S. A. Brooks, a street railway conductor on the Douglas avenue branch, is unprotected. went through the experience about 11 o'clock on Thursday evening of being caught in the "devil strip" while his car was passing another. He is a new addition to the railway force, and not quite familiar with the ways of the cars. As he was fixing the bar on the inside of the car he was caught between it and another car passing in the opposite direction. Luckily for the conductor he was near the end of his own car, and threw himself partially under the platform. Had he been in the middle of the car he would undoubtedly have been killed. A severe stunning and bruising were the worst effects of the accident, and Mr. Brooks same round in time to take the last trip of his car to the shed.

The dozen St. John men who went to Yarmouth to the big Mystic Shrine meeting returned home on Thursday evening. His arrival fulfils the hope of an elderly duke for a son to whom he could hand down the historic title. The Duke of Norfolk has waited many years for a son and heir. The only child of his first marriage died in 1902, at the age of 23, a hopeless idiot and cripple. The first duchess died of grief when her son was eight years old.

After the death of his son the duke married the Hon. Gwendolen Constable-Maxwell, daughter and heiress Lord Herries a young and beautiful woman of his own faith. Their of a daugher, and now both have been made perfectly happy by the birth of a healthy little Earl of Arundel. The duke was twice mayor of Sheffield, a town from which he derives some £100,000 a year ,and from 1895 to 1900 was one of the most active post-ever had. He resigned to serve in the South African war. A peculiar fact in connection with the earldom of Arundel, created in 1133, is that Arundel Castle is the only ancient feudal estate the possession of which ipso facto confers a title. If it were sold to any millionaire tomorrow, he would at once become earl of Arun-

In spite of his vast wealth and high positions, the present duke of Norfolk scorns luxuries. He prefers old garnents to new, and can boast the proud distinction of being the worst-dressed man in the House of Lords. Once, it is said ,he went into a shop in Portsmouth, and the proprietor, thinking he had come in answer to an advertisement for an assistant, told him the place was filled, and offered him sixpence to cover his disappointment. The duke, who is not without humor, took it with thanks and went.

I., June M.-The jury in the second trial in union was blessed in 1905 by the birth Summerside against Doherty for murder was finally completed yesterday of ternoon after considerable time taken in selecting it. J. J. Johnston, who is assisting Attorney General Palmer, opened the case for the crown in a strong address. The following witnesses were examined: John Mollison, master generals the general post office | land surveyor; John Rogers, J. P.; R. S. Bowness, coroner; Fred. Wright, deputy sheriff; Henry T. Wright, stiperdiary magistrate: Daniel Maloney. Dr. John McNeill, Dr. McLellan, Prosper Desroches and Urban Gillis. No additional facts were brought out. This morning Father Monaghan, to whom the prisoner, Stella McDonald and her aunt. Miss Gillis, went to after the shooting and told the story of the tragedy, Miss Gillis, Walter Schurman and Ernest Rogers were examined. A new fact brought out was that Doherty told Miss Gillis while on the way to the priest's house not to tell Father Monaghan that it was jealousy, for it wasn't. Walter Schurman, a neighbor of Doherty's, at the first trial had testified that Doherty called after him to drive him to Miscouche to give himself up in the morning after the tragedy. He said the prisoner told him that he had shot McMillan in the stomach and head today. Schurman swore he wasn't sure whether Doherty told this or told him that Stella MacDonald told the prisoner that he had shot McMillan in this way. Schurman adnitted that since the first trial he was talking to Doherty through a cell window, and Doherty asked him: "Did I tell you that Stella McDonald told me I had shot McMillan in that way?" When Doherty was on the stand last veek he claimed that he was utterly unconscious of anything that happened Swarms of Insects Making | for two nours perore the tragedy was for two hours before the tragedy and the body lying on the ground.
