UNIQUE REQUESTS OF INSANE MAN

Would Devise Means of Happiness to All

Lowly World—Little Children Not Forgotten and Old Folks Remembered.

Below is given the will of an insane man which attracted much attention when first published a good many years ago. The text is from a correct report of the original possessed by the law department of the University of Michigan. It is as follows:
I, Chas. Lounsbury, being of sound mind and disposing memory, do hereby make and publish this, my last will and testament, in order justly as may be, to distribute my interest in this world among succeeding times.
That part of my interest which is known in law and recognized in the sheep-bound volumes of my property, being inconsiderable and of no account, I make no disposal of in this my will. My right to live being but a life estate, is not at my disposal, but these things excepted, all else in the world I now proceed to devise and bequeath.
Item—I give to good fathers, and mothers, in trust for their children, all good little words of praise and encouragement, and all quiet past names and endearments I charge said parents to use them justly and generously, as the needs of their children may require.
Item—I leave to children industriously but only for the term of their childhood, all and every, the flowers of the field, and the blossoms of the woods, with the right to play among them freely, according to the customs of the time against thistles and thorns. And I devise to children the banks of the brooks and the golden sands beneath the waters thereof, and the odors of the willows that dulp therein, and the white clouds which float high over the giant trees. And I leave the children the long, long days to be merry in, in a thousand ways, and the night, and the moon and the train of the milky way to wonder at, but subject, nevertheless, to the right hereinafter given to lovers.

Item—I devise to boys, jointly, all the useful fields and common waters where one may swim; all snowed hills where one may coast, and all fields and ponds where one may fish, or where, when grim winter comes, one may skate; to have and to hold the same for the period of their boyhood. And all meadows and clover blossoms and butterflies thereof, the woods and their apparitions; the squirrels and birds, and echoes and strange noises and all distant places which may be visited, together with the adventures there found. And I give to said boys each his special place at the fire on the night, with all pictures that may be seen in the burning wood, to enjoy without restriction or restraint, and without any incumbrance of care.

Item—To lovers I devise their imaginary world, with whatever they need, as the stars of the sky, the red rose by the wall, the bloom of the night, the sweet strains of music and aught else they may desire to figure, to themselves, the lustiness and spirit of their love.
Item—To young men, jointly, I devise and bequeath all boldness, and the courage to stand up for the weak and the timid, and the confidence in their own strength. Though they are rude, I give to them the power to make lasting friendships, and of possessing companions and to them exclusively I give all merry songs and brave choruses, to sing with lusty voices, and to those who are no longer children or youths or lovers, I leave memory, and beauty of the volume of the pages of Burns and Shakespeare, and of other poets; I give to the old days again, freely and fully, without title or diminution.
Item—To our loved ones with snowy crowns, I bequeath the happiness of old age, the love and gratitude of their children until they fall asleep.

NEGRO FOUND DANCING WITH WIFE'S CORPSE

Crazed With Grief He Sings and Capers in Street With Body in His Arms.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 11.—The unusual sight of a negro singing and waiting in the street with a corpse of a colored woman in his arms started Patrolmen McCormick and Reynolds early Tuesday. They closed in on the man, who, they thought, dropped the corpse and ran. While one of the officers took after him, the other conveyed the body, which later proved to be that of the negro's wife, to her former home.
The negro was taken to the police station where he registered as Thomas Harvey. He was held for safe keeping. It was learned that Harvey, arrested over his wife's death, had left the house in the afternoon and did not return until midnight when the undertakers were preparing the body for burial.
According to the police Harvey seized a piece of wood and drove every one out of the house. Then he placed a cigarette in the dead woman's mouth and taking the body in his arms, started out of the house. He put the corpse in the front doorway while he returned to the house and procured a bottle of whiskey. He tried to force some of the liquid down the dead woman's throat, and falling to do this again picked up the body and started dancing down the street with it.

KAFFIR BOYS AS SERVANTS

Humor in the Names They Choose and Sometimes in Their Cooking—Squaws as Hired Girls in Nevada.

"I never shall forget the names my Kaffir boys took," said a western woman, who kept house several years in South Africa, where her husband was manager of a mine. "When the Kaffir boys came from the kraals no one ever uses their native names. As soon as they are brought in contact with the whites they take a white name.
"This produces results which are not lacking in humor. Among the house boys sent down to the mine at the Cape Colony, the names were: Table, Chair, Watch, Carriage and Matchbox. Some other names that I had not heard of were: Butter, Soap, and a few others. My butler rejoiced in the stately appellation of New One. It was when the slang phrase, 'That's a new one on me,' was going about.
"One of my house boys took the title of a white name, and he was called Ham and Eggs. He was very fond of rice when they learned to eat it among the whites, and our stable boy thought him a new name. Neither Jim nor Sally was ever depended on to work regularly, but as other help is scarce and high prices are paid for occasional services which they design to render are always welcome.
"When Sally wanted to work she said she was a 'squaw' and was apt to be frightened the first time this happens or the first time she looks at a white man. She was a very pretty girl, but she soon learned that Jim and Sally are quite tame.
"The boy new into a rage. ... said Dam Fool was a 'mammie' name, a nice name, and if he could not have the name he would not work for her. He was so stubborn about it that she had either to use the name or to send him to the compound. Eventually she kept him, and she told me that it was a relief to her feelings sometimes to have a kitchen boy answer to that name.
"The Kaffirs are very imitative and will cook a dish exactly as they have been taught. But I never could quite bring myself to eat Kaffir cooking. It is apt to be weird.
"I had an English housekeeper who did the cooking. Once she went down to Johannesburg for a week's vacation and her head assistant, Candie, was promoted to the position of chef. One night for dinner he brought in a desert of baked custard. It looked perfectly conventional, but when I tasted it I thought for a moment that I was in the clutches of a nightmare.

"It transpired that Candie had favored the pudding with Worcester sauce instead of vanilla. They were of the same color, and the simple child of nature could go no further in his philosophy. Poor Candie was quite crestfallen at our reception of the dish.
ALL THE HIRSD GIRLS SQUAWS
Carson City, the capital of Nevada, is probably the only city in the country where the hired girl is a squaw. To the Carson City housewife every Indian man is Jim and every Indian woman is Sally. Neither Jim nor Sally was ever depended on to work regularly, but as other help is scarce and high prices are paid for occasional services which they design to render are always welcome.
When Sally wanted to work she said she was a 'squaw' and was apt to be frightened the first time this happens or the first time she looks at a white man. She was a very pretty girl, but she soon learned that Jim and Sally are quite tame.

Do You Suffer From Headaches?

There are few people who have never experienced a headache from one cause or another. It effects all ages and both sexes alike, but the female sex is naturally the more effected through the higher nervous development and more delicate organization of the system. Those also of a nervous temperament and studious or sedentary occupation are subject to it. The presence of headache nearly always tells us that there is another disease which, although we may not be aware of it, is still exerting its baneful influence, and perhaps awaiting an opportunity to assert itself plainly.
Burdock Blood Bitters has, for years, been curing all kinds of headaches, and if you will only give it a trial we are sure it will do for you what it has done for thousands of others.

Mr. John Connors, Burlington, N.S., writes: "I have been troubled with headache and constipation for a long time. After trying different doctors' medicine a friend asked me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I find I am completely cured after having taken three bottles. I can safely recommend it to all.

PEASANT SMUGGLED INTO NOBLE FAMILY

Boy Who for Years Posed as Count Deprived of Title and Estates

Romance of German Peerage Revealed in Hearing in a Court of Justice.

BERLIN, Jan. 13.—The tragedy of little Count Kwilecki would be a suitable title for a romance in real life which is now after many years of legal contests nearing its conclusion. Today the high court at Posen adjudged the boy who for years posed as Count Joseph Kwilecki, the son of Count Ignacius Kwilecki, to be in reality the son of an Austrian peasant named Cecilia Meyer. The boy, who is now 13 years old, to his rightful mother, the peasant woman Cecilia Meyer. Neither the verdict nor the order of the court came into force immediately, because Count Ignacius Kwilecki has already given notice of appeal, and the case will in due course come before the supreme court of the empire at Leipzig.
MAY BE NEW TRIAL
The supreme court of the empire, however, can only revise the formalities of this trial, and, if necessary, order a new trial by the high court. It is found that irregularities have occurred in this one. If this happened, the great legal contest might drag on for several years more, but if the supreme court of the empire confirms the judgment of the high court at Posen little Count Joseph Kwilecki's fate will be sealed within a few months.
It would be a terrible tragedy for the boy, who has been brought up in the magnificence of a wealthy Polish nobleman's castle, would be compelled by law to exchange his feudal home for the miserable hut of a poverty-stricken, uneducated, and coarse peasant woman. The little count, now the heir to great estates and vast wealth, would be faced with the necessity of earning his own living after the manner of his plebeian forefathers, the hard laborers of darkest Galicia.
Count Ignacius Kwilecki and his wife, Countess Isabella, were the parents of three daughters, but the longed-for son was not born to them, much to their distress, because the lack of a male heir meant that the family estates, which are entailed, would pass to a distant cousin, Count Hector Kwilecki, on the death of Count Ignacius, who is the head of the family.
The loss of the family estates meant more to Countess Isabella, who has squandered the rich dowry she brought her husband in extravagant living, and would have become practically penniless on her husband's death unless she had a son who would become the next possessor of the property.

RUMORS OF FOUL PLAY
On January 27, 1897, Countess Isabella Kwilecki, then 51 years of age, gave birth to a son—at least an announcement to this effect was issued to the newspapers and to all the members of the family. Soon, however, the rumors of foul play became current and the Countess Isabella was accused of having procured the baby from some other mother in order to falsify her name as her own son. Those members of the Kwilecki family who would have taken the matter up and investigated the alleged birth.

It was pointed out that the countess, instead of remaining in the ancestral castle for the happy event travelled to Berlin and rented an apartment, where she declined medical aid, and was tended by several old Polish servants. The alleged father, Count Ignacius, was absent in the south of Europe, and there were other strange circumstances which gave ground for the suspicions entertained by the relatives.
Relatives of the count brought the case in court and financed the peasant mother, who has now obtained a verdict for the return of the boy.

A TREE THAT GROWS BREAD.
In the South Sea Islands there is a tree called the breadfruit tree. This tree is very like our horse chestnut in look and grows to forty or fifty feet high. Its leaves are a very dark green, and many of them are two feet in length. The fruit of this tree is the most wonderful part of it.
It forms the principal food of the natives of these islands, but before they eat it they roast it in an oven and when it is baked it looks just like wheat bread. It is very nice to eat, and nourishing, too, like real bread.
