PARNELL'S VICTORY.

Great Day in the Imperial Parliament.

NEW SECRETARY FOR IRELAND.

Cavendish Considered a Very Weak Man.

THE HOME RULERS INTERVIEWED.

Forster's Speech in the House of Commons

Last Night—Benouncing Parnell and His Followers—A Boston Correspondent's Despatches.

London, May 4.—Parnell was interviewed at Kingstown yesterday. It is reported that he said: From the altered tone of the ministry since the meeting of parliament we had supposed our relase might come after a few weeks, but had no reason to anticipate it so soon. It is, of course, entirely unconditional. I consider our release, coupled with Forster's resign—conditions, which denial Gladstone Confirmed:

Sir Stafford Northcote complimented Forster on his dignified explanation, and pressed the government to declare a definite course of policy. He subsequently moved the adjournment of the house.

Sir Vernon Harcourt defended the government. He believed the release of the suspects would have a good effect.

O'Connor, Power, Mitchell, Henry, O'Donnell and others spoke.

Gibson (conservative) made a lengthy speech against the government. He maintained the agitation in Ireland was mainly supported by the American press and American gold. Without American aid it would have been a very small affair indeed. our release, coupled with Forster's resignation, indicates the determination of the overnment to amend the land act as far as ossible during the present session, and a esire not to revert to the policy of coercion it as a result of their change of policy and he prospect of further remedial legislation the state of Ireland be materially improved and the outrages diminish. I shall be very much disappointed if the outrages should not be materially diminished by the r eversion of the policy of coercion. No efforts of mine will be wanting to end the outrages and crime, but the success of my exertions must materially depend on the nature and extent of the remedial legislation proposed by the government, and also upon the early and unconditional release of Michael Davitt and the other popular leaders. Davitt's arrest was a fatal blow to the cause of order in Ireland. The man who succeeds Forster ought to be a strong man, in accord with the real liberal thought, who from his position and character would be supported by public opinion in carrying the measures of reform necessary for the peace and well-being of Ireland. Such a statesman would see the necessity for, the participation of Irishmen, under some representative system, in the management of their own affairs in accordance with the wishes of the majority. I consider the wishes of the majority. I consider the then absent Mr. Gladstone declined to make any further statement. He warmly praised Forster for not compromising liberal principles, and declared there was no arrangement or bargain with the leaguers, but the government availed themselves of information tendered by men in a position to offer it. It was intended at the earliest moment to legislate on arrears of rest SUBSCHIBERS. Livingston Scalped on the Eight Bollar Racket—An Executive Committee Ap-of rent.

Mr. Parnell denied that the question of the release of himself and other was due to any condition as to their future action, though he stated verbally and in writing that he believed a settlement of arrears would have an enormous effect in restoring law and order, and if such a settlement were made he would be able to take such steps at to have a material effect in diminishing as to have a material effect in diminishing the number of outrages.

Mr. Dillon said he had not directly or ndirectly any communication with O'Kelly denied having agreed to any conditions, which denial Gladstone con-deed.

Lord Hartington rebuked the tories for not supporting Forster while in office. He declared the information on which the suspects were released was furnished by Cowper and Forster. (Cheers). According to which conduct Parnell and others would not be hostile to the administration of law and order, but tend to the contrary direct tion. The government were therefore not justified in training the leaguers in prison single day.

Northcote then withdrewhis motion.

The Prince of Wales was present during Forster's statement.

It is freely asserted that the appointment of Cavendish is an endeavor to conciliate the whig members of the cabinet.

The home rulers are much disappointed at the selection of Cavendish.

The adjourned indignation meeting o subscribers to the Temperance colonization society was held in Albert hall last night, Colonel Shaw presiding. The hall was crowded. In the absence of Mr. Law, Mr. T. E. Somerville acted as secretary.
