

spending a day here and a day there doing business for his firm. After he came to the Senate we became warm friends. We used to discuss many things about Kent County, and then I learned what a prominent part he had taken in athletics in his native county.

Senator Campbell was a man of courage. He knew he was a sick man. Although undergoing treatment in hospital during the Christmas holidays of 1963, he came out on Christmas Day to spend that day with his family. Then, too, on New Year's Day he came out again, although still a patient in hospital and still receiving treatment, to attend the Lieutenant Governor's reception. He moved around there chatting with this person and that person, enjoying himself and making himself pleasant to others, and no one knew he was seriously ill. He showed his courage in trying to do so much to make the Lieutenant Governor's reception a success.

I should like to express my regret that both these senators have passed away, to extend my sincere sympathy and condolences to their families, and to endorse what has been said about them by previous speakers.

Hon. Harry A. Willis: Honourable senators, I should like to reiterate and re-emphasize what Senator Connolly (Ottawa West), Senator Brooks and other senators have said with respect to the late Peter Campbell.

As has been said, he had a rural background, as have most of us. He came to Toronto and became a great corporation lawyer. His wise counsel and advice were sought by many corporations. In his obituary there were mentioned some 25 or 30 companies of which he was a director. Many others sought his services as a director, but he did not have the time for all of them. He and I were co-directors of the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair, although one might think that a man of his capacity and ability in business would not have time for services to a non-profit organization such as that. But the fact is he did, and he made valuable contributions to it.

Furthermore, as Senator Hayden has said, Senator Campbell was an adviser to the Government on much legislation concerning shipping, and also respecting financial matters such as revisions to the Income Tax Act.

Those of us who knew him well were aware that for several years it was occasionally necessary for him to take one or two days off to attend hospital for treatment. Despite this, he never divulged that he was a sick man. I have reason to believe that he knew precisely when his time was coming.

The Leader of the Government has said that Peter Campbell was interested in the Collingwood skiing area. I might say he was the founder of that skiing development. He made it his business years ago, and invested his own money in it to make it the success it is today. It is my view that had it not been for Senator Peter Campbell, skiing would not now be as popular a sport as it is in the Province of Ontario.

Had Senator Campbell lived until this month he would have been a member of the Senate for 21 years. He was appointed at the age of 44, the same age as our new colleague, Senator Lang. I trust that Senator Lang will make the contribution to this chamber that Senator Campbell did.

He was a wise counsellor. He was a friend of everyone. I have often said that if there was one Liberal senator that I would like to see move over to this side of the chamber it would be Senator Campbell. It may be that there are others I would like to include in that category, but Senator Campbell was non-partisan to the fullest degree.

I was interested in Senator Roebuck's remarks to the effect that he and Senator Campbell together managed a Liberal campaign in Ontario. I chaired the Conservative campaign alone, and if I had realized that I was up against so formidable an opposition as that I think I would have stopped right there.

I do not want to digress in my tributes to the memory of Senator Campbell, but I should mention that those of us who attended his funeral knew that he was an eminent churchman. He had been a member of all the committees of his church, which is located at King and Simcoe streets in Toronto. I mentioned to Senator Croll as we came away that I had never seen a church so filled with people from all walks of life who came to pay tribute to one man. It has been said of such a man that when our Maker made him He must have thrown away the mould. We may never again see such a man.

Hon. T. D'Arcy Leonard: Honourable senators, it is with a sense of deep sorrow that I add my voice to those of my colleagues who have paid their tributes to our deceased colleagues, and expressed their sympathy to their families. They have spoken so feelingly, eloquently and comprehensively that my remarks can be brief; they are, nevertheless, very sincere.

Peter Campbell will long be remembered by all who knew him. He was not only an able lawyer, not only a man of wise and sound judgment in the affairs of business and of state, not only a conscientious public servant in the discharge of his duties as a member of the Senate, but he was more. He was a very human person. He was kind, courteous, generous and thoughtful of others. Consequently, he endeared himself to a host of
