

We do know of a very excellent Parisian family who live ~~very~~ near the University, and several of our students from time to time lodge and board in this house so that they may speak French. They are not French Canadians. They are French families - not Canadians. and I am told that ~~it is~~ a nice house. I believe your son ~~might like it.~~ Other American students studying French have lived there. Professor du R. head of our Department of French and all his staff are French, not French Canadians. They have a summer school which runs (see calendar) and I believe that the best thing to do would be for your son and his wife this summer come here enrol in the summer school, see how they like the whole atmosphere of Montreal and try it out. If he does like it could then come for the regular courses. There are many opportunities here for speaking the pure French, luncheon clubs, and other things and so on and so on
