Mrs. James Woods Drinks Poison, But Will Recover.

Remarking that she was tired of life, Miss James Woods, housekeeper for Frank Humphrey, of 216 Berkeley-street, an expression, took a dose of poison, one of the most deadly known, yesterday afternoon. She took it in the presence of one of Humphrey's clerks. The cause of the act was not clear. It was said that she was tired of life, or she would have expired in a few minutes, as she took a dose of poison to kill several persons. Dr. R. H. Robinson, Wilton-avenue, attended her. The reason she wished to die, she said, was that she was tired of life. Humphrey used the poison as medicine for his horse.

She was taken to the General Hospital. It was reported early this morning that she would recover.

CITY'S SIDE OF STORY

Waterworks Official Replies to Public Protest of A. H. Marsh.

The statement of Geo. H. Mitchell, detail examiner of the waterworks department relative to the complaint of A. H. Marsh, an Island resident, makes it appear that the latter had no right to demand that the department's efficiency as was conveyed in his letter to the World.

Mr. Mitchell says that the first intimation he had of Mr. Marsh's grievance was on Saturday last when he received a postcard from him saying he had phoned twice to have the water turned on. Mr. Mitchell had no knowledge of this fact, but on Monday morning he had the Island inspector go to Mr. Marsh's house. He found that the spindle would not turn, and that the matter was placed in the hands of the works department which attended to it yesterday.

Mr. Mitchell says that the Island constable is always available for Island residents who wish to have water turned on, and that Mr. Marsh's complaint is the first of its kind.

PIATE WORKERS IN STRUGGLE FOR LIFE

Last Round in Nine Years' Warfare With J. P. Morgan, Who Vowed to Smash Organization.

PITTSBURG, July 6.—Nine years ago this coming fall J. P. Morgan faced Theo. Shaffer, then president of the United Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers in the Morgan offices in New York. They were settling the great steel strike of 1901. Morgan, white with rage, turned to Shaffer and said:

"I'll smash your union for this. At the end of that time you'll not have a union man at work in the mills of my combine."

That was in October of 1901. Thursday, July 1, Morgan made good his word. But it had taken him nearly nine years, instead of four.

There have been four more strikes in the mills of the steel trust, which employs 120,000 to 130,000 skilled workers in making iron and steel, and skeletons of steel buildings, and everything from a big armor plate to the wire screens you use in your window.

Present in the morning of July 1, 8,000 sheet and tin mill workers struck against the order of the American Sheet and Tinplate Company, a branch of the trust. In this strike the old Amalgamated Association is making its last stand against utter extermination of the trust.

This handful of 8,000 Amalgamated men is all that are left of the 30,000 men that entered the first strike in 1901. Morgan's iron hand is so tight that there will be no more union mills in the trust.

For the latter-day policy of the steel trust is not to bring strike breakers into a mill and try to operate it in the face of the strikers' pickets, but to take the mill out of the hands of the strikers and run it on a non-union plant beyond its capacity until the strikers are tired out and give up the struggle.

The American Sheet Steel Co. boasts that his company "has no union mills," but he is not trying to start any of the old ones. He is running the new ones on a non-union basis.

These mills are standing idle while the plants from which they were being pushed out are being pushed up as high as possible.

It is a "break" strike. But before the day of trust the manufacturer with one, or even two or three mills, couldn't do it. He had to run on a non-union basis.

For nearly nine years the Amalgamated association has hung on in this losing battle, giving concession after concession for the removal of the P.W.A., holds that his association is a non-union company and is bound on principle to remain at work.

President Ross of the coal company says: "As is well known, this is a quarrel between the men themselves. Some of the men are deliberately attacking law and order. They appealed to the government under the Combination Act, and the verdict was against them. And such a condition as now exists where men working under an agreement are allowed to interfere with others who are honestly endeavoring to carry out their engagements is without a parallel in the history of industrial relations."

"I do not look forward to a protracted strike, but on the contrary I anticipate the production of an output sufficient for all our purposes in a very short time."

Company Own the Town.

Glacé Bay is practically a creation of the Dominion Coal Co. It is situated on the Sydney and Louisburg railway, which is owned by the company, and in the town itself the company has erected upwards of 1,600 substantial built houses which are rented to the workmen. The population is about 12,000.

MONTREAL, July 6.—F. L. Wanklyn, vice-president of the Dominion Coal Co., gave out the following telegram from G. H. Duggan, manager of the plant:

"Conditions this morning better than I expected. No. 6 pit is idle. Will get to-day production of 10,000 tons in this city and toward seven during the afternoon. The strike is over."

COAL STRIKE LAUNCHED

Once, however, the men were clear of the plant, a huge and cry was raised and the strikers chased the strike-breakers along the street.

Addressed by the Mayor.

General Manager Duggan, Mr. Lovett, counsel for the coal company, and Mayor J. C. Douglas of Glacé Bay, mingled for a time with the men, and one section of the crowd said: "We are glad to see your good behavior. He was glad to see they had not offered to do injury to the coal company's property and appealed to them to abstain from all sorts of violence. From the evidence at hand we do not think it necessary for Glacé Bay to appoint special police, but if they were required he had no doubt the town would be able to handle the situation."

Practically all the men at work to-day are married, and have all their interests vested at Glacé Bay. The coal company have 150,000 tons banked at Dominion No. 2.

An exodus of workmen began to-day, those who were looking for a situation in the coal company's property and those who were looking for a situation in the coal company's property.

James Garey, a railroad contractor from Montreal, is in town looking for work. He offers $1.75 a day and says he can easily obtain the required equipment.

Steel Company Have Supply.

The Dominion Iron and Steel Company have sufficient coal on hand to tide them over a month, before which time it is expected the difficulty will have been solved.

Six thousand tons of coal was raised in the morning, but only half an average day's work. This, considering the derangement of business and the drawback of sending men to new places, is a good result.

On the other hand, U. M. W. leaders claim that a very considerable part of the six thousand tons alleged to be raised was not loaded yesterday.

They also claim that some of the men to-morrow went out to-day. They initiated a large number of men to-night, including 175 at the Hibbard and Grace, relative to the strike.

The coal company and U. M. W. were both in error concerning No. 4. Colony the company claimed 350 men were working and the U. M. W. claimed 108. The fact is 175 men were at the pits.

What the Parties Say.

H. W. Bonfield, vice-president of the U. M. W., issued a statement to-day defining the number of men on strike and saying:

"We are all fairly well gratified with the results so far and believe by to-morrow the search for the company's collieries completely tied up."

Mr. Moffat, grand secretary of the P. W. A., holds that his association is a non-union company and is bound on principle to remain at work.

President Ross of the coal company says: "As is well known, this is a quarrel between the men themselves. Some of the men are deliberately attacking law and order. They appealed to the government under the Combination Act, and the verdict was against them. And such a condition as now exists where men working under an agreement are allowed to interfere with others who are honestly endeavoring to carry out their engagements is without a parallel in the history of industrial relations."
