A LINER'S LARDER.

Vast Amount of Food Consumed on Ocean Crossings.

They do not vie for ocean liners on the "snack-from-the-joint-and-two-veg." principle. Here are some items culled from a large Atlantic liner company's food bill for one year:
Meat: Fresh beef, pork, veal, mutton and lamb over 10,000,000 pounds. Poultry and game: Ducks, fowls, turkeys, etc., more than 1,000,000 pounds. Fish, about 1,000,000 pounds, says the Washington Post. Beverages: Champagne, char-let, minerals, etc., 800,000-odd bottles, besides 500,000 gallons of lager beer. The amount of bread consumed was 3,900,000 pounds.
Potatoes stand at 20,000,000 pounds, butter at 12,000 pounds, and ice at 24, 000,000 pounds. Cigarettes and cigars were smoked up to the tune of 2,327,223.
Taking just this last item, and allowing three cigars and seven cigarettes as a daily dose per head, the number of smokers consumed in one single year in tobacco lines would keep ten men in tobacco every day of their existence for a period of about 70 years.

Uses of Common Salt.

A little salt thrown on the flame will clear it for broiling meat. Marble wash stands that have become discolored may be scoured first with wet salt, and if that does not remove the stain, with salt and lemon mixed.
Salt mixed with vinegar is excellent for cleaning copper utensils.
To remove from rust, wet the spots with salt and lemon juice and hold the material over the steam of a tea kettle, then put out in the sun.
Salt and lemon mixed will often remove ink stains that are fresh.
To set colors in cotton materials, soak before washing in strong salt water.
A pinch of salt added to cream will make it whip more quickly.
Caked butters and candy are both improved by adding a pinch of salt.
To beat the white of an egg quickly, add a little salt. In making mayonnaise, the salt should go in last.
Greases on top of a hot stove lid can be quickly rubbed off by putting salt on the scrubbing brush.
In scouring lodges, strong salt water or wet salt is a great cleanser.—New York Times.

A Few Horse Don'ts.

Don't ask me to "back" with blind on; I'm afraid to.
Don't let some blackhead drive me that has less sense than I have.
Don't run me down a steep hill, for if anything should give way I might break your neck.
Don't whip me when I get frightened or I will expect it next time and may make you trouble.
Don't trot up hill, for I have you, the buggy and myself to carry. Try running up hill with a load yourself.
Don't drive me with an "over check" on; the sun hurts my eyes and I can't see where to step. It's inhuman and cruel.
Don't try to stop when you say "whoa," and this you can do without jerking my head off or tearing my mouth. It may check me if the lines should drop or break and save a runaway and smashup.—California Voice.

How Royal Ladies Propose.

The Future Consort is Relieved of Taking the Initiative.

When a reigning queen is to be married she must broach the subject first to her future consort. The same rule holds good with regard to all royal ladies who marry commoners.
Queen Victoria has told how she managed to "put the question" to Prince Albert—how she first showed him Win-dors and its beauties and the distant landscape and then said: "All this may be yours." The Queen of Holland, on a like occasion, simply sent a sprig of white heather, begging Prince Henry to look out its meaning in a book of flowers and their meaning. The Duchess of Argyll took the following means of proposing to the Marquis of Lorne. She was about to attend a state ball and gave it out that she would choose as her partner for the first dance the man she intended to honor. She selected the marquis, who subsequently became her husband.
But perhaps the most interesting of all ways chosen was that of the Duchess of Fife. She took the earl, as he then was, to a drawer and showed him his contents. There he saw a number of trifles he had given her at different times, including sprigs of several kinds of flowers, now dead, he picked for her at different times. He was much impressed at the sight, nor did it require words on her part to make her meaning plain.

FUN AT THE TABLE.

Stimulating the Appetite by Cheerfulness and Freedom From Worry.

It is astonishing to one who has not studied the subject thoughtfully to learn how completely under the control of the nervous system, or rather of the emotions, the entire digestive apparatus is.

It is a matter of everyday experience that the appetite is under the subjection of the feelings, although not of the will. The impulse to celebrate any good news by a dinner is founded upon the fact that when one is pleased and elated hunger is excited.
In early times this hunger was gratified on the moment, just as the accompanying thirst too often is now, but the modern man usually defers his gratification to a suitable occasion.

The loss of appetite caused by bad news or misfortune of any kind is too well known to need more than mention. Worry or physical fatigue will often act in the same way. The same causes that destroy the appetite will also act to a similar effect upon the control of digestion. It is a matter of common experience that any disagreeable occurrence during or just after a meal will stop digestion and may bring on a bilious attack with headache, nausea and other ailments. Concentration of the mind or anxiety will act in the same way.

On the other hand, as the appetite is stimulated by good news and mental elation, so digestion is favored by whatever promotes gaiety and high spirits.

"Laugh and grow fat." like so many popular sayings, is an expression which contains much truth. Dyspepsia is a malady that will seldom be found in the family where the dinner gives occasion for cheerful talk and mirth and where all worry and "dis-gruntlement" and especially quarrelling, are under a ban.

Every member of the family should make it an absolute rule to put worry and all thoughts of business or study aside for the moment and to come to the table prepared to eat with a moral and gay. This is not only a moral duty, but rests upon the very physical reason that his appetite will be better and his food will taste better and will be better digested.

In this connection it goes without saying that bill- and disagreeable letters should never be the accompaniment of the morning meal, because a day started with chagrin is a very hard day to straighten out.—From Youth's Companion.
