not affected. Indeed, there was much that smacked of the mere boy. In Besthoven's Violin Concerto, on the other hand, he showed great talent and very remarkable technique for a youngster but in his 13th year. A more generous tone will come, and one fully believes the little boy will rid his playing of a certain ungraceful effect. One refers to the forcing of tone on the last note of a phrase. It is just a mannerism, no doubt. Then he must not make the orchestra stop in the progress of a movement in order to tune his E, or any other string. Of course, it was very amusing.
