FRIDAY, MAY 21st, 1886.

Things are looking brighter for the Home Rule party in Great Britain.

If the cry of "Canada for the Canadians" be a loyal watchword, isn't "Ireland for the Irish" just as loyal? Let our Tory N.P. abouters reply.

The Dominion Government can give hundreds of thousands of dollars to parliamentary pets, but auditors are allowed to accumulate at the mouth of Goderich harbor without any action being taken by the Marine Department to speedily remedy the matter. There will be a decided improvement in the shipping prospects of Goderich when the Liberals get into power, as they will at the next election.

RECAUSE Mr. Cameron, of Huron, spoke on Sir John Macdonald's Northwest Representation Bill and pointed out that for years the Government had opposed such a measure and only yielded after the people had rebelled, Mr. Thomas White's organ, the Montreal Gazette, says the Opposition opposed the granting of representation to the Northwest Territories. That is a fair sample of the party exigencies Minister's regard for truth or honesty.—[Hamilton Times.]

A NUMBER of the ignorant Tory editors are busily engaged in stating that M. C. Cameron, M.P. for West Huron, dared not formulate his charges against the subsidized Tory members and their friends on the floor of Parliament. One of the know-nothing sheets complained this week that Mr. Cameron was still a "dumb dog" on the question, although nearly three months of the session had expired. For the benefit of the ignorant Tory editors and that portion of the public which receives political life (?) from them, we might say that Mr. Cameron took the earliest opportunity possible, May 4th, to repeat the charges of corruption against the Government, and to arraign the "Forty Thieves" on the floor of the House. The able speech of the member for West Huron will be found in the "House of Commons Debates" of May 4.

It is a satisfaction to know that although the Irish section of every community has been looked upon as being turbulent to a very large degree, events are fast proving that the Irish are not habitual lawbreakers, but, on the contrary, can usually be found arrayed on the side of law and order. The recent Chicago riots are an instance of this regard. Not only were the Irishmen conspicuous by their absence on the side of the rioters, but most of the gallant policemen who suffered and died to maintain the law were sons of the Emerald Isle. The police force in many of the Canadian and American cities are conspicuously Irish. The following is the national complexion of the "boys in blue" of the New York force:

Of the 2,936 members of the New York police force, 1,745 are natives of the United States, 974 of Ireland, 30 of England, 14 of Scotland, 13 of Canada, and 136 of Germany.

The Mail is continually carping at the policy of the Minister of Education, and a somewhat candid friend—the Tory Sentinel-Star, of Cobourg—gives it a talking to thus:—

"Will not someone kindly induce the Mail to make an end, for a while at least, of its foolish and petty grumbling at the Education Department? We get column after column of senseless and foolish twaddle that is supposed to be criticism of Hon. Mr. Ross' work. There have been very costly and serious blunders made in the department, but the very course pursued by the Mail, with its childish and ignorant fault-finding, makes these blunders possible. Our educational system is necessarily a political institution, to some extent now. The action of the Mail is not tending to improve matters one bit. A little practical knowledge on the part of the writer of the articles, would probably prevent both him and the paper being made a laughing stock of throughout the country."

The letter to the Guardian by this gentleman (Rev. A. Andrews) from which the SIGNAL takes an extract, was never intended as an attack on the Government, as our column would have its readers to believe, but merely to illustrate the way in which the Indians are treated by the unprincipled white settlers in the country.—[Exeter Times.]
That's just what we claim. Mr. Cameron has got his strongest points against the Government from those who at that time had no idea that their evidence was condemning the Government. Mr. Andrews' testimony and that of the Government officials agree as to the neglect of the Indians, by Government officials. A lawyer has a strong case who can prove the guilt of the prisoner by the evidence of the prisoner's own witnesses.

The editor of the Star is an elder of Knox church. M. C. Cameron is a fellow communionist. The elder loses no opportunity of abusing his fellow weekly, likens him to Ananias, accuses him of falsehood, and in every way leads the public to think that Mr. Cameron is one devoid of all claim to respect and confidence. If the pious elder really believes this, why does he not seek to purge the church of this untruthful man? If Mr. Cameron is all that the elder in his private states him to be, the elder's duty is clear. If the elder, and not Mr. Cameron is the liar, as the Seaford Expressor clearly and decently shows him to be, then the elder is a disgrace to his office. It is a scandal to the church that a man holding office in it, should publicly, and in the most foul and indecent manner, abuse a fellow member, knowing and believing, as the editor of the Expressor has shown, that the offensive articles are "absolutely untrue." It is an ill bird that fouls its own nest, and long prayers are of little avail to a man who weekly bears false witness against a fellow church member.

SENATOR John O'Donohoe disclosed some of Sir John Macdonald's double-dealing Friday last in the Senate. Particulars of the case are given elsewhere in this issue. We do not draw attention to the matter to say a solitary word to the praise of John O'Donohoe—he has made his bed and he should now lie in it, so far as his barter and sale in 1882 is concerned. But we do say that it is a little hard to see his Orange friends turn so savagely upon him in the present crisis. When in 1883, O'Donohoe came to this section under the auspices of the Orange party, and to further the interests of ex-County Master Johnston for parliamentary honors, he was cheered to the echo by the loudest sons of William we have in our midst. In Goderich town hall he received a perfect ovation, so far as noisy cheering was concerned, from the members of the Orange body who were present at the meeting. He went to Kingsbridge in company with Brother Johnston, and did his level best to make things solid there for the Orange nominees. Under these circumstances it comes with a bad grace from the Orange Tories in this locality to say a solitary word against John O'Donohoe. We admit John sold himself in 1882 to Sir John Macdonald, but he fulfilled his part of the contract; and was grossly deceived by Sir John Macdonald for his pains. His crime now is that he was not willing to continue in the traces after Sir John had proved faithless to his solemn pledges.

A GREAT deal of talk is at present going on with regard to the question of Home Rule for Ireland. Some of the "Loyalists" have got to ranting about the guarding of the rights of "Protestant Ulster," and one would think to hear them talk that Ulster was a part of the Green Isle where Catholicism had never taken root or sprouted. Such is not the case, as the Protestant and Roman Catholic bodies are very nearly equally represented in the so-called "Protestant province of Ulster"—standing about 52 Protestants to 48 Roman Catholics out of every 100 of the population. There's another strange phase in this question, and it is this, that those who are most blatant about the "rights of minority in Ireland" were as dumb as oysters when Ireland was ruled for the last 33 years by coercion, and when "the rights of the majority" were trampled under foot. Following is the Protestant and Roman Catholic population of Ulster by counties:

	P.	R. C.

The Democratic party of New York has been purging itself of the "boodles" aldermen, but as yet we hear nothing of the Conservatives of Canada against James Beatty, John White or Woodworth, men who have been exposed as members who sought their personal aggrandizement at the expense of the people they pretended to serve, and who trafficked in public lands and railway charters. Dalton McCarthy and Thomas White could have been better employed than in apologizing for John White and his bad tongue.—[Toronto World.]

Collector Cavan, of Stratford, and Officer Nichol, Walkerton, arrested Anthony Mehan and had him sentenced to pay $300 and go to gaol for one month for working an illicit still in the township of Calross.

The Toronto Week says:—"The Opposition seem to have adopted new tactics in their contest with the Government. Instead of making a general assault, skirmishing parties are sent out to attack single points of the Government's Northwest policy; and although they were driven back by superior force, they contrived to expose the manifold vulnerability of the enemy in a manner so incessant and prolonged as to be far more effectual than would be one set battle,—which, moreover, with the Government majority, could end in only one way and would leave on the mind of the country the impression of a decisive Opposition defeat that is now avoided."

In an able speech in the House of Commons last week John Charlton, M.P., presented a lengthy list of members of the Senate and House who had applied for and obtained timber limits for themselves and friends. In the list of those who had applied "for their friends" we find the following:—
"Thomas Farrow, M.P., application for Joseph Leech, (Blenhaine, Ont.), March 8, 1883; order in-council for Joseph Leech, 50 square miles, Alberta, April 29, 1884. On account of application Asher Farrow, (Bluenave, Ont.); order in-council to Asher Farrow, 50 square miles, Alberta, June 9, 1883. Application for George Leeson, Brandon, Man., May 25, 1883; order in-council to George Leeson, 50 square miles, Alberta, June 7, 1883."

A COUPLE of months ago the Loyal Orange brethren of Canada were solicited to provide a fund for the defence of Ulster. Contributions have rolled in so rapidly from the pasting and patriotic loyalists that this week the aggregate has swelled to $250! We don't know how many Orangemen there are in Canada, but we don't imagine the above result will make a good average. And then, you know, Canada is to furnish 300,000 fighting men, if we are to believe that blatant "Loyalist" M. P., Ely-kilbeg Johnston. This would average one-eighth of a cent a head, for the Canadian invading force, which would certainly be a small capital to begin the war upon. It looks as if this "loyalty" business hasn't yet got down as low as the pocket—it's still lip-loyalty. As Powderly has said, "In the hands of men all month, the gun is as harmless as the sword."

"When the official head of the (Catholic) church in Ontario stoops to barter and sales of votes in politics, how shall the laymen rise above so base a doctrine, or consider themselves anything better than chateaux!"—[Toronto Mail.]
The above from the chief Tory organ is another gratuitous insult to the prelates of the Catholic church in Canada, and to their people. The O'Donohoe disclosures have lost to the Tory party all future hope of support from the Irish Catholics of Canada, and the Mail is willing to go its way to cast odium upon the hierarchy. This is not the first time the Tory organ has endeavored to cast aspersions upon a Catholic prelate, but its efforts will again prove as unavailing as when it stated that Archbishop Lynch's brains were inferior to those of a "poodle dog." The Mail is only trying to prove that Sir John was right when he said he "had no confidence in the breed." But the Mail and Sir John will change their tune between this and election time. Be this as it may, the above extract is a falsehood out and out, for the Mail cannot show that the Catholic bishops made any overtures or gave any promises to Sir John in regard to the support of their people. It was Sir John Macdonald that wanted to have the Catholic vote bought and sold for a price, and the bishops were innocent of any complicity save that they received a letter from Sir John Macdonald. The storm is fast gathering around the head of the perfidious Premier.

Different Methods.
The Democratic party of New York has been purging itself of the "boodles" aldermen, but as yet we hear nothing of the Conservatives of Canada against James Beatty, John White or Woodworth, men who have been exposed as members who sought their personal aggrandizement at the expense of the people they pretended to serve, and who trafficked in public lands and railway charters. Dalton McCarthy and Thomas White could have been better employed than in apologizing for John White and his bad tongue.—[Toronto World.]

Collector Cavan, of Stratford, and Officer Nichol, Walkerton, arrested Anthony Mehan and had him sentenced to pay $300 and go to gaol for one month for working an illicit still in the township of Calross.

WHAT'S UP?

Things That Are Happening Around Us.

A Friendly Hint.—What They Say About M. C. Cameron on the Home Rule question. Hon. John's Disclosures.—The Scott Act.

—I see the Growler of the West street Almanac is anxious to imbue with me, on behalf of the Big Boom committee. If he has a grain of sense left he won't try on that game with me. I have no ambition to wash any of his dirty linen in public, but I would make even the self-conscious imbecile Growler, dance to lively music, if I so desired. I give him fair warning, however, that if he makes any more lively reflections upon my hitherto un tarnished reputation, I'll alight on him like a bee on a posie, and bite the sweetness out of him, too. A word to the wise is as good as a kick to a fool.

—And now I reckon I'd better take a gaze at the horoscopes, and look for political prospects and municipal quarrels, and other things that may amuse, edify and instruct my friends in the back townships and elsewhere. By-the-way, did you notice where they put my reminiscences in last week's paper? Of course you did, for you'd have read my column and had printed on the margin and slapped it over on the next page. I was going to give the editors a bit of my mind—and a mighty caustic bit at that—when I discovered my old friend, M. C. Cameron, was at the bottom of the affair, as usual. You see, he got on to the Government on the question of the ill-treatment of the nation's wards by the gang of thieves who are in the employ of the Indian department, and he showed up their rascality in great shape and in short metre. It seems that from Dewey down, they're a set of rascals from the word "Go."—only they won't go, Cameron made it hot for them, and did not leave them a leg to stand on—but what's the use of going over the story when you're read in the Star?

The Almanac's Growler will say that it was a "self-condemnation" speech, I suppose, but he'll take care not to publish it, all the same, as he did in the case of Cameron's "suicide" remarks on the Laundry motion. For next page, I am C. C. never did anything during the session but make his speech on the ill-treatment of the Indians by the Government employees, I'd feel bound to stick to his belt until he said triumphantly through West Huron at the next election. And from what I know of the neighbors they are all going to do it, too. Old John Calvin brought me a copy of the Presbyterian the other day, and the religious editor of that paper was standing by Cameron like a stalwart, and I'd hardly got through with the article when John Wesley, who lives on the corner lot, came along with the Christian Guardian, and showed me a leading article where the writer was getting Malcolm Colin Cameron on the back with both hands. I haven't seen old Hiram Hardshell yet, but I guess he'll tone round the Baptist in due course, and let me see that the organ of the dipping friends is also in favor of having the Indian wards treated with common decency by the Government of this Christian country. And it isn't a bad thing to have the moral support of church organs when a man does his duty. It shows that the seed has not been cast upon stony ground, or swallowed by the fowls of the air, or choked by weeds, but rather that it has germinated, and waxed strong, and brought forth good fruit. So note it be.

But a Senator John O'Donohoe that has been "ringing" down at the chamber of the spooks—the Senate—at Toronto. I recollect when John wielded the auctioneer's hammer in Toronto, and a good hand he was, too. After that he studied law, and became the "talented Irish barrister" who had served credit for working up the way he did, but his having to do with the auctioneering business has been the spoiling of him, after all. You see he got it into his big head that everything, and everything was saleable, and he wasn't happy unless he was "knocking things down," so to speak, after he became a practical politician. He was one of the kickers against Hon. Alexander Mackenzie in 1878, and in 1882 he sold himself, body and soul, to Sir John Macdonald. It wasn't a cash transaction, however, and the buyer failed to comply with the terms of sale after the goods were delivered. Time was given for the payment, but John, notwithstanding his auctioneering experience, neglected to obtain an approved joint note from the wily Premier. It's a clear case of "Going, going, gone!" so far as O'Donohoe is concerned. I have reason to believe that his Orange friends in this section will heartily sympathize with him now that he is in deep affliction, for he worked all he knew how to do them a good turn in Huron in 1883; they rejoiced with him then, and it's to be hoped they'll weep with him now that he weeps over the perjury of Sir John.

—So police magistrate Scott, of Clinton, has resigned, and there's a vacancy for some enterprising man of a judicial bent. I've been looking around for one who'd be a suitable person for the billet, but the crop of candidates is not a good average this season. John Beattie has been shelved, and I don't think Charles Seager would accept under existing circumstances. A lot of the neighbors thought it would just suit me, as I was well used to giving matters and things mature and careful consideration, but when I rolled out a double-barrelled and emphatic "No!" the boys took to shelter for fear of a thunder storm. A position without salary doesn't suit my patriotic instincts, and Mrs. Ajax would like to be indemnified for the wear and tear of my conscience if I undertook to deal out law on ginnill violations. No, you don't, and don't you forget it. "If I do, then you may chawf me!" What's wanted is for the temperance people of Huron to memorialize the county council at the June meeting to make provision for paying the police magistrate a suitable salary, and then competent men will offer for the position. Mrs. Ajax might even be willing to sacrifice me in the public interest if the salary was sufficiently large. But it requires something tangible to make a man accustom himself to dynamite explosions, a la Fisher Munro at Orangeville. This holding of office without sufficient salary to buy an accident policy is a piece of vanity, and there is no health in it. It may be patriotic and all that, but most office-seekers are patriotic revenue purposes only. And the one who isn't has a lop-sided brain. —I don't wonder at magistrate Scott quitting the business, after all. In the first place, he had no salary—a very serious consideration. Then, neither he nor his law partner were allowed to practice in the criminal court—another serious consideration. And again, he had recently married a wife—yet another, and a very serious consideration. Any one of these causes would impel a man to throw up a no-salary job in a hurry; but it wasn't until it was settled upon that the magistrate's best half decided that his worship should not go galavanting from Uxora to Ashfield, that magistrate Scott made up his mind to retire from the bench. I comment on the little woman for her good sense in hindering her spouse from looming migratory in his habits without corresponding benefits. Less than half a century ago I was retired from public life in a similarly summary manner. I didn't like it at first, but I gradually became reconciled to my fate, and today I rejoice that I was thus saved from becoming as great a gad-about as the worst among you. "If I don't, then you can chawf me." Somehow that "obey" business in the marriage ceremony often gets kind of twisted around.

—However, I think magistrate Scott should have closed up the cases he had on hand before retiring from office. That's what I'd have done if I'd been the p. m. and the p. n. had been AJAX.

COMMUNICATIONS.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions of our Correspondents. Contributors to this department must confine themselves to public questions, and be brief.

To the Editor of The Signal.
DEAR MR. EDITOR.—It would appear from the newspapers that the people are wakening up to the necessity of getting more railroad accommodation for this section of the Province. Wagoning has been at it for several years. Wroster and B'yth are now striving in the matter also. But I have another proposition to make on this subject, worthy of the consideration of the road committee and the people of Goderich, and that is, a line from Teaswater, by Lucknow, Belfast, Duncannon and the Nile, to some desirable point for crossing the Maitland river to the harbor at Goderich, which the Government has selected as the best harbor of refuge and lifeboat station. It is found on this side of the lake. For the wisdom of this selection, I, as an old salt, and of several years' experience on the lakes, can give my most hearty approval, for the water you leave the pier at Goderich you are in deep water, and free from all danger from rock or shoal of any kind, from Sarnia on the one hand to Cockburn Island, at the very head of Lake Huron, on the other. The water is deep, and the fog that so frequently endangers the navigation of the Georgian Bay, in addition to its many hidden dangers from sunken rocks, and reefs, etc. To the U. P. R. Co. this line would be a very great advantage, as it would utilize their line from Glenannan to Teaswater, which, under present circumstances, is almost a dead weight on their hands. I enclose my name and address.

I am, Sir, your very obedient servant,
Lucknow, May 12, 1886. J. S.

Cameron Shows Them Up.
When Mr. Cameron, in his Brucefield and Wingham speeches, charged members of parliament with applying for timber limits, the Conservative papers asserted that his statements were without foundation, and he dare not make them on the floor of parliament. Well, he has reiterated about every statement made on the stump, on the floor of parliament, and excepting in one or two instances where a mistake in date was made, supported his charges by blue-book proof. He proved that in the disputed territories of Ontario the Dominion Government had sold 175 limits since the decision of the Judicial committee. They went upon the Provincial domain and dealt with it as though it were Dominion property. Literally, they tried to steal that which belongs to Ontario, and parcel it out among their supporters. If public sentiment had not become caloused, the rascality of the Government and its supporters would not be tolerated for any time, but a good many of the people are becoming as demoralized as the Government, and see no wrong in well used to giving matters and things

IRELAND'S EXAMINEE-JUBILANT.
As we expected, the enemies of Home Rule in Canada are in ecstasies over the success of the Costigan-Curran-Sir John combination, in preventing the Parliament of Canada from expressing an open and unqualified opinion in favor of Home Rule for Ireland. The Toronto Week, Goldwin Smith's paper, says:

"In criticizing the action of Parliament, however, we must not be understood to suggest that the Parliament or the Ministry are responsible for the introduction of the subject. It was just the kind of thing that a Government detests, and that only a factious Opposition would think of bringing forward. WE ARE SURE THAT THE MINISTERS WOULD GLADLY HAVE SHELVED IT, had that been possible. As it was not possible, THEY DID THEIR BEST TO NULLIFY IT, AND THEY SUCCEEDED ADMIRABLY. This strategy has been made a ground of assurance. It is, in fact, a reason for admiration and approval. When they could not entirely prevent the mischief they did their best to minimize it, and they succeeded. There is something almost comic in the wind-up. Parliament mountains never brought forth a more ridiculous mouse; and the mountains looked every serious indeed when their labor began."

A Slanderer Brought to Book.
It is now over a month since Mr. Ferguson, M.P. for Leeds, replying to the telling speech of Mr. M. C. Cameron on Northwest mismanagement, made the following intimation in regard to Rev. James Robertson, Superintendent of Missions in the Northwest:—

"The hon. gentleman made reference to the statements that appeared in the newspapers of a Rev. Mr. Robertson, I happen to know something about Rev. Mr. Robertson, which I do not care to disclose or discuss here, and which, to my mind, does not add much to the weight of his statements. I am not going any further on that subject."

Messrs. Fairbank, Charlton and Watson, who said they were personally acquainted with the rev. gentleman referred to and had good reason to believe that he stood high in the estimation not only of his own Church but of other churches in the Dominion, challenged Mr. Ferguson to be explicit in his statement—to conceal nothing. Mr. Ferguson was dumb. He has had ample time to make good his assertion, and if he cannot he should be compelled to withdraw the cowardly insinuation, confess himself a slanderer and apologize. The Canada Presbyterian is none too severe on this misrepresentative of Leeds when, referring to his miserable conduct, it says:

"Mr. Ferguson now stands before the people of Canada as a member of Parliament who uses his privileges to stab by insinuation the reputation of a missionary of this church, and who when called upon to make specific charges, withdraws his insinuation, is too cowardly to do the one or the other. We direct the attention of the Christian people of Leeds, especially the Presbyterians, to the conduct of their representative."—[Hamilton Times.]

Confession of Fraud.
Parliament on Friday voted a sum of money to pay Mr. Charlebois for his work on the erection of the new Departmental buildings at Ottawa.

Sir R. Cartwright asked if this was the same Mr. Charlebois whom Sir Charles Tupper said was not to be trusted with any contract, and whose name appeared as one of the lowest tenders for the contract in British Columbia given to Mr. Onderdonk.

Sir H. Langevin said he was the man, he believed, and had proven himself a good and reliable contractor.

Sir R. Cartwright—Then he ought to have got the contract, the refusal of which to him cost the country $200,000.

Onderdonk had made his bargain with Tupper to get the contract for constructing the British Columbia and the Canadian Pacific Railway. But Charlebois' tender was lower than Onderdonk's by $200,255. Tupper tried to get out of his difficulty by pretending that the cheque deposited by Charlebois as security was not regular, but the evidence was all against him. Then he stormed and raged and declared that Charlebois was not a man to be trusted, and Sir John Macdonald backed up the assertion. It cost $200,255 to give the job to Onderdonk, who proceeded to import thousands of Chiramen to work on the road. How much Onderdonk gave to help the Tories carry the elections of 1882 will never be known unless Tupper and Macdonald happen to quarrel. The people of Canada had to earn that $200,255. It is a small item compared to some of the extravaganzas of the Macdonald-Tupper combination, but the Onderdonk transaction was such a barefaced swindle that it made an impression upon the public memory. Charlebois, the man who was said by Tupper and Macdonald to be unworthy to get any contract, was given the contract for the new buildings by Langevin, who now says that he has proved himself a good and reliable contractor. Thus the last vestige of excuse for Tupper's deal with Onderdonk is swept away.—[Hamilton Times.]

The clerk of Berlin town council has written to the Goderich town clerk to find out what kind of carpet is used on the Goderich town hall. That's what comes of a town having a reputation for neatness and tidiness.
