To the Editor of the Herald Signal. Goderich 29th June, 1867.

Sir.—In the last issue of the Star, I observe a letter written over the signature of "Observer," regarding the article on the "Observation" of the North Riding of the Province, and in which is promised a picture of the latter for the next week's issue. Now as it is evident that the writer of that letter is conscientious, I have never seen Mr. Gibbons with his usual lucid and forcible manner, as a public speaker. If indeed public speaking counts in a string together an unlimited quantity of unmeaning words, in which the main difficulty, and an insupportable one it seems to me, is to discover a single new or original idea, or even one single grain of common sense, then indeed Mr. Gibbons would be hard to find much less everywhere, and he should be sent to the Local Legislature by all means and without delay. But as it is not patent to the intelligent citizens of the North Riding, that the assembled wisdom of Ontario would be much influenced by such broadside of words, I feel it my duty to respectfully call attention to the quiet paths of private life to collect his scattered ideas and lament the follies of his latest attempt to humiliate the Legislative halls of Ontario were to be preceded with men of "Observer's" ability, and such as "Observer" is content to be lectured by the logical grandeur of the most eminent of his own "Observer's" next goes into the natural abilities of Mr. Gibbons, his learning, energy and perseverance, (with which however "Observer" is not acquainted) and the combination of all these has on Mr. Gibbons' part, been asserted by the humor and wit of many a more successful humorist. Now as I intended to be just while writing, I must say that Mr. Gibbons has not a faint shadow of natural ability, an ability which is not every day, yet one which if properly cultivated, has resulted in raising Mr. Gibbons high above the level at which he has settled down, and from which I fear he will never rise, day by day, to the weight that already overloads him.

His stores of information which appear to have blinded "Observer" are of the shallow order, gathered together as such will be in the trade in the most common and least valuable of the stores of information, and such as will not stand the test of even a moderate inquiry; in fact to use a plain phrase, a little of it good, some of it bad, and much of it worse, but all of it together, that is, most patient and discerning supporter can with difficulty discern what he is driving at; whether he is talking of the New Dominion of Ontario, or of the North Riding.

Then again his energy, here "Observer" has made another error in his judgment; he has been misled by the memory of the which has passed into a by word, for the real matter. I have often been astonished at the bounded stock, brains and energy, which is ever at the ready command of Mr. Gibbons, and which he so well knows how to bring to his assistance, and which he so well knows how to use, that he is able to do so much in the way of the exhibitions yet vouchsafed us by that able and brilliant young man. THE SOLDIER AND THE SEY.

"I shall have to give up the search, Richard," said the soldier, looking at his watch. "It is now twelve o'clock, and I must be going to bed."

"I cannot imagine how it could have been done," said the soldier, looking at his watch. "It is now twelve o'clock, and I must be going to bed."
