Some $61,7 00 for New Schools in the City.

Including a $20,000 Addition to the Collogiate Institute—$2,500 Besides for Repairs—Recommendations by No. 2 Committee.

The city engineer and Mr. Fred Henry, architect, submitted to No. 2 Committee of the Board of Education last evening two plans for a new four-room addition to the Collegiate Institute. The estimated cost was $18,000, excluding heating. The second was recommended to the committee as the less expensive and preferable. It would be an addition to the front of the present building. The whole school would then accomodate over 800 pupils. Two furnaces would be required to each the new portion at a cost of at least $1200. The crection of the proposed add non would cause but little disturbance to the pupils. On motion of Mr. Craig the plan will be submitted to the board and recommended for adoption.

In the estimates as prepared, the following expenditures for new schools will be included:

The gate receipts on the grand prize day at Paris were $80,000, and the rider of the winning horse was given $11,000. The race was worth $50,000. Judge Horton has dissolved the injunc-

CURLING.
The 26th annual convention of the Grand National Curling Club of America was held at Utica, N. Y., on Wednesday. Robert Nicholson, of St. Andrew's Club, New York, was elected president.

A London cable says: Despite the criticisms of Osmond's supporters the sporting papers here uphold Arthur Zunmerman, the American bicyclist, in his refusal to compete with Osmond at the Herne Hill races on Saturday, as he has only recently been training for the 50 mile championship race, which would unfit him for a 10 mile race. The Star says that the British will not forgive Osmond for sulking all the season while the American scooped all the championships.

public opinion, is not on them, and back they go to their pies, both of mud and blood. It is not difficult, in certain circumstances, to imagine a universal degradation, from which the race would very slowly climb back into the feudal period. But Mr. Gomme and some other students do not entirely accept this view. Were the people who daubed the bridegroom with soot and did the other divers and disgusting things, were they really of our kindred after al? Or if they were, did they invent these discreditable performances, or did they merely borrow the customs from some neighboring and conquered savages.

Mr. Gomme seems to be of the latter opinion. It has been proved that there was, perhaps, no dirty, savage trick which did not exist in the Greek religion. A civilized people, they danced about with snakes in their hands, like the Moquis; they worshiped obscene images and and kept flithy sacred pictures in their temples they adored stones, they performed unpleasant rites with pig's flash; their sacrifices were often rediculous and revolting; they told highly discreditable stories of gods who went about disguised as dogs, serpents, ants, awans and wolves. All these things the lowest savages also do, and the conclusion is that Greeks, too, had once been savages, and that the conservatism of their religion retained customs which puzzled and annoyed their common sense and picty. Nothing but Christianity made an end of these myths and manners, and even Christianity did not cralicate all of them among country folk. Folkiore, peasant custem, is full of traces of sacrifice and of savage beliefs in local spirits. Here Mr. Gomme, as we understand him, demurs and tries, as others have tried, to save the credit of cur ancestors. They were "Aryan:" an Aryan was a gentleman, he never could have invented and initiated all these stupidities and abominations. Where he practiced them (that is everywhere) he must have merely adopted the customs of savages whom he had conquered.

Farmers Victimized by Alleged Agents for a Bogus Wholesale Hcuse.

Hamilton, July 14.—A couple of men who claimed to represent a large wholesale concern in Toronto similar to the Patrons of Industry stores, successfully swindled a number of farmers in Nelson township yesterday. They carried samples of groceries, drygoods, etc., and said they were taking orders for goods, which would be delivered to buyers at wholesale prices. They succeeded in selling many job lots, the farmers giving their notes, ranging in value from $48 to $65, at four months in payment. The alleged wholesale concern would also send along tailors to make up the clothes. The firm has no existence, and the victims have been duped into buying goods worth less than half the value of their notes. The men secured several hundred dollars worth of notes in the township of Nelson alone.

Torrent from Prospect Point—His Farewell Megsage.

Toronto, July 14.—A dispatch from Buffalo says: About 2 p.m. to-day a young man jumped into the raging torrent from Prospect Point at Niagara Falls and was at once carried over the American falls. He let a card on which was written:

"Dear father, mother, brother and sister,—Pardon for me what I have done, but it was all done for that woman. Noble Kenny."

The card, on which this was written, bore the address of Madame Percy, dressmaker, parlors No. 263 Maryland street, Buffalo, N. Y. Kenny was lately a resident of Buffalo, a waiter, working for Capt. Burslem at the Cafe de Paris on Washington street, he left the restaurant this morning, saying that he was going out for a short time only. That was the last seen of him about the restaurant. From the Burslems it was learned that Kenny came here from Toronto on July 1, his father followed on July 4, both stopped at the Cafe de Paris where the son secured a job as waiter.

Kenny was 21 years of age. He was a tall, fine looking man and neat in his dress.

Freaks of Human Vision.

[From the St. Louis Daily Globe-Democrat.]

"I do not suppose this world looks alike to any two persons," said Thomas McHenry at the Southern. "A dozen of us were looking at the moon the other night. To one it appeared the size of a 5-cent piece, to another much larger than a cart wheel. To one it appeared a well-rounded globe, and to another a flat, circular piece of brass. I noticed this diversity of human vision one in Galveston, Tex. I saw a man named O'Dell shoot a fellow-gambler named Quinlan to death. He fired four shots from a large revolver. At the trial one man testified that Quinlan had a knife in his hand at the time of the shooting. Another thought it was a cane, while a third expressed the opinion that it was a billiard cue. I was standing facing him when he was shot, and would make oath that his hands were open and contained nothing. Those who testified were disinterested spectators, and told on the stand what they honestly thought they saw. The shooting began in a salcon. Quinlan ran out, followed by O'Dell, who kept shooting. Some thought one shot was fired in the salcon, others thought three, yet all were looking right at the two men. You often hear people say that what they see they know; but they don't. They have no assurance that they saw right. A men who implicitly believes his eyes is liable to fall into griev.
