London, Thursday Oct. 8.

-The "heckling" editor of the ADVER-TISER is at it again-[Windsor Record. He rarely suspends operations.

-There is a marked resemblance between John Most, the Anarchist, and Dr. Montague, and it lies in this: Each persists in talking when he ought to be at legitimate work.

-It is announced that the Dominion Parliament will likely be called together for the dispatch of business on either January 18 or 25. There should be a regular time for the assembly of the legis-

-Mr. Foster heard there was to be a great convention in Ontario to promote the taking of a plebiscite, as advocated by him only the other day, and lo! in the twinkling of an eye he rushes off to Manitoba. Mr. Foster's "moments of weakness" now come with amazing rapidity.

-The Toronto Telegram asserts that the new criminal code, compiled by Sir John Thompson, "seems to be worse than anything the country ever had before. Its purpose was to clarify the legal atmosphere, and its effect so far has been to thicken the mist in which judges and lawyers grope."

-The Regina Leader complains that the shildren in the public schools are not taught to speak plainly. That may be so, but they generally make themselves understood much more easily than do some of the politicians with whom the Leader man is actively associated in Parliament.

-Prof. Shaw, who is about leaving Wentworth for Minnesota, has issued a farewell address to his fellow agriculturists, in which he speaks highly of the great natural advantages of Canada, and especially of Ontario, and extends much praise which he has for some time been connected.

-The address presented to Sir John Thompson by the Biddulph Township Council, chiefly composed of political sympathizers, acknowledged that the "N. P." vessels navigating the lakes and rivers of the Province. It increases the age of has fostered combines, and pleaded that this oppression should be removed. It was also acknowledged that the reduction of the duty on binder twine had saved the farmers of the township $1,600 this year. These candid statements will be noted by tariff reformers everywhere. They but emphasize the necessity for throwing off every tax that is not needed for revenue, and that does not wholly go into the public treasury. "Of a good thing you can't have too much," as the old song says.

"The judgment of the ladies of public inder, purer and better than that of any other class of the community. This declaration was made by Sir John

TEMPERANCE LEGISLATION IN ONTARIO.

The London Fress professes once more to be in the dark on the subject of temperance. It is, of course, opposed to ascortaining, by means of a popular vote, the opinion of the electors upon the question of whether or not a probibitory liquor law should be enacted for the country, and it now asks the ADVERTISER to "tell the people where is the temperance measure passed by the present Ontario Legislature." We presume out contemporary wants to know all about the Ontario License Law, the enactment of which, in the interests of its liquor friends, it strenuously opposed. The act was placed upon the statute book by the Government councils in many localities were controlled by the liquor vendors. In London, with a population of less than 20,000, we had from 100 to 150 dram shops and other places for the sale of intoxicants. The large majority of them were used to forward the political interests of Mr. Carling. In 1877-8, under the provisions of this act, at which our contemporary smeers, the liquor licenses in the Province were reduced to 3.676, and now, despite the increase of population, there are not so many ncrease of population, there are not so many icensed places as in 1877.78 by 1,000. Locally we all know the progress that has

But this act did more to promote temerance. It absolutely limited the number of licenses that may be granted in any one municipality; in accordance with the best sentiments of the country, it took the control of licenses from the log-rollers in the municipal councils and conferred the management on independent boards of ommissioners appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, It authorized each municipal council by bylaw to still further limit the number of licenses to be granted. The same power was conferred on the commissioners. Each municipal council was authorized to prescribe conditions of obtaining a tavern license, in addition to those stipulated in the act. It authorized municipal councils to limit the number of shop licenses, to require the holder of a shop licenses. Governor-in-Council, It authorized each shop licenses, to require the holder of a shop license "to confine the business of his shop license exclusively to the keeping and selling of liquor," and to impose any other restrictions it saw fit, these regulations to be binding on the commissioners.

An amendment was made to the law in 1884 limiting the number of saloon licenses. Other changes introduced the principal of ocal option, empowering the majority of electors to forbid the granting of a new license or the renewal of an old one in any sub-division. The amendments further provided for the compulsory separation of the liquor traffic from other traffic in licensed shops after 1888. Authority was given justices of the peace and police magistrates to forbid holders of licenses from selling liquor to any habitual drunkard, and relatives were given the power to issue a similar prohibition. Licenses were for bidden on ferry boats.

In 1890 the law was improved by com to the Guelph Agricultural College, with pelling the applicant for a license to present a certificate signed by a majority of the voters in the sub-division before his application could be heard. The act further prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquors on vessels navigating the lakes and rivers of minors from 16 to 18, thus subjecting to s penalty those who sell liquor to persons under 18 years of age. It provides a penalty when liquor is sold to any person under 21 years of age, in respect of whom notice has been given prohibiting the licensed victualler to sell or supply liquor to him. The act also gives greater authority to search unlicensed premises and "dives," to seize liquor and arrest persons found on said premises.

The right to prohibit the sale of liquor by retail, possessed by municipal councils before Confederation, has also been revived by the Ontario Government. And to crown all, in response to public sentiment, Thompson at Lucan, or the Free Press re. the Mowat Government, at its last session, port is incorrect. We copied it from that passed a law providing for a popular vote journal's report because It appeared to be on the question of prohibition, to be held at verbatim, being given in the first person, next municipal elections, and also agreed to whereas the ADVERTISER'S report was an have settled by courts the disputed question extended summary. Our contemporary of whether or not the Legislature of this cavils at the interpretation we put upon Province can pass and enforce a prohibitory this reported declaration, and seems to law. Upon the response made by the prefer the ADVERTISER summary to its populace to the question submitted in this own report, purporting to be the exact Province now, and by-and-bye in the wider language. If in this reported alleged arena of the Dominion, will depend the werbatim utterance Sir John Thompson action to be taken. We concede is made to say what he did not that a stringently enforced dicease mean, then is he the victim of law is better than a prohibitory law his friends. To us it seemed if the people are not willing to aid the plain that the language conveyed just officers of the law in its enforcement, but what it states, that the judgment of we cannot see any legitimate reason why Sadies of public men is sounder, purer and on this great moral issue the people should Setter than that of any other class of the not be consulted end saked to give e. community. It gives us pleasure to hear verdict free from all entangling questions,

After that vote our contemporary may for enlightenment.

THE OLD BELL OF ST. PETER'S Is Out of Tune and Harsh-A Faith ul

Servant Gone-A New Bell for the Cathedral. For years the old bell of St. Peter's has summoned the faithful to worship. It has called them to early mass at moin, to the Angelus at noon and to vespers in the dewy eve. It has been the heraid of the breaking day and the curiew of the setting sun.
Joyously has it pealed on saintly festivals and solemnly toiled the requiem for the dead. Many who have heard its sweet tones are in the grave, and those of the present have listened to its melodyfrom childhood Early in the sixties it was placed in the beliry of the old church on Richmond street, and blessed by Father O'Brien, who has since passed away. There for long It has been the herald of the break has since passed away. There for long years it peeped through the shutters of its dark watchtower and viewed, unseen, the vicissitudes of changeful time beneath. Its life was a lonely one, its monotony relieved only by an occasional visit from the saxton of Sir Oliver Mowat in 1876. At that time the system of control of the licenses, for which the Free Press has always expressed admiration, was in force. There were then 5,818 places licensed to sell liquor in the Province, and the municipal councils in many localities were controlled by the liquor vendors. In taken from its loft and shipped back to the place of its birth to be cast into the fire of the blasting furnace, purified of its dress and toned again to sweet harmony. When it emerged from the mould, shaped When it emerged from the mould, shaped anew and cured of its infirmity, it was returned to its home on the cathedral top, where for eight years its tongue has told the same tale day in and day out. But the affliction has came a second time and the old bell is hearse again. It has been lowered from its lofty station and will be heard no more, but in its place a stranger will bid the worshippers assemble. On Sanday last it was announced from the pulpit of St. Peter's that the cathedral would be without a bell until a new one came; and the priest added that though the came; and the priest added that though the bell had ceased to ring mass would still

KISSES. [Toronto News.] [Toronto News.]

Commenting upon Mr. Laurier's gallant attentions to the young ladies who have been presenting him with bouquets, Le Monde asks, "What's in a kiss?" Possibly nothing, and perhaps a good deal. It was also Sir John Macdonald's policy to bestow kisses upon his young female admirers. Can it be that Mr. Laurier has discovered the secret of the late chieftain's success?

ACT FOR YOURSELF.

[Grand President Mallory, of the Patrons Industry.] Idrand President Mallory, of the Patrons of Industry.]

I have a great respect for British institutions, and have yet to learn where Canadians or Americans have, by tinkering, improved upon them. Great Britain buys in the cheapest market, regardless of what tariff walls may be built up by others against her, and I cannot understand the kind of economy which leads men to desire to pay high prices for the necessaries of life for the sake of spiting those who, by building tariff walls, prevent us from selling in their markets.
