Footballer-Poet Marries Wealthy Girl

AN ANGLO-AMERICAN ROMANCE

One of the greatest romances of modern times, the marriage of England's richest girl to an obscure Michigan poet, is reported by the "Sunday Express." The bride is Miss Winifred Ellerman, only daughter of Sir John Ellerman, wealthiest and most powerful of shipping magnates, and the bridegroom is Mr. Robert L. M'Almon, an American footballer, who some time ago took to writing verse. Sir John and Lady Ellerman knew nothing of any engagement, and the first they heard of the wedding was a cable announcing that it had taken place, and that the couple were coming to England in order that the bridegroom might make the acquaintance of his bride's relatives. They arrived a few days ago, and were met at Liverpool by Lady Ellerman.

Mr. and Mrs. M'Almon are now living at Sir John Ellerman's great London residence in South Audley Street, where the bridegroom is making his first acquaintance with English society conditions as they exist in the home of a multi-millionaire.

The story of the brief engagement and the unannounced wedding reads like that of the hero and heroine of fiction.

Miss Ellerman, who is an extremely pretty girl, 26 years of age, arrived in America last year with Mrs. Richard Aldington, the poetess who writes under the name of "Hilda Doolittle." Mrs. Aldington toured in Western America, and returned to New York last month.

Shortly afterwards Miss Ellerman, according to the New York World, met Mr. M'Almon, and the marriage took place within a fortnight. The bridegroom is 30 years of age. Twelve or thirteen years ago his name was well known to the American sporting public as a footballer who was one of the stars of the Michigan University team. Later he edited an aviation publication, and has since devoted himself mainly to poetry.

Sir John Ellerman is the controller of many great shipping lines, and three or four years ago it was said that on a moderate estimate he was worth £20,000,000. He owns a big residence in Eastbourne, and five years ago he bought Salford Castle, from the Earl of Errol.

Royal Nicknames.

History records innumerable instances of kings and queens who were renamed by their subjects. Because of some peculiarity or virtue they were given a nickname that described their characters or referred to something they had done.

Alfred, king of the West Saxons, was called the Great, because he was a great soldier and a great lawyer as well as a great king who laid the foundations of the English monarchical system. Seventy years after Alfred the Great, Ethelred the Unready came to the throne. His nickname was given him because of his lack of foresight which caused him to lose many of the fruits of Alfred's victories.

In those far-distant days men were very fond of bestowing such nicknames upon their monarchs. Thus we have Edward the Confessor and William the Conqueror. In later days came Henry VIII, who was known as "Bluff King Hal." His daughter Mary, who became queen at his death, was called "Bloody Mary" because of her persecution of the Protestants. She was succeeded by her half-sister, Elizabeth, the Virgin Queen.

In recent times Queen Victoria is remembered as "the Good," and her son, Edward VII, as "the Peace-maker."

Possibly the strongest and one of the least complimentary nicknames ever bestowed upon a king was that given to a Jewish monarch some centuries before Christ was born. We read about him in the Bible (Hosea V-13). King Jeroboam, as he was called, was known as "King Pick Quarrel." Apparently he was a quarrelsome and contentious man always getting himself and others into trouble. He had an army to back him up. Possibly without his soldiers King Pick Quarrel would not have been so troublesome. For quarrelsome people are often cowardly as well and they are not fond of disturbing others stronger than themselves unless they have "the gang" at their backs. That explains why the school bully ill-treats only boys smaller than himself and why he is careful to behave himself towards his equals.

Although Jeroboam was a king with an army of his own that might have helped the oppressed, his ill-nature prevented his being an instrument for good. We read that Ephraim and Judah were in trouble. They turned to Jeroboam in Assyria for help but he could do nothing for them. The reason for this is not given, but one of several causes must have explained his inaction. He may have been afraid, or his quarrelsome nature may have led him into a dispute with the messengers from Palestine. Perhaps his army was not so large as he had boasted. He may have wanted a large sum for his services, more than poor Ephraim and Judah could afford to pay, for bullies and pick-quarrels are always greedy.

One thing is quite sure, and it is that quarrelsome and bad-tempered people are of very little use in the world. They seldom want to help from unselfish motives and they are always ready to stir up strife. Their room is always preferable to their company.

It is the Jews that spoil games and picnics and parties and fun of all kinds. If we are to be given a nickname by our companions, let it be for some good quality. It is an honor to be called Edward the Peace-maker. It is a dishonor to be a King Jeroboam. Don't be a pick-quarrel!

London's Haunted Theatres.

The last place in the world where one would expect to find a genuine ghost is in a theatre.

Yet there are three theatres in London and the suburbs which are known to be haunted, says a writer in a London paper.

There is a theatre within half a mile of Piccadilly Circus that contains a box which is periodically haunted by the ghost of a clown. One of the women whose duty it is to dust and clean the auditorium told the writer that when she was alone in front of the house one morning she suddenly had the feeling that somebody was looking at her. On raising her eyes she was startled to see a white painted face staring down at her from one of the boxes nearest the stage.

"I know," she said, "it could not be one of the performers, because it was too early for any of them to be in the theatre. Besides, why should they want to put on such a make-up? I had to keep looking up, for the face fascinated me."

"Then suddenly, I was called by another woman who was 'helping me.' The moment she spoke the thing vanished, and I began to laugh hysterically."

"The other woman made fun of me. She had not seen anything, and the idea amused her vastly. However, I learned from the doorkeeper that several other people had seen the face, and that it had appeared periodically for years."

"Mind you say nothing about it to the management," the door-keeper

Llewellyn Club Enjoys Flipper Supper.

About 100 members of the Llewellyn Club and their friends enjoyed a flipper supper in their rooms last night. The supper was organized by lady friends of the Association.

Amongst those present were Rev. Canon Smart, Revs. Williamson, Clayton, Moulton and Legge. After supper had been served and some brief remarks made by the chairman, Mr. L. Colley gave a reading entitled "When the Flippers struck the Town."

Rev. Clayton spoke of the work of the Club since its establishment and its steady growth. He also referred to Dunfield Boys' Bible Class, whom he hoped to see members in the years to come. Speeches were also made by Rev. Moulton and Rev. Williamson, the latter's topic being "Brotherhood." For half an hour he dealt with his subject pointing out the great necessity of a Brotherhood and the great Christian duty of helping one another. He asked that the Llewellyn Club join the Brotherhood.

Rev. Dr. Jones, who acted as Chairman, thanked Rev. Williamson for his splendid address and said the policy of Llewellyn Club was the betterment of mankind, and if they could help out any other organization they were always ready to do it. Songs by different members and guests were rendered during the evening and an address was given by Rev. Canon Smart. A vote of thanks to the ladies was unanimously carried after which the National Anthem closed a pleasant evening.

But it did, for the woman met with a severe accident almost immediately. A third theatre is haunted by a yellow cat, which is said to be seen sitting outside one of the dressing rooms before any of the cast fall suddenly ill.

Naval Prize Money.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—In reply to a letter of Skipper Rodgers, R.N.R., published in your paper of yesterday's date in reference to prize money, the writer says the Government has not received the prize money. Let me tell you that they have. I was told by the Paymaster of the Briton that the money in question had been paid over to the Government. The Government is only bluffing us. Two years ago we were promised our War Medals and the 1914 Star, but so far we have not received them. Is it that we are not entitled to them? The patience of the sailors is now nearly exhausted and with further delay there will likely be trouble in store for the parties responsible.

Yours truly,
ONE RETURNED.

Clyde's Captain Congratulated.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Permit me space in your esteemed paper to say a few words in regard to C.N.'s items of March 1st. I wonder if C.N. has been out in the ice in Placentia Bay in his motor boat? I venture to say he hasn't, or his fingers would have been too cramped to write. If the Clyde had been at Placentia she would have been jammed. Therefore Capt. Murphy and crew deserve great credit for bringing their ship through without serious mishap, and enabling us to get our mails and freight regularly.

Thanking you in anticipation.
Yours truly,

The Only Solvent Nation.

Sir Patrick McGrath, in his speech at the M. C. L. I. dinner last night, made the marvellous statement that Great Britain, of all the nations of the world, was the only one that could and is paying her way. Besides doing this, she also saved 200,000,000 pounds towards paying off her enormous war debt, a truly wonderful achievement, said the speaker, in the face of conditions as they appertain in the world to-day.

Poor Asylum Inmates Entertained.

The inmates of the Poor Asylum yesterday afternoon were the guests of the ladies of the Mission and two pleasant hours were spent. His Excellency the Governor, whose generous contributions of candy, tobacco and pipes was greatly appreciated, was present in person and received a loyal and enthusiastic welcome. It was a great disappointment to all that Lady Harris was unable, through temporary indisposition, to be with them. A bountiful supply of cakes had been provided and the brief interlude was thoroughly enjoyed. Superintendent Miller is doing good work in the asylum, which is being kept scrupulously clean and as attractive as so contracted a building can be. Many improvements have been introduced, which add to the comfort of the inmates. Mr. Miller is proving a worthy and efficient successor to Superintendent Pridoux, who retired recently owing to ill-health after many years of faithful service. It is pleasing to know that the ladies of the Mission are continuing the activities of previous years and in doing so are receiving the cordial co-operation and good wishes of the Governor and his Lady. Time spent in helping those who, many of them through no fault of their own have been unable to help themselves, is time well spent.—Com.

Thetis in Port.

WITH FULL LOAD.

S.S. Thetis, Capt. W. C. Winsor, arrived in port yesterday at 4 p.m., with a full load of prime young harps. The Thetis struck the patch with the rest of the fleet on March 27th and managed to get 12,000. In the storm over 3,000 seals were lost but Capt. Winsor kept on the track of the herd and under very trying conditions picked up a load. The Seal and Ranger also remained in the patch and got good trips: Capt. Winsor reports that ice and weather conditions were the worst in his many years experience, making it very bad for the men to work, whilst it was almost impossible for the ship to force through the ice barrier. The Thetis has 1800 seals on deck while every space below is filled. The white-coats average 50 lbs. The crew are in excellent health, there being no sickness amongst them during the voyage.
