A NEW GIN FIZZ

Massachusetts fruit and grocery dealers have been at a loss to account for the unusually large sale of grapefruit the past few weeks, but it developed that the juice of the fruit is one of the principal ingredients of a new kind of home brew. It is claimed that the juice, mixed with a certain portion of yeast, makes a regular morning eye-opener. In this latest concoction it is claimed that a drink that has the sting of an adder, the taste of ale, and the effect of a gin fizz has been attained.
