March 28, 1915, while near the Meas Lightship to ram the German sub-marine U-33. Honored by Admiralty.

Captain Fryatt and the first offcer and the first engineer of the Brussels received from the British Admiralty gold watches for "brave conduct," and were mentioned in the house of commons.

The submarine U-33, according to the official account of the trial, had signalled to the British steamer to show her flag and to stop, but Captain Fryatt did not heed the signal, and, it is alleged, turned at high-speed toward the submarine, which only escaped by diving immediately several yards below the surface.

Captain Fryatt, the official statement says, admitted he had followed the instructions of the British Admiralty. Sentence was confirmed and the captain was executed and shot for a "franc-tireur crime against armed" when the trial was resumed, and were noted by Mr. Justice Prendereast.

Britain May Retaliate. NEW YORK, July 28.—An Associated Press despatch from Washington

Germany's execution of Captain Charles Fryatt, master of the British steamship Brussels, for an alleged attempt to ram a submarine, is regarded in allied quarters here as a brutal violation of international law, likely to result in prompt retaliatory measures by Great Britain. They contend that if a hostile submarine approached the Brussels, it was in effect an attack and Captain Fryatt, in making a counter-attack by attempting to ram, subjected himself only to treatment as a prisoner of war in event of capture.

The United States Government is interested in the incident and what may follow it; particularly because of the bearing it may have upon the difficult problems involved in submarine warfare which in the pash have brought the country to the brink of war, because it is charged with the care of interests of prisoners on both sides. Reprisals by the allies, it is facred, might be followed by a change in the German submarine policy, which has been satisfactory to the United States since the last assurances that merchant ships would not be attacked without warning or without provision for safety of passengers and crews.

What Were Circumstances.

pends entirely upon the circumstances under which he headed his vessel for the submarine. If the submarine attacked or was about to attack him he had the right to counter-attack; if he was seeking out an enemy vessel for attack he placed himself in the class of a criminal, subject to summary exe cution upon capture. Convention No. 10 of the second Hague peace conference sets forth how the crews of merchantmen, who legitimately resist capture, shall be treated as part of the armed forces of an enemy.

Officials here point out that the United States has taken the position that the master of any merchant vessel who sees a submarine approaching has from the very nature of the subhas from the very nature of the sub-marine method of warfare the right to presume that he is about to be at-tacked. Consequently, it is argued, he has the right in turn, to forestall that has the right in turn, to forestall that attack by himself ramming or firing to

When captured by German torpedo boats on June 24, Captain Fryatt was pijoting the steamship Brugges from Rotterdam to Tilbury-Several German warships dashed out of the naval base at Zeebruge and esconted the Brussels back to the Belgian harbor.
