years ago, modernized in several particulars, but in great measure the same as of yore, attracted an audience to the Grand Saturday night which filled the playhouse from pit to galiery, a hundred or so people being satisfied to stand throughout the performance at the rear of the house. And if the management had desired they could have pagement had desired they could have preformances were crowded, the matinee especially, which was composed almost which will be worn when the revoluthe rear of the house. And if the management had desired they could have sold probably two hundred more S. R. O.'s, but they wisely refrained from so doing, and as a result there were a large number of Londoners anxious to see the famous production who were disappointed. The modernizing of "Erminie" has not injured the opera in the slightest, the dialogue being of the Weller English variety, as before, and the songs interpolated being all to the presidential races in the United States, in which Canadians have no interest, and also a jab at the grabbing of the Philippines, both of which failed to score hits, but a passing thrust at manner in which the Japs are are high-class, the music being sweet and catchy from the rise of the curtain to the close. The costuming and stage settings are also magnificent, and entire production proved to be all that it had been advertised to be, and probably a little more. It is getting on well for twenty years since "Erminie" was first produced in America, and of the original cast only Francis Wilson and Jennie Weathersby appeared Saturday night. But, indeed, it is seldom that such a brilliant coterie of artists grace the stage in one production, as the cast of the present "Erminie." The title role was taken by Miss Marguerita Sylva, of "Princess Chic' fame, and last seen in London in "The Strollers," a year ago. This part was played by Miss Pauline Hall in original cast. In personal appearance, Miss Sylva does justice to the character, though she is perhaps a little stately. Her beautiful figure, dazzling eyes and splendid voice,make her a favorite at all times, however, and the audience did not neglect her in the applause accorded "Erminie." In the leading role was Francis Wilson, with his same cute little legs and his fun-producing proclivities. As far as humor in concerned "Erminie" is a one-man play, but the clever cemedian does not find it difficult to supply the fun for the entire performance. As Caddy, the thieving vagabond, whose every theft is a joke, he is splendid. His dicky-bird song is a good one, but it is in the interpolated song, "Joseph. James and John," from "The Monks of Malabar." that he is at his best. A feature of "Erminie" is its chorus work. The voices are all first-class, and each number was well sustained, round ed and full. And it might be added that as a beauty show the "Erminie" chorus carries off the palm.

Ottawa, Feb. 22. - It was learned here that the letter in which F. D. Monk, M. P., tendered his resignation been made public in Montreal. The news comes as no surprise, since it was well understood in ministerial circles that Mr. Monk some time ago formally made known his intention of abandoning the Quebec leadership.

It is understood that two months ago, or more, Mr. Monk wrote to a prominent Liberal M. P. of Quebec, asking if the general elections would take place before a session of Parliament. He explained that he wanted the information for personal reasons and would regard it as confidential. The Liberal M. P. replied that there would be another session of Parliament be-fore dissolution. Replying to this communication Mr. Monk said that he was render the leadership. If, he said, the general elections were to take place beore another session, he would feel it his duty to fight. He had no desire to flee on the eve of battle, but as a session of Parliament was to be held before dissolution he felt himself at liberty to retire from his post. These letters of Mr. Monk's, it an pears, were turned over by the Liberal nembers to whom they were addressed to Sir Wilfrid Laurier. For some time therefore the Prime Minister has had

Montreal, Feb. 22.—Some weeks ago it was stated that F. D. Monk, M.P., had written a letter to R. L. Borden, M.P., who was then staying at the Windsor Hotel, that he wished to retire from the French-Conservative leadership, a statement which was flatly contradicted at the time. It may be said that a correspondent had seen a copy of the letter in question, but as it was of a semi-confidential nature the text was withheld. dential nature the text was withheld. On Saturday, however, Mr. Monk himself gave out the same letter for publication. The communication reads as follows:

"To R. L. Borden, K.C., M.P., Windsor Hotel, Montreal: "Montreal, Jan. 17, 1904.
