Jean says; It's a hard, hard row to hoe even for a girl who has health beauty and influential friends to help her make a start. Girls are at-tracted by the glmour and the light-ind seldom look ceeper into the gaudy tingel trimmings. If any of them had the slightest idea of the endless amount of work entailed ir the production of, --say, one song, she would have her artistic ambit ions curtailed at the very start. The first thing to do is to get a play-wright who understands you and your individual style. Then you think and study and plan to elaborate some idea until both your heads, are
