THE HOME. How easy it is to spoil a day! The thoughtless words of cherished friends, The selfish act of a child at play, The strength of will that will not bend, The slight of a comrade, the scorn of a foe, They all can tarnish its golden glow And take the grace from its airy wings.

How easy it is to spoil a day! By the force of a thought we did not check! Little by little we mold the clay, And little flaws may the vessel wreck. The careless waver of a white winged hour, That held the blessings we long had sought,

THE FARM. A Contented Farmer. Once upon a time Frederick, King of Prussia, surnamed 'Old Fritz,' took a ride, and espied an old farmer, ploughing his acre by the wayside, cheerily singing his melody.

"You must be well off, old man," said the king. "Does this acre belong to you, on which you so industriously labor?"

"No sir," replied the farmer, who knew not that he was the king, "I am not so rich as that; I plow this for wages."

"How much do you get a day?" asked the king. "Eight grochen" (about twenty cents), said the farmer.

"This is not much," replied the king; "can you get any more?" "That is not my business," replied the farmer.

"Where Mother is!" BY MRS. L. G. MCFAN. "The little child's idea of bliss Finds utterance, eloquent, in this, 'My home is where my mother is.'"

On the street of a great city, a little child was lost. When taken in charge by the proper authorities, his constant cry was, "Oh, lead me home! Please lead me home!"

Dear young men, are you astray, wandering from home? Were you there last week, last evening? Were you at home? Unconsciously the little child has furnished us with a perfect criterion.

who made it a point of honor to 'keep jolly' under the most depressing circumstances. People whose dispositions are naturally irritable and unhappy, think it is no use trying to be otherwise, but that is a mistake. If they will patiently and perseveringly try to keep always pleasant, after while they will get into the habit of smiling instead of frowning, of looking bright instead of sullen, and of giving a kind word instead of a cross one.

child was a cripple was a great trouble to John and his wife, but she was the light and joy of their home, and doubtless her self could only made their love for her the greater. John certainly would not have been kinder for his helpless little girl, and so attentive was he in the performance of his duties that he quite won his master's trust.

with Mr. Marriott. Surely his heart was not so hard that it could not be touched. It was two good miles to the timber yard and John had generally gone by rail. But there was not a spare penny. Ellie could take for herself, and she tried to go all the way on her crutches. At first her road led her through crowded thoroughfares, and being by nature, she was in constant dread of being run over.
