

THE WHITE PLAGUE.

One-Sixth of All the Deaths
Due to Consumption.

Its Ravages Spare No Class—Rich and Poor Alike Fall Victims—How This Dread Trouble May be Prevented.

Consumption has been well named the great white plague. One-sixth of all the deaths occurring in Canada annually are due to the ravages of this terrible disease. Its victims are found among all classes; rich and poor alike succumb to its insidious advance. Only a few years ago the victim of consumption was regarded as incurable, and horror-stricken friends watched the loved one day by day fade away until death came as a merciful release. Now, however, it is known that taken in its earlier stages consumption is curable, and that by a proper care of the blood—keeping it rich, red and pure—those who are pre-disposed to the disease escape its ravages. Consumption is now classed among the preventable diseases, and those who are pale, easily tired, emaciated, or show any of the numerous symptoms of general debility should at once purify the system by enlisting and purifying the blood—thus strengthening not only the lungs, but all parts of the body.

Among those who have escaped a threatened death from consumption is Mrs. Robert McCracken, of Marshallville, Ont. Mrs. McCracken gives her experience that it may be of benefit to some other sufferer. She says: "A few years ago I began to experience a general weakness. My appetite was poor; I was very pale; I was troubled with shortness of breath and a smothering feeling in my chest. Besides these symptoms I became very nervous, at times dizzy and faint, and my hands and feet would get as cold as ice. As the trouble progressed I began to lose flesh rapidly, and in a short time was only a shadow of my former self. I had good medical treatment, but did not get relief, and as a harsh cough set in I began to fear that consumption had fastened itself upon me. This was strengthened by a knowledge that several of my ancestors had died of this terrible disease. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I at once procured a supply and had not taken them long when I noted a change for the better. By the time I had taken six or eight boxes I was able to move around the house again and felt better and stronger in every way. I continued the use of the pills until I had taken a dozen boxes, when all my old time strength and vigor had returned, and I was as well as ever. During the time I was using the pills my weight increased twenty-six pounds. Several years have since passed, and in that time not a symptom of my former trouble has made itself apparent, so that I think I am safe in saying that my cure is permanent. I believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life, and I strongly advise all women to give them a trial. Pink Pills are a tonic and not a purgative medicine. They enrich the blood from the first dose to the last and thus bring health and strength to every organ in the body. The genuine pills are sold only in boxes with the full name, 'Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People,' printed on the wrapper. If your dealer cannot supply you send direct to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and the pills will be mailed post paid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50.

ABOUT BRESFORD.

How Mr. O'Connor's Paper Describes Him.

Lord William Bressford was in appearance something between Lord Charles and Lord Marquis. Like them, he was just about the middle height, perhaps a little above it; like them, he had large, blue, open eyes—eyes that were almost infantile in their innocence and transparency. If it were not that there was a certain quizzical expression in the twinkling of the eye, the observer of the man of the world who had done everything, seen everything, known everything, the figure was alert and boyish. He was a man who seemed always in condition—ready for a fight in a campaign or anything that was going. Though the moustache was white, the cheeks like those of a youth, and the eyes the clearness of eternal youth. With all that Bressford had six hundred, he had all the qualities attributed to the typical Irishman—a ready wit and the softest and sweetest of tongues. For nearly a generation he was the idol of all the Anglo-Indian community, and if half the legends told about him were well founded, he deserves a high place in the annals of the beaux sabreurs who are as restless in the boudoir as they are daring in the field. As military secretary to three Viceroys, he had the most delicate of offices; but his infinite tact, inexhaustible good humor, knowledge of men and knowledge of women, were equal to that or any other emergency.—M. A Tale of Two Brothers.

A Fable by GEO. ADE.

Once there were two Brothers, who started away to College at the same time. Just before they boarded the Train, Pa. led them aside and handed them some splendid Advice. He told them that they were now ready to mould their Futures. He said he wanted them to stay in it. Evenings and Bore hard, and he hoped they would mind the Faculty and keep away from the Cigarette Fiends who play the Banjo and talk about Actresses. He wanted them to stand high in their Classes and devote their Spare Moments to Reading, rather than to the Whimsies and Mimical Follies of a University Town.

So they rode away on the Varnished Cars, William reading about the Goths and Vandals and Cholly playing Seven-Up with a Shoe Driver from Lowell, who gave him several Yarns that he afterwards told as his own.

At the University William remembered what Pa. had said, so he cooped himself up in his room and became a Dig and soon enough was greatly despised as a pet of the Professors. Cholly wore a striped Jersey and joined the Track Team and worked into the Glee Club. He went to his room when all the other Places had closed up. Every time a Show struck Town he was in the Front Row to gey the Performers and pick up some new Gags, so as to maintain his reputation as an Original Comic. He went calling on all the Town Girls who would stand for his Fresh Ways, and he was known as the best Dancer in the Ki Ki Chapter of the Gamma Omicron Greek Letter Fraternity. The reports sent home indicated that William was corraling the Honors in Scholarship and Cholly was getting through each Exam by the skin of his Teeth, but he had been elected a Yell Captain and could do his 100 Yards in Ten Seconds Flat. Pa. would write to Cholly now and then and tell him to Brace Up and give him a Hunch that Life was full of Sober Responsibilities, and therefore he had better store his Mind with useful Knowledge and Chop off all the Frits and Foppes, whereupon Cholly would write back that he needed Fifty by Return Mail to pay for Chemicals Used in the Laboratory.

By the time that both were Seniors William had grown a fuzzy Glimmer in front of each Ear and was troubled with weak Eyes. He always had a volume of Kant under his arm and seemed to be in a Brown Study as he walked across the Campus. Cholly kept himself neat and Nobby, and seemed almost to have a new suit on his back. He had two or three Conditions to his discredit, and had only an Outside Chance of taking his Degree. He was Manager of the Football Team, and had been elected because of his Qualities as a Mixer, and had earned the affectionate Nickname of "Rockers." He was a great Hand to get acquainted with any girl who dared to show herself near the Halls of Learning, and by constant Practice he had developed into a Star Chinner, so that he could Talk Left to almost any one of them and make her believe that all the Flowers that ever bloomed she was the one and only thirty thousand dollar Carnation.

William kept away from Hoots and Promenades, because he remembered what Pa. had said about the Disfranchising Influence of the "Title-Tattle" of Artificial Society. The only girl he knew was a Professor's Sister, fifty-one years old, with whom he was wont to discuss the Theory of Unconscious Cerebration. Then he would drink a cup of Young Hyson Tea and go home at a quarter to nine P. M. Cholly at about that time would be starting out in his Primrose and Docksader Suit to write his name on Dance Cards and get acquainted with the Real Folks.

On Commencement Day William received the Cyrus J. Binker Prize of a set of Books for getting the Highest General Average of any one in the Class. Cholly had managed to Squeeze Through. The Faculty gave him a degree for fear that if it didn't he might come back and stay another Year. After they had graduated Pa. gave them a Father Talk. He said he was proud of William, but Cholly had been a Trial to him. Still he hoped it was not too late to set his Boy on the Right Track. He was going to put both of them into a Law Office, and he wanted them to Read Law for all they were worth, and not be lured away from their Work by the Glittering Temptations of Life in a Big City. William said he was prepared to Read Law until he was black in the Face. Cholly said he wouldn't mind picking a few Heats with Blackstone and Cooley now and then, if he found that he could spare the Time. The Father groaned inwardly, and did not see much Hope for Cholly.

When the two Sons became Fixtures in the Office of an established Law Firm, William kept his Nose between the Leaves of a Court Report and Cholly was out in the other Room warming up to the influential Clients and making Dates for Luncheons and Golf Foursomes. Within three months after they started at the Office, William had read all the Books in the Place and Cholly was out spending three weeks at the Summer Home of the President of a Construction Company, who was stuck on Cholly's dialect and liked to have him around because he was such a good Dresser and made it lively for the Women.

Out at this Country Place it happened that Cholly met a girl who did not know much about law, so Cholly thought it would be an Act of Kindness to help her find out. When he sat out with her in the Cool of the Evening and gave her the Burning Gaze and the Low, entrancing Love Purr, that he had practised for Four Years at the University, she stopped him before he was half finished and told him that he need not work Overtime, because he was the Boy for Nellie. She said she had had him Picked Out from the Moment that she noticed how well his Coat sat in the Back.

In one of the large Office Buildings of the City there is a suite finished in Dark Wood. At a massive roll top Desk sits Cholly, the handsome Lawyer, who is acquainted with all the Club Fellows, Society Bucks and Golf Demons. When a client comes in with a Knotty Question Cholly calls in a Blond Stenographer to jot down all the Points in the Case. Then he and the client roast a few mutual Acquaintances and the Client departs. Cholly rings a Bell and Brother William comes out of a Side Room with his Coat bunched in the Back and his trousers Bagged at the Knees. His Cravat is tied on one corner, and he needs a Shave, but he is full of the Law. Cholly turns all the Papers over to him and tells him to wrestle with the authorities and give a few Days and Nights. Then William slips back into his Hole and Humps himself over the Calf-bound Volumes while Cholly puts on his State-colored Goggles and Top Coat and goes out to where Simpson is holding a Carriage Door open for him. He and Nellie take the air in the $2.00 Victoria that he bought with his salary, and later in the Day they dine with the Stockton Bonds and finish at the Theatre.

Cholly often reflects that it was a great piece of Foresight on Pa's part to counsel Studious Habits and Rigid Mental Discipline, for if William had not been a Grind at College, probably he would not have proved to be such a Help around the Office, and although William gets the Loser's End of the Fees and is never Called on to make a witty Speech at a Banquet given by the Bar Association, he has the Satisfaction of knowing he is the Silent Partner of the best dressed Attorney in Town and one who is welcome wherever he goes.

World's Idea of a Wife.

Some women who are to marry profess to be men, and to do so in law, or even theology, in order to be able to sympathize intelligently and helpfully with the spiritual or intellectual pursuits of the husband-to-be and in a way which will make her a part of his brain with her own, and thus lay broad and deep the foundation for a super-happy married life. To be wholly absorbed in him, even to making self-sacrifice the stepping-stone and highway for his success, stands everywhere and for all time the woman's ideal of a wife. But when a man always goes on and on, wife he is nobody's ideal of a husband. While women are proud to be known as the wife of a distinguished man, no man is pleased to be noticed as the husband of a distinguished woman.—Mary Wager-Fisher, in the December Woman's Home Companion.

Sure Cure for the Grip.

We don't know much about the effect of material media upon the human system, but we did write and take the following prescription, which knocked a gripe higher than Gilderoy's kite—"Four quarts of whiskey, into which were dissolved four ounces of loaf sugar. To this we added a teaspoonful of water and another quart of whiskey and then placed over a hot fire and let boil sufficiently long to boil out the water. We then stirred in a little more whiskey to cool and gulped it down without batting an eye. In order to remove the knots from our mouth we took a little more whiskey."—Glenwood, Col. Avalanche.

One Day for Bathing in Mexico

Only one country in the world has a national bathing day, and that is Mexico. The day is the 14th of June, and in that forty-four hours so limited everyone in the republic, from President Diaz down to the commonest servant, is expected to take a good wash. Unwashed thousands allow no water to touch their persons except on this occasion, known as St. John's day.

A PLEASANT
DISAPPOINTMENTA Cheltenham Man is Agreeably
Surprised—An Old Grudge Paid.

Mr. Turner After a Successful Fight to Get Rid of One Enemy Finds That in Doing so He Has Put Away Another.

Cheltenham, Ont., Feb. 11.—(Special.)—A fortunate man, indeed, is Mr. Charles Turner, of this place. For years Mr. Turner has been suffering with kidney disease. It gave him great pain, and for the last two or three years rheumatism has added to his already heavy burden of sickness, and he has seldom known an hour free from pain. Not associating the rheumatism with the old kidney trouble, and despairing of curing the former, Mr. Turner bought and used Dodd's Kidney Pills to try and dispose of the kidney trouble. He used a few boxes, and the pain in his back kept getting less and less, and finally went away. All the unpleasant symptoms of kidney trouble disappeared, and what was still more strange to Mr. Turner, he has not since been bothered with rheumatism.

He is so grateful for the miraculous results of the treatment that he has been cheerfully telling his friends and neighbors his experience. He says: "Dodd's Kidney Pills have cured me of long standing case of kidney disease. I was also a sufferer from rheumatism, and although I took the pills for the kidney trouble, I was surprised to find that when this disease was cured the rheumatism also disappeared. This was over a year ago, and I have not been troubled since. I used in all six boxes. The first two boxes did not appear to do me any good, but I persevered, and the result is that I am now a healthy man."

Of course, to those who recognize rheumatism as what it really is, a "big heart" of the Queen's soldiers. When, therefore they saw the Royal Scots launch themselves like the levin-bolt at five times their number, they held their breath for a time, wondering what the end might be, but when they saw the bloody bayonets of the First Foot sentry and utterly destroy the hated Dutchmen, they opened their throats and yelled their applause across the river—Cassell's History of the Boer War.

Reptilian Reflections.

The editor of an Edinburgh newspaper of some importance had been condemned to pay damages for libel upon a merchant of the same city. Among other compliments that had passed between the parties to the suit was a remark by the merchant that the editor, who was of short, stout figure, was a "great adder." Some time afterward the editor reviewed himself for losing his suit, in an article upon some statistics which his old enemy had put together, by remarking that everybody knew that Mr. Duncan MacLaren was "a great adder."

Englishmen and the Queen.

Curiously enough the great mass of Englishmen knew little or nothing of the sovereign who was their Queen. The first suggestion of the idea of the part she took in the government of her realm and her people; they knew practically nothing of the controlling and dominating force she exercised in international and domestic politics. But about this they cared nothing. It was sufficient for them to know that she was a good woman, a woman who was always ready to help to her people, who shared with them their joys as well as their sorrows, who was keenly interested in everything that could make them better and happier. And perhaps more than anything else was the knowledge that she was a woman who had suffered much, whose heart had been sorely wounded, and whose spirit often tried, and yet through it all she had remained serene, hopeful, always an inspiration for the weary and the afflicted. Perhaps that was the real secret of the devotion which she inspired in Englishmen the world over.—A. Maurice Low, in Harper's Weekly.

WHEN BLOOD IS HOT.

A Bit of War as It Was Played by the Scots.

At last, by superhuman efforts, some 200 burghers pressed up to within 100 yards of "the slaughter-house," after having picked off most of the men in that trench. They crept up a few yards more; then, rising, poured in a volley and rushed at the slaughter. But behind the "slaughter-house" were the Royal Scots—and a mud-stained, blood-stained, unwashed, unkempt set of ruffians they looked. They saw the Boers rushing, and their warrior hearts beat quick with joy. Shortly, like a man in a dream, their captain gave the word, "Fix bayonets." It was done in a trice. "Ready!" Then loaded their rifles. "A volley, my lads, and then the steel. All together!"—the whistle blows. A flame flies along the parapet. Then over the stone walls spring the Royal Scots. Once they shouted; only once.

Then the slaying began. Grimly they thrust in the steel, searing through all that stood before them; through bone and sinew, through heart and lungs, through limb and trunk. So fierce, so vengeful were the strokes that the red point at once came out at the other side. The burghers were brave enough; let no man deny it. But they were as sheep when the handful of Scots leaped on them like a troop of lions with fascinated interest. They must either run or die. So they ran—and leaving mangled bodies of friends, and kinsfolk, and comrades dying the kopjes with their blood.

Again the garrison had triumphed, and from the heights across the Caledon, where the Basuto country was, burst shouts and songs of triumph over the taunts of derision. Fifty thousand throats swelled the chorus. Ever since the siege began the black warriors had been gathered in their thousands on these heights, watching with fascinated interest the struggle of the white man. Like the spectators at a medieval tournament, they had applauded the gallant deeds of the combatants, and as they saw the British holding out day after day, night after night, against the assault of enormous odds, they came to have a profound trust and confidence in the "big heart" of the Queen's soldiers. When, therefore they saw the Royal Scots launch themselves like the levin-bolt at five times their number, they held their breath for a time, wondering what the end might be, but when they saw the bloody bayonets of the First Foot sentry and utterly destroy the hated Dutchmen, they opened their throats and yelled their applause across the river—Cassell's History of the Boer War.

fever, or other almost mortal sickness, a man or woman sometimes will gain a pound a day from taking an ounce a day of SCOTT'S EMULSION and the gain be healthy.

The ounce gives strength to get the pound; there is no miracle in it.

Body and mind are weak; digestion is weak; and hunger is ravenous.

SCOTT'S EMULSION of Cod Liver Oil is the food to begin and go on with. It furnishes strength to digest a little easy other food; and a little grows to enough. But the gain is nearly all fat.

The bones had not lost much; the muscles had lost, and had not got back their strength; they have lost there bulk; the fat was all gone.

The fat has come back; the muscle slowly recovers its bulk, more slowly its strength—the bulk of muscle was fat—and the bones are about the same as before.

It is SCOTT'S EMULSION of Cod Liver Oil that starts the body going again—give it time.
