From his intellectual gifts and acquirements his acquaintance was eagerly sought after, and many a regret will be expressed that the talented stone mason has passed away.

THE LATE THOS. M'QUEEN, We have recently had the painful duty of recording the decease of two prominent and highly respected members of the Opposition

D. Mattice, who were stricken down by the hand of death in the very midst of the present electorial contest. We have now the not less painful duty of recording the death of one of our ablest and most influential fellow-workers outside the halls of the Legislature -Thomas McQueen, of Goderich, who expired at his farm near that town, on Tuesday the 25th June, in the 58th year of his age. The hurry and excitement of the political conflict which terminates to-day, have been so engrossing that we have been prevented hitherto from attempting to pay that tribute of respect which is due to the memory of one who for 20 years has laboured with rare ability and constant zeal on behalf of the principles of good government and the public weal of the people of this Province.— But the task has only been deferred, for we felt that even amidst the excitement of a general election we would be committing an outrage on our own sensibilities, if we took leave of our gifted friend, with the simple, bare announcement of his death in our obituary column. Mr. McQueen died in harness, Although laid on a sick bed, and looking forward to his dissolution as an event near at hand, he took an active interest in the contest now being waged throughout the Province, and particularly in the struggle in his own county and the number of the Signal which was passing through the press almost in the hour when his last sands of life had run out, contained his parting words to the electors of Huron on the part it was incumbent upon them to take in the conflict, if they would prove themselves true to the interests of their country. He has not lived to see the issue of the struggle, but we may hope that, carried on by other earnest and courages men with whom it was his delight, so long as he could wield a pen, to co-operate, it will not cease until Canada has realized that bright and glorious destiny, which he desired in his own sphere to assist in achieving for her. From an affectionate and appreciative artiof its late editor and proprietor, we glean the following facts in referance to his personal history. Thomas McQueen was born of humble parentage in Ayrshire, Scotland.— For the position he afterwards acquired, he was but little indebted to educational advantages in early life. He had attended school but a few months, when he was taken from it, to assist his parents in their toil for subit, to assist his parents in their toil for sub-sistance. About his tenth year he met with fused. sistance. About his tenth year ke met with the accident that occasioned the lamenoss which attended him through life. This disqualifying him for out-door labour, was a circumstance that exerted great influence on his after life, for it inspired him with an inclination to devote himself to books and solitary reflection. His natural genius had thus an opportunity of developing, and by his efforts to cultivate the powers of his mind and store it with useful knowledge, he grow up a well educated, although in the strictest sense of the word, a self-trained man. In his fifteenth or sixteenth year he engaged in the business of a stone mason, and continued in that employment while he remained in Scotland. In his intervals of toil, however, he found time for the cultivation of his intellect, and for devoting a portion of his attention both to literature and politics.—During the great agitation for Parliamentary Reform, Mr. McQueen distinguished himself as an ardent and able leader of the class to whom he belonged. As a speaker, and by his contributions to the periodical press, he took conspicuous rank among the advocates of the rights of the working classes by the weekly issue of a series of essays and lectures on a variety of subjects connected with Political Economy, Education and morals. Mr. McQueen was but little known in Canada, in his character as a poet. He probably found in coming to this country, that among a practical people such as ours, in contributing his mite towards the procuring of needed reforms, he country, that among a practical people such as ours, in contributing his mite towards the procuring of needed reforms, he could hit the mark more directly and effectively by the use of plain intelligible prose, than by indulging in the imaginative flights of poetry. In 1824 he emigrated from Rootland to-Canada, and settling in the country of Renfrew, resumed his occupation as a stone-mason. But he was not long here read to the country of Renfrew, resumed his occupation as a stone-mason. But he was not long h the accident that occasioned the las which attended him through life. This disactively enlisted him in the struggle for Responsible Government, which was then agitating the country. He again became a writer for the Press, and numerous articles from the insergents.

The Queen visited Ireland. It is again asserted, via Turin, that the Pope's health is in a very serious state. The Spanish troops took the town of Losa writer for the Press, and numerous articles from the insergents. writer for the Press, and numerous articles from his pen, published in the Bathurst Courier, on the political questions of the day, attracted much notice, and elicited universal praise from the Liberal party.—After the election of 1847, he was induced by the Hon. M. Cameron to risk the establishment of a newspaper in the county of Huron, which till then had been unrepresented by the Press, and on the 4th February, 1848, Mr. McQueen issued the first number of the Huron Signal. The first Candidate was Col. Playfair, the late member, who started with the expectation of receiving the 439 R. Catholic votes. The election came on unexpectedly, and there was little time to deliberate.— When I entered the field it was with a dependence upon the 766 Protestant Reform yotes, which would have been polled against the Colonel, together with such other Protestants as were opposed to the peculiar and sectarian politics of the R. Catholic party. We proceeded to organize upon principles which commend themselves to all thinking and intelligent Protestants whether Reform or Conservative, and which concede to all of whatever creed, not unequal, but equal civil and religious rights and privileges. These principles have now been expressed freely in the westerly portion of the Riding, but not so in Beckwith and Montague, to the east end of the Riding, and where they have been understood, have met with the strong When I entered the field it was with a de-

A new party, has been formed, which casting aside old prejudices and old party names, has adopted for its motto "Hold fast that which is good—and oppose what is bad."—
This party are now called Unionists. Union with Great Britain—union of the Provinces—and union of all electors who ap-prove of the principles avowed. A Press to sustain this party is now spoken of, and your Committee will doubtless resolve to remain together to promote the spread of the views which has called it into existence. A third candidate was however brought out, and it is unnecessary to remind you how, or of the course pursued to promote his election. With the aid of a newspaper, none being at your disposal, this movement starting with 439 R. Catholic votes, and owing to the hostility of Col. Playfair, made headway and split up the Protestant Reform vote. Our position, however, was such that on Saturday, a week ago, we felt confident of success, and would have gone to the polls sure of victory.

Our Beckwith friends, however, probably the fare to be five cents or twenty-four tickets for a dollar.

By the marriage of the Count von Leiningen, captain of cavalry in the Bavarian service, to the daughter of a brewer at Munich, give strength to the hopes of the Colonel's friends. There is not now time left before the polling day to discuss the effects of this new movement fully. Many of the electors are in doubt as to the course they ought to take, and it has become a question, canvassed in your Committee, as to what had better be
