

She used these words hundreds of times, while her face showed that she was suffering more from the thought of meeting God than from bodily pain. She was asked if she could not trust Jesus for her salvation. She shook her head and said, "Neglectful, O! neglectful!" She continued repeating these words until she was unable to speak, and soon afterwards passed into eternity.

LOUISA HARE. A.D. 1910.

A young lady who had lived for years in the enjoyment of holiness of heart, lay dying of a lingering disease. One time, after a period of extreme weakness, she opened her eyes, and putting up her hands, clasped the arms of a friend who was bending over her, and with a beaming countenance said, "He doeth all things well, doesn't He?"

BENJAMIN ABBOTT.

"Glory to God, I see the heavens open before me."
