NAMES THAT STUCK. ey" Is Now An Everyday Word

Blarney" Is Now an Everyday Word In Our Language.

It is surprising how largely proper names figure in our language as words to describe particular actions.

Blarney is a place which became octorious as the result of the deeds done within its borders. So far back is the reign of Queen Elizabeth, Macrethy, an Irish chieftain, held Blarney Castle against the Lord President Carew, and when he could no longer keep out the besieger by force-of arms he offered to evacuate the stronghold if he were allowed a few days' armistice to arrange matters with his followers. When the armistice expired he made excuses for prolonging it, and this operation was repeated so often that Elizabeth and her Ministers recitived the Lord President's frequent announcement of the post-ponement of the Irishman's surreader with the comment that Carew had been "blarneyed again." So "blarney" came to be the synonym of cajolery. The royal burgh of Jedburgh gained an evil reputation from the summary methods adopted within its borders in the administration of the law. "Jedburgh justice," explains a writer in The Morning Advertiser, was the process by which a man was hanged first, and first afterwards. Notorietra-was given to Brentford by an old farce written by a fuke. The Dute of Buckingham's play, The Rehearsal," turned upon two rival claimants to Brentford's throne, When they had accommodated their differences by some absurd compromise, they appeared hand in hand, when they had accommonated their differences by some absurd compro-nise, they appeared hand in hand, and the stage managers of the period to heighten the absurdity, made tham enter smelling the same flower. Hence the saying "Like the two Kings of Brentford smelling the same nose-

The word "boycott" is, as all the world knows, the name of one of the world knows, the name of one of the early victims of the Irish Land League, and it signifies the peculiar kind of persecution to which he and als family were exposed. Capt. Boycolt, fell foul of the League. Forthcolt, fell foul of the League. Forthwith he was placed under a ban. His servants and laborers we.v intimidated, and induced to leave his employment. He and the members of his fir nily had to do the work of the farm under police protection, and those who held communication with him or supplied him with the necessaries of life were warned that the same treatment would be meted out to them if they did not "leave him severaly alone." While this tyranny was at its height, one day a speaker severaly alone." While this tyranny was at its height, one day a speaker at a Land League meeting was denouncing someone who had transgressed the terrible code of that organization, when a voice called out, "Boycott him." The phrase caught the ear of the people, and has lived.

Sir Luke Fildes is one of the best-known of modern painters, and his state portraits of King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra will carry his name down to posterity. But by far his most popular picture is "The Doctor," which now reposes in the Tate Gallery. The pathos of this picture has appealed to millions, but few are aware of the manner in which it was painted, and the trouble to which the artist went in order to get the desired effect.

An entire cottage was fitted up in artist went in order to get the desired effect.

An entire cottage was fitted up in the artist's stucio, and the dying child was represented by his own child. To obtain the figure of the medical man, one model sit for the lair, another for the eyes, and a third for the clothes, while the late Mr. Val. Prinsep sut for the beard. After arranging all these details, Sir Luke Fildes states that he "practically-lived with and for the picture for six months." But such a painstaking method met with a fitting reward, for the picture is admitted to be one of the most successful ever painted.

Ted Drinking Habit In London. Nowhere is the "tea habit" quite so

Nowhere is the "tea habit" quite so, universal as in London. English people have always had the habit, but it was not until the last decade that they indulged therein in the sight of all men.

Every pastry shop and bakery is crowded nowadays at 4.30 with ladles dirinking tea and acting cakes: the drinking tea and cating cakes; the restaurants look to the tea hour as one of their great sources of income; here are tea pavilions in all the carks and public gardens and in all he streets which are the hives of men who live by brain work, the tea shops nave aprung up like mushrooms and are driving the bars cut of existence. In the clubs the man who drinks a whisky and soda in the afternoon is the exception; the man who drinks tea is the rule.

Early Use of Tobacco. I have heard my grandfather say that one pipe was handed from man to man round about the table. They had first silver pipes, the ordinary sort made use of a walnut shell and a straw. Tobacco was sold then for the receiver in the stray. ts weight in silver. I have hea d ome of our old yeomen neighbors ay that when they went to Malmes ony or Chippenham market they utiled out their biggest shiftings to ay in the scales against the tobacco, ir W. "I tell you, I was thankful that day for the fortune that had made me take good care of my horse, for I rode like Death on a windstorm. I rode through the streets of Mesa, where they lived, and past the lights of Ben-nett's big saloon, where I heard the sound of devil's revelry and a shrill ferridy. I never skulked or sneaked in those days, and no man ever made me take back roads, so I came up to his house from the front and tied my horse to his gntepost. She heard me on the steps and opened the door. "'You sent for me,' said L 'Where is he?' But he had gone away to a neighboring camp and wouldn't be hot from. They called it a shocking the way a third must feel, for I'd hoped to meet him in his own house. I couldn't think very clearly, however, because of the change in her. She hammer. Mrs. Dan Bennett had been hammer. Mrs. Dan Bennett had been former and the properties of the change in her. She hammer. Mrs. Dan Bennett had been former mrs. than any woman I'd ever seen. I'd changed a heap myself. Anyhow that was the first thing she spoke about, and the tears came into her eyes as she breathed:

"You sent for me,' said I. 'Which road did he take?'
"There's nothing you can do,' she answered. I sent to make sure that which she began to cry like a woman who has worn out all emotion. reckon she must have read the answer in my eyes, for I never was much good at talking, and the sight of her, so changed, had taken the speech out of me, leaving nothing but aches and pains and ashes in its place. When she saw what she wished to know she told me the story—the whole miserable sto-ry—that I'd heard enough of to suspect. Why she'd married the other man she couldn't explain herself, except that it was a woman's whim—I had stayed away, and he had come the oftener part plque and part the man's dare-devil fascination.

"'He's a fiend,' she told me. T've stood all I can. He'll make a had we man of me as sure as he will of the little one if I stay on here, so I have decided to go and take her with me."

"Where?" said L

"Where's sin L.
"Where's you say," she answered, and yet I did not understand, not till I saw the look in her eyes. Then as it dawned on me she broke down, for it was a terrible thing for a good woman. "'It's all for the little girl" she cried More than her life depends upon it. We must get her away from him.'
"She saw it was her only course and went where her heart was calling."

The lieutenant met the look of appeal in the trader's eyes and nodded to imply his complete understanding and approval.

"We love some women for their goodness, others we love for their frailness, but there never was one who combined the two like her, and now See Pec-Simile Wrapper Below.

that I knew she loved me I began to believe again there was a God somewhere. I'd never seen the youngstee, so she led me in where it was sleeping, and I remember my boots made such a devil of a thumping on the floor that she laid her slim white finger on her ibs and smiled at me. All the fingers in the world began to choke at my throat and all the blood in me commenced to pound at my heart when I looked on that little sleeping kiddle. The tears began to roll out of my eyes, and because they had been dry for four years they scalded like melted metal. That was the only time I ever west. The sight of her baby did it.

"I love her already,' I whispered, 'and I'll spend my life making her bappy and making a lady of her,' which clinched what wavering doubt the mother had, and she began to plan quickly, the fear coming on her of a sudden that our scheme might fail. I was for riding away with both of them that night, back through the streets of Mesa and up into the hills, where I'd have held them single handed against man or devil, but she wouldn't hear of it.

"We must go away,' she said, 'a."

"'We must go away," she said, 'a long way from here, where the world won't find us and the little one can

"I uttered a cry and took her in my arms, the arms that had ached for her all those years. Then I kissed her for the first time." The old man tried to light his pipe, which had gone out, but his fingers shook so that he dropped the match. "Her plan was for me to take the

"Her plan was for me to take the youngster away that night and for her to join us later, because pursuit was certain, and three could be traced where one might disappear. She would follow when the opportunity offered. I saw that he had instilled a terror into her and that she feared him like death, but as I thought It over her scheme seemed feasible, so I agreed. I was to ride west that hour with the sleeping babe and conceal myself at a place we selected, while she would say that the little one had wandered away and been lost in the canyon or away and been lost in the canyon or anything else to throw Bennett off. After a time she would join us. Well, the little girl never waked when I took her in my arms nor when the mother broke down again and talked to me like a crazy woman.

"I traveled hard that night and swapped horses at daylight. Then, leaving the wild country behind, I came into a region I didn't know and found a Mexican woman who tended the child for me, for I was close by the place where Merridy was to come. Every night I went into the village in hopes that some word had arrived, and I waited patiently for a week. Then I got the blow. I heard it from the lagrer around the little postoffice first, but it dazed me so I wouldn't believe it till I borrowed the paper and read the whole story, with the type dancing and leaping before me. It took some hours for it to seep in even after that, and for years I receiled every word of the day. called every word of the d—d lie as if it had been branded on me with hot irons. They called it a shocking she breathed:

"Poor boy! You took it very hard, for help and with barely sufficient strength to tell him who did it and how! Then the paper went on with the tale of my courting her and her turning me down for Bennett It told how I had gone off alone up into the the hills, turning into a bear that no-body, man or child, could approach. It said I had brooded there all this time till the mania got uppermest and so came down to wreak my vengeance. "Can you feel the same after what so came down to wreak my vengeance.
I've made you suffer? she said, and ! They never even did me the credit of calling me crazy. I was a fend incar-nate, a beast without soul and a lot of things like that—and, remember, I had never harmed a living thing in all my life. However, that wasn't what hurt. What turned me into a dull, lead, suffering thing was the knowledge that she was gone. For hours I touldn't get beyond that fact. Then ame the realisation that Bennett had done it, for I reasoned that he has dragged a hint of the truth from her by very force of the fear he held her in—and slain her. God! The awful rage that came over me! But there was nothing to do. I had sworn to guard the little one, so I couldn't take vengance on him. I couldn't go beck and prove my innocence, for that would give the child to him. "What a night I spent! The next day, I saw I had been indicted by the grand jury and was a wanted man. From a distance I watched myself become an jury and was a wanted man. From a distance I watched in welf become an outlaw; watched the county put a price upon my head, which Bennett doubled; watched public opinion rise to such a heat that posses began to scour the mountains. What I noted in particular was a statement in the paper that 'the sorrowing husband takes his bereavement with the quiet courage which marks a brave man? It happened that the Mexican woman couldn't read and talked little. Still, I knew they'd find me soon—it couldn't be otherwise—so I made another run for it, swearing an oath, however, before I left that I'd come back and have that gambler's heart.

"It was lucky I went, for they uncovered my sign the next day, and the country where I'd hidden blazed like a field of dry grass. They were close on my heels, and they closed in from every quarter. But, pshaw, I know the woods like an Indian, and the wild things were my friends again, which would have made it play if I'd been alone, but a girl child of three was harden to manner. So I covered any would have made it play if Td been alone, but a girl child of three was harder to manage. So I cowered and skulked day after day like a thief or the murderer they thought me, working always farther into the hidden places, traveling by night with the little one asleep on my bosom, by day playing with her in some leafy gien, with my pursuers so close behind that for weeks I never slept, and my love for the child increased daily till it became almost an insanity.

"We had close squeezes many times, but I finally won, in spite of the fact that they tracked us clear to the edge of the desert, for I had hit for the state line, knowing that Nevada was a wilderness and feeling that I'd surely lose them there. And I did. But in doing it I nearly lost Merridy. You see, the constant travel and hardship was too much for a pratiting haby, and she fell sick from the heat, the dust and thirst.
