She represented the British nation at the Jamestown Exposition in 1909. She had a complement of 900 men. The Goodhope was built thirteen years

The light cruiser Giasgow, which assaulted, and took refuge in the Amtook refuge at Coronel, was built in erican Consulate, with other panicular Sir David Henderson, Henry F. M. Wilson, James A. L. Haldane, Henry 1909. She is 430 feet long. The German armored cruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, are sister ships of 11,600 tons. Both were built in 1906 and are 440 feet long on the water line. The Nurnberg is a small cruiser of 3,540 tons and carries a complement of 295 men. She has ten 4.1-inch

The Dresden and Leipsic, which are reported to have been engaged in battle, but the whereabouts of which following it have not been divulged, also are small cruisers. Dresden is of 3,600 tons and the Leipsic of 3,250 tons. They have respectively complements of 321 and 286 men.

Bombs Intended For Rulers. LONDON, Nov. 4.—A Central News lespatch from North France, under date of Monday, says that a German airman skimming 5,000 feet above the Belgian town of Furnes, apparently with the knowledge that King Albert and President Poincare were going to review the cavalry drawn up before the Hotel de Ville, dropped several bombs, which, however, missed the square and did but slight damage a short distance away. Thereafter French and Belgian aeroplanes kept the sky clear of the enemy.

Seven Keys TO

Baldpate

EARLIDERR BIGGERS

Copyright, 1913, by the Bobbs-Merrill

He was deep in a discussion of the meters of the poet Chaucer when there came a knock at the door, and Mr. Lou Max's unpleasant head was thrust inside. "I been assigned," he said, "to sit up here in the hall and keep an eye out for the ghost Bland heard tramping about. And being of a sociable nature, I'd like to sit in your doorway, if you don't mind."

"By all means," replied Mages. "Here's a chair. Do you smoke?" "Thanks." Mr. Max placed the chair sidewise in the doorway of No. 7 and sat down. From his place he commanded a view of Mr. Magee's apartments and of the head of the stairs. With his yellow teeth he viciously bit and nug this guy. tne end from the cigar. "Don't let me interrupt the conversation, gentlemen," he pleaded. "We were speaking," said the professor calmiy, "of the versification of Chaucer. Mr. Magee"-

He continued his discussion in an even voice. Mr. Magee leaned back in his chair and smiled in a pleased way at the settings of the stage-Mr. Max in a cloud of smoke on guard at his door, the mayor and Mr. Bland keeping vigil by a telephone switchboard in the office below, watching for the flash of light that should tell them some one in the outside world wanted to speak to Baldpate inn; a mysterious figure who flitted about in the dark; a girl in 1892? Don't you remember the beautiful girl who was going to ask Mr. Magee to do her a service, blindly trusting her.

The professor droned on monotonously.

An hour passed. Mr. Max admitted when pressed that a good cigar soothed the soul and accepted another from Magee's stock. The professor contin ued to talk. Obviously it was his faclever, mister, but you don't fool me. vorite diversion. He seemed to be quoting from addresses. Mr. Magee pictured him on a Chautauqua platform, the white pitcher by his side,

As he talked Mr. Magee studied that portion of his delicate, scholarly face that the beard left exposed to the world. What part had Thaddeus Bolton, holder of the Crandall chair of comparative literature, in this network of odd alarms? Why was he at Baldby the rapid changes in the makeup of the inn colony, changes that left Mr. Magee gasping? He took them as calmly as he would take his grapefruit at the breakfast table. Only that morning Mr. Magee, by way of experiment, had fastened upon him the suspicion of murder, and the old man had not flickered an eyelasb. Mr. Max inserted a loud yawn into the professor's discourse. "Once I played chess with a Ger man," he said, "and another time I went to a lecture on purifying politics, but I never struck anything so monotonous as this job 1 got now. 1 any more proof? was just thinking as I set here how it all comes of people being suspicious of one another. Now, I've always held that the world would be a better place if there wasn't no suspicion in it. Nine times out of ten the suspicion ain't got a leg to stand on, if suspicion can be said to have a leg." Evidently Mr. Max desired the floor; graciously Professor Bolton conceded it to him. "Speaking of suspicion," continu the drab little man on the threshold, turning his cigar thoughtfully between his thin lips, "reminds me of a case told me by Pueblo Sam a few years ago. In some ways it's real funny, and in others it's sad as hades. Pueblo Sam was called in them terms because he'd never been west of Sixth avenue. He was a swell, refined gen- bricks in the Methodist church, as retleman who lived by his wits, and he had considerable."

"A confidence man," suggested Ma-"Something along that order," admitted Mr. Max. "but a good sport among his friends, you understand. Well, this case of suspicion Sam tells me about happened something like this: One scorching hot day in summer Sam gets aboard the Coney boat, his idea being to put all business cares away for an hour or two and just float calm and peaceful down the bay and cool off. So he grabs out a camp chair and hustles through the crowd up to the top deck. beside the pilot's hangout, and sits down to get acquainted with the breeze, if such there was. "Well, he'd been sitting there about ten minutes, Sam tells me, when along came about the easiest picking that ever got loose from the old homestead"-

"I beg your pardon," protested Professor Bolton. "The ready money, the loosened kale, the posies in the garden waiting to be plucked," elucidated Mr. Max. "This. guy. Sam says, was such a perfect rube he just naturally looked past him to see if there was a trail of wisps of hay into the swimming hole and he on the floor. For awhile Sam sits there with a grouch as he thought how hard it was to put business aside and get a little rest now and then and debating whether, being on a vacation, as it was, he'd exert himself enough to stretch forth his hand and take whatever money the gny had. While be was arguing the matter with himself the jay settled the question by coming over and sitting down near him. "He's in the city, he tells Sam, to enjoy the moving pictures of the streets, and otherwise forget the trees back home at grow the cherries in the bottom of the cocktail glasses. 'And believe me,' he says to Sam, 'there ain't none of those confidence men go-ing to get me. I'm too wise, he says.

"'I'll bet money you are,' Sam tells him laughing all over at the fish that was fighting to get into the net.

'Yes, siree,' says the last of the Mo hicans, 'they can't fool me. I can tell them as fur away as 1 can see 'em, and my eyesight's perfect. One of 'em comes up to me in City Hall park and tries to sell me some mining stock. I guess he ain't recovered yet from what I said to him. I tell you, they can't fool Mark Dennen,' says the guy.

"Sam told me that at them words he just leaned back in his seat and stared at the jay and whistled under his breath. Years ago, it seemed, Sam had lived in the town of Readsboro, Vt. and ran up and down the streets with one suspender and a stone bruise. and the kid that had run with him was Mark Dennen. And Sam says he looked at this guy from the woods that was running round crying to high heaven be needed a guardian, and be sees that sure enough it was the tow head Mark Dennen and-Sam told me comething seemed to bust inside him, and he wanted to stretch out his arms

" 'Mark Dennen,' shouts Sam, 'as I live. Of Readsboro, Vt. The kid I used to play with under the arc lights -don't you remember me?

"But Sam says the guy just looked him straight in the eye and shut his jaw and says, 'l suppose you'll be asking after my brother George next?" " 'You ain't got any brother George, you idiot!' laughs Sam. He told me he was thinking how he'd treat his old friend Mark to a dinner that would go down in history in Readsboro. 'Mark. you old rascal,' he says, 'don't you remember me? Don't you remember little Sam Burns that used to play andy over with you and that stole your old days in Readsboro? He was all het up by this time, Sam tells me, and all the old memories came creeping back, and he kept thinking he never was so glad to run across anybody in his life. 'You remember little Sam Burns, don't you?' he asks once more. "But this guy just looks back into Sam's eye, with his own cold as steel, and he says, says he: 'You're pretty

No. you don't come any games on Mark Dennen. "'But, Mark,' says Sam, 'I swear to you by all that's holy that I'm that kid-I'm Sam Burns. What proof do you want? Do you remember old Ed Haywood that used to keep the drug store right across from the postoffice, the guy that never washed his windows? I do. And Miss Hunter, that pate, and why was he so little moved taught the sixth grade school when we went there, a little woman with washed out gray eyes and a broken front tooth, and that pretty little girl, Sarah somebody-wait a minute, I'll get it or bust-Sarah-Sarah-Sarah Scott von used to be so sweet on? Did you marry her, Mark? And old Lafe Perkins, who used to be on hand whenever there was any repairs being made anywhere-rhe cane and a high, squeaky voice that he used to exercise giving orders about things that wasn't any of his business. Why, Mark, I remember 'em all. Good Lord, man,' says Sam, 'do you want

"But this country blockhead just looked Sam up and down and remarks. judicious: 'It's certainly wonderful how you know all these things-wonderful. But you can't fool me, he says, 'you can't fool Mark Dennen.' "

Mr. Max paused in his narrative fora moment The sound of voices came up from the office of Baldpate inn. One, that of the mayor, boomed loudly and angrily. In an evident desire to drown it Mr. Max went on with spirit: "Well, gentlemen, it got to be a point of honor, as you might say, for Sam toconvince that guy. He told me be never wanted anything so much in his life as for Mark Dennen to give in. It was a bot afternoon, and he'd comeaboard that boat for a rest, but he peeled off his collar and started in. He gave Mark Dennen the number of ported in the Readsboro Citizen at the time it was built. He told him the name of the piece Mark's sister recited at the school entertainment in the spring of 1890. He bounded on all four sides the lot where the circuses played when they came to Readsboro. He named every citizen of the town, living or dead, that ever got to be known outside his own family, and he brought children into the world and married them and read the funeral service over them, and still that bonehead from the woods sat there, his mouth open, and says: 'It's beyond me how you know all that. You New Yorkers are slicker then I give ye credit for. But you can't fool me. You ain't Sam Burns. Why, I went to school with him.' "They was drawing near Coney now," went on Mr. Max, "and Sam's face was purple and he was dripping with perspiration, and rattling of Readsboro happenings at the rate of ten a second, but that Mark Dennen he sat there and wouldn't budge from his high horse. So they came up to the pier, Sam almost weeping real tears and pleading like his heart would break: 'Mark, don't you reme that time we threw little Bill Barnaby couldn't swim a stroke and nearly drowned on us? and still getting the stony face from his old pal.
