Sagona Back.

The s.s. Sagona, Capt. Barbou, arrived from the northward at 10.15 to-day, after a very stormy passage. The ship lay in Fogo during recent storm, where she took a heavy shipment of fish. She brought aboard freight and the following passengers: F. J. Canning, Miss M. Finn, J. Diamond, Capt. A. Bar, Stanley Gill, A. Ford, S. Dava, Woodrow, Miss Hopkins and 20 other passengers. She will discharge as early as possible, and will sail on at 10 o'clock Saturday morning.

Put Into Azores.

Word was received in the city to-day that the three masted schooner "Sagona" had put into the Azores. The vessel was loaded here with cod by Baird's and left for a Brazilian port with her cargo. Mr. Baird was asked for information to-day as to the arrival of the vessel and ascertained, but he was reticent on the matter. It is not unlikely, though information could not be obtained of the fact, that the vessel suffered in the recent gales on the Atlantic. Other vessels would not have continued to her destination.

Mr. Martin's
Letter in Daily Telegraph.

This Letter Won the First Prize of $100.

Editor The Daily Telegraph.

Sir—Employment is a contract and though the written document which binds the employer to pay and the employee to do certain work may not contain the details which call for faithful service, there exists an unseen force which may compel or impel the parties to exceed the terms agreed upon. An employee who does his work in a perfunctory manner, merely as a machine, nothing more than is actually called for, is not faithful, and an employer who permits faithful service to go unrewarded, barely allowing remuneration is set down in the contract, is not wise. Where "esprit de corps" is in evidence amongst employees, the principal may congratulate himself, but where it is absent, bad management is certainly on exhibition, and although the latter may not show any defect, the former is certainly travelling the right road. Old fishing contracts contained a clause, which, I believe, exists to-day in some country at least, which binds the servant to work "for the good of the voyage and his master's interest." The relationship between master and servant depends to a large extent upon the "manner of man." What I should like to see an employer is to render faithful service, making his interests mine and being as zealous for his success as I were a direct beneficiary, and having done so it is imperative upon my employer, if he has a discerning mind, to show some tangible recognition of such service beyond the cold terms of the contract.

Mr. Clarke, who won one of the $5 prizes, wrote as follows:

MR. CLARKE'S LETTER.

Editor The Daily Telegraph.

Sir—I expect my employer to inspire me with the ability and capability as a master and leader. The relationship existing between a conductor and his band may be applied. The conductor runs the band; it is his business. He does not make the music; he creates it with his wand. My employer should create my work. He should do for me what every capable conductor does for each unit of his band. My employer should have me properly trained. He should point out all deficiencies and should know that I am playing my part satisfactorily. My employer should appreciate my work and push me ahead when I deserve it. Last, and all important, my employer should pay for my work. What can I do for my employer? Work for my pay is of most importance to him. The player can be as interested as the conductor in the success of the band. I can play hard and do my best. I can be interested in his business as if it were my own. I can work hard and stick to his interests. I can say "He'll do it" and do much. I can do the thing when I know I ought to do it, whether I like it or not.

Notes From Heart's Content.

Opening of the New Church of England High School at Heart's Content.

On December 8th the new Church of England High School was formally opened. The occasion will long be remembered by the children, their parents and friends as one of the greatest events in the history of Heart's Content.

At 3 p.m. the ceremony began, there being present the Revs. Frank Smart (Rector), W. W. Blackall, Esq., B. A. (Supt. of Education), Rev. E. M. Bishop (Curate), Rev. Mr. Upward (Incumbent of New Harbor Mission), Messrs. Geo. E. Charlton, Geo. J. Young (representing the School Board), the teachers, children and many of their parents and friends.

The Rector after reading prayers asking God's blessing on the work to be carried on in the building, and rendering thanks for the successful accomplishment of the construction of the building, gave a very practical address suited to the occasion. He also read a list of the subscribers to the Building Fund, which showed that some forty-three persons had by straight giving contributed about $700. Substantial donations had also been received from the Women's Association, E. Company of C. L. B. Girls' Guild and Mrs. Tranfield's "At Home."

The teachers and children have in various ways, such as entertainments, garden parties, etc., raised about $300 which is being spent in equipping the school.

The Superintendent, Mr. Blackall, then followed in a very clever and instructive address on education, showing clearly the purpose of education, the influence of the home, the influence of a neat, clean, and well ordered school on a child. He showed by sound reasoning and illustration how it is possible for children to matter how poor to rise to high positions of trust and responsibility properly educated in the home and school. After expressing himself as well pleased with the new building and its adaptability for school purposes declared it open for work.

Rev. Mr. Upward who had taught school here about sixteen years ago compared conditions then with the present up-to-date building. He made some suggestions as to training of teachers, so as to fill their positions with more proficiency.

Mr. W. E. Bradbury (Principal) expressed his gratitude as a parent for the splendid school accommodation provided for the children and as a teacher for the advantage it would be a performing his duties with greater ease and he hoped better results. He advocated the benefit of co-operation of parents and teachers in their common work of education.

The ceremony was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem.

The building is most substantially constructed and artistically finished inside. It consists of three classes with ample space, attached lavatories, good cloak room space, and a room 20 feet x 10 feet to be used as a school museum and library.

That there would have been no such building in Heart's Content to-day but for the untiring efforts of our good Rector is a statement which fears no contradiction. For the religious, moral, and intellectual advancement of his people he saw the necessity for such a building. He has worked assiduously for its completion since it started in July almost daily superintending its construction, at other times soliciting funds to defray the expenses. It stands to-day a living monument to his zeal. A credit to him and to the people who gave of their money for this educational advancement.

The Women's Association held their annual sale of work and Xmas Tree in St. Mary's Parish Hall, on December 3rd and 4th. The proceeds amounted to over $300. The ladies are well pleased with results.

The annual missionary services are being held this week. The deputation consists of Revs. Mr. Upward, from New Harbour, and W. W. Blackall, Esq., B.A., with the Rector and the Rev. E. M. Bishop, curate. After the opening of the new school they left here for Winterton a distance of six miles, in spite of the terrific storm of wind and rain.—Com.

WINARD'S LINIMENT CURES DIS-TEMPER.

Pierre Loti's
Tale of Horror.

Pierre Loti writes in the Daily Telegraph a terrible story of the Bulgarian atrocities at Adrianople. He claims that the facts are gleaned at first hand, and he gives a lurid account of his visit to Adrianople after it was recaptured by the Turks.

"I wish simply to tell in all sincerity what I have seen with my own eyes, seen in the desert which the Bulgarians have made of Thrace. Oh, how it surpasses in abomination everything that I had been told, and all that I imagined! With what fury have these Christian liberators worked in order to accomplish so much destruction in a few months."

"A desert," I said, and the most tragic of deserts, because one knows that the place was once a smiling province, and that the earth is full of freshly-killed peasants. Nothing more."

Here is one incident as the Bulgarians escaped from Adrianople.

"The Bulgarians took the time to throw into the wells a few last prisoners of war. Then they fed in disorder. They returned to capture a young Turkish officer, Rechid Bey, son of the great Fuad, who approached to close to their claws. They tore his two eyes from their orbits, cut off both his arms, and then disappeared. That was their last crime, at least for the time being."

Slaughter of Prisoners.

"Poor Adrianople, whom I have seen in fete, bedecked with flags and illuminated at evening in honour of Ramadan, possibly her last Ramadan! Behind this joy of the people in the streets there remained the recollection of the atrocities of the preceding night. In the Turkish quarters I saw a few demolished mosques, and doors and windows that had been beaten in by the robbers or satyrs."

"... It was the hour of evening prayer, and I went with the Vali and his suite to the marvellous mosque of Selim II., where already thousands of men were prostrating themselves," adds Pierre Loti. "And that evening the hordes chanted as though in a delirium. Their beautiful clear voices seemed to soar towards the enormous dome, while the innumerable muffled and heavy voices of the kneeling faithful accompanied them like a subterranean rumbling. Never in any mosque have I heard such exaltation of prayer—prayer of action and of grace, and, at the same time, what supplication and terror!"

"In a few days, alas! the Europe brings the Bulgarians back here, what will become of all these imploring men; what will become of these beautiful mosques which the believers fill with their ardent psalms?"
