Sport, who is as fond of Alfred as he is of the boy's father, followed the runabout, trotting along contentedly, and disdaining the dogs that dared to challenge him. Turner drew up before his home in Ocean avenue, Cedarhurst. Leaving Alfred in the runabout and without troubling to tie the horse, he went into the house for a minute. Sport went along. As Turner was returning, the horse took two or three steps forward.

"Whoa!" yelled Turner so loudly and sharply that he frightened the horse, which broke into a gallop.

Without a word of command from Turner, of his own initiative, Sport shot after the horse like an arrow from a bow. In a moment he was running at no small risk to himself, directly before the runaway, springing at the horse's head, snapping at his nostrils, barking, saying as distinctly as ever wise dog

"Say, old horse, it's time for you to Sport thoroughly appreciated Alfred's imminent danger. The dog made mighty running jump, got a good bull terrier's grip on a rein near the bit and hung on. The horse snorted and swung his head expecting to throw Sport into the air. Sport hung on. The horse ran from Ocean into Cedarhurst avenue the runabout making the turn on one wheel, small Alfred bouncing like a rubber doll.

Charles Weston, of No. 16 Maple Place, ran to the middle of the cross-ing of Cedarhurst and Central avenues and easily stopped the runaway, which was going slow by that time But Sport did not know Weston, so he took no risks. Although the horse stood, Sport hung on to the rein, until Turner, breathless, arrived.
