BIG LIBERAL CONVENTION

and justice of its principles and the devotion of its men to the cause of progressive government.

HON. MR. HARCOURT.

The meeting was then thrown open to the public and Hon. Richard Harcourt proceeded with an eloquent address.

In part, he said—"I must first congratulate the Liberals of East Kent on their large and thoroughly representative meeting. We have here, also upon the fact that the business has been conducted smoothly, systematically and harmoniously. I would have been surprised if anything else had happened. I was well acquainted with the late Arch. McRae, and sat in the house with him for years. I know his worth. I was also well acquainted with Mr. Ferguson, and was in the house when he was elected. I think as much about him as probably do you, his neighbors. It is a duty I owe to say publicly that no man ever sat in the House of Legislature more honored, admired and esteemed than the late Robert Ferguson. (Applause) He was a respect on both sides of the House and he was a type of man who must be respected. Those who voted against him were clear in their knowledge of his devotion to the truth. Were I to sum up his virtues I could best do so by quoting a well known line, 'He nothing common did, nor mean.' (Applause)

"I must say some words of further congratulation upon the election of your new president. The honor is upon his shoulders and it will be for him to, through devotion to the right and love of truth, guide the ship into her safe moorings in the harbor of justice and right."

"I must also congratulate the gentlemen who have spoken to you. I am glad to notice that in their hurry they did not forget to pass votes of thanks to the Premier, Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He has done more in five years towards making known the big resources of wealth which hitherto have been hidden than the Conservatives did in 18 years."

"I feel sure that the man whom you nominated will be the member elect for East Kent. There is no doubt about it. I can see it in your faces. The men who elected others will stand again and elect Mr. Lee. There is sunshine as well as political storms in political life."

I read a good story the other day about a young politician in England who was making a canvass of the country. He stopped at one house and a little girl came to the door. The young aspirant asked, 'Is your father in?' The little girl answered, 'No, sir.' He then asked, 'Is your mother in?' Again the little girl answered, 'No, sir.' Suddenly a happy thought struck him, and he asked, 'Is your father a Liberal or Conservative?' And the little girl answered, 'He is neither. He is a milkman.'—Laughter.

Now, I hope that when the time comes and when you are asked, what party you are for, you will answer—'Neither. I am for Lee.'—Applause. "On coming to check the tide of Liberalism. We have enjoyed greater progress in the past five years than ever before, so let us take no backward steps. Our watchword in progress, advance and development. The Liberal party is composed of restless, energetic men, who will let nothing remain undone which will aid the betterment of the conditions of all men."

"We must have two parties. A strong opposition is a good feature. There must be issues, broad and reasonable, and well defined, between these two parties."

"Is there any reason why you should not support the Ross government? The Mail and Empire, a Conservative organ, said the other day that it was for Whitney because he was progressive, and it was against Ross because he obstructed advancement. Whitney is reactionary instead of progressive."

"I will quote a few instances. You are situated not far from London. My predecessor as Minister of Education wanted a third normal school situated at London. We have about 6,000 public school teachers out of two and a half million souls, and we make the high boast that no State in the Union or even in England, can you find five or six thousand men or women who are more able or successful in doing that work. You may talk until doomsday of school regulations, but it will have no effect unless you continue to increase the efficiency of the teachers. Mr. Ross recognized that fact, and erected a third normal school at London. What did Mr. Whitney do to remedy the measure was brought before the house? He voted against it. Education of the young man and woman comes back in the manhood of the nation. There cannot be too many schools, and, in fact, there is room for a fourth normal school. Mr. Whitney's policy in this respect would do well for a country like China or Japan—or perhaps I am doing an injustice to these countries by coupling Mr. Whitney's name with them.—Cheers."

"You often hear of the treasurers of municipalities defaulting for the reason that they had not the ability for handling the affairs of the townships. To remedy that evil Mr. Ross appointed an auditor for the whole province whose duties it is to visit the treasurers of the different municipalities and inspect their books. This measure has resulted in untold good and has saved municipalities thousands of dollars. Whitney opposed that appointment as he thought it unnecessary. When it was brought up he said with a wave of his hand, 'Another first appointment.' We do not deny the fact that a Liberal was appointed to the position, and we will continue to appoint good Liberals to all our responsible positions."

"In every township may be found isolated cases of want and neglected children. A superintendent of neglected children was appointed in the person of Mr. Kelso. If it duties are to take the little waifs off the street and find them a suitable home and to look after neglected children generally."

THORNTON & DOUGLAS

The action of appointing this officer was prompted by a clergyman coming to Mr. Mowat and suggesting the idea and since that time nearly 1,500 children have been taken care of by that officer. One effect from this measure is that less children are found in our jails. If all of our children are made good we will in time be able to shut up our jails. I read a story the other day of three South African heroes who won the Victoria Cross for bravery in the British-Boer war. These three men were at one time mere street waifs but were taken care of by an agent for neglected children. This will give you a faint idea of the immense success of the work of these officers."

"Our forest wealth in Ontario is very limited and people are doing all in their power to preserve the existing forests and replacing old ones. The Board of Forestry, advised a forest lecturer to imbibe into the schools and colleges a study of forestry, how to plant trees, replace them, etc. We determined to appoint a clerk of forestry and averaged a million dollars a year from one source. Whitney was again greatly opposed to this measure and strongly condemned the appointing of a clerk."

"We then organized timber wealth exploring parties to report on Ontario's position in this respect. Ten exploration parties were sent to report to us as accurately as they could on the wealth along the Ottawa river as far west as Fort Fraser. By reading their report you will clearly see that we were justified in our action."

"In the ten reports we find that we have three billions feet of pine which means a revenue of nine million dollars a year. The reports of pulp wood showed that we had access to 288,000,000 cords, which will yield a revenue of $115,000,000. "Now you will understand why Mr. Whitney wants to get into power with all this money to spend. In the disputed territory, which was held by Sir Oliver Mowat—for if the Conservatives had their say not a foot of it would be in the province. We have Helen mine, which yields half a million tons of iron yearly. What is the motto of the British armies in South Africa? 'What we have will hold.' That is exactly our motto in respect to this disputed territory and you see the results. In 1899 we had our output of less than 20,000 tons; in 1900 we had 50,000 tons and in 1901 we will have over half a million tons of iron. What did Mr. Whitney call this wonderful territory? 'The land of the stunted people.' What has made England great aside from her strong English character? It is cheap iron and cheaper steel. We have the iron and already steel factories have commenced operation in Ontario. May we not hope that this little colony with cheap iron and cheaper steel will come to the front. All we need to do this is a good government."

"What we need mostly in opening up this country is railroads. Ross offered to help the Algoma Central road, with what results? They were given 7,400 acres of land for every mile of track and besides this they were to open up the land given to them and open up emigration offices in Liverpool and Toronto and out 4,000 male settlers each year for ten years. They were also to respect the rights of the people who were already settled in the land. They were to double the equipment for the manufacture of pulp wood and erect four steamers. What have they done. They have more than lived up to their contract and have erected twelve steamers. We have 117,000,000 acres unsettled—and one-fifth of that amount located. Now these great projects keep the older country as well as the new. One million dollars of the money received out of the enterprises in New Ontario went to Old Ontario. The vibration comes back to us, and we reap the benefit."

"At the next session we were invited to look into another project—that of the Manitoulin and North Shore railroad. What was Mr. Whitney's attitude. He voted for it and it was a project similar to the one with the Algoma Central road.

"Canada has shown up wonderfully at the Pan American Exposition. It is a great honor to us. I am full of sympathy with the Yankees. Laugh at them."

Some people are raising a great disturbance about the census of Ontario not being as large as formerly, but I am not at all alarmed. The difference is more than made up by the increase in the census of Manitoba and British Columbia. And it is our own Ontario boys who have gone out there that has caused the increase."

A few years ago, our agricultural College, Whitney at first tried to belittle this college in the minds of our people. Now he finds fault with Ross for not having more. He would like two or three more."

"Now a very few words about education. We have 131 secondary schools in Ontario, one-sixth of them Collegiate Institutes, and the rest high schools. They are in charge of 600 graduates of the university, or holders of first class certificates. We have 25,000 boys and girls attending our high schools in the Province. How valuable the work done is you all know. We intend to strengthen and broaden their efficiency. We also intend to strengthen the public school system, and to this I am giving all my time and attention."

A few years ago I was master of a high school in Ontario. In that school to-day they have a staff of five teachers to do the work that was formerly attempted by one. Educate the boys, for they will in after years be your governors and great men. You should also help your teachers. A teacher should develop character in the children, and they can only do this by having strong characters themselves."

"In closing I would wish to congratulate Mr. Lee on his nomination as Liberal candidate for East Kent. Remember your own record. Be true to it. But I know you will. Performance is better than promises. Look at the performances of the Liberal party in the past and you cannot help but find it creditable, and I am sure you will stand as tried servants."

VOTE OF THANKS.

John Duck, one of the oldest Liberal workers in East Kent, who occupied a seat on the platform during the whole meeting, then moved a hearty vote of thanks, which was carried amidst long rounds of applause, after which the convention dispersed."

Theatrical

Walker Whiteside, with a company so exceptionally capable as to put to blush the average support of stars of road organizations present J. H. Penner's romantic comedy, "Heart and Sword," at the Grand on Friday evening."

Monday evening, Oct. 28th, "A Homespun Hero," is a pastoral comedy drama by Hal. Reid, who also wrote "The Night before Christmas," "At Cripple Creek," "At the Old Cross Roads" and "Human Hearts," all of which have become popular successes. The atmosphere of the piece is perhaps its greatest charm. It is rather a play of types than a play of action. The story is said to be well told. The heart interest being especially strong. A splendid company and an elaborate scenic display is promised."
