Farmers should read carefully this testimonial—It will tell them what the operators of the think of it. These statements are from men who have used it a whole season and know what they are talking about.

GEO. STEPHENS & CO., Chatham.

Dear Sirs: Having purchased one of your Columbia Corn Harvesters last season will say, they are the best we have ever seen at work, having seen all the leading machines working in the field. We cut over one hundred acres last season. Machine runs easy, no side draft, knocks off very few ears, ties all and makes a perfect bundle. Works perfect in either planted or drilled corn. Cut drilled corn over twelve feet tall after it had been killed by frost and knocked down flat by storm, picked it up and done good work. It can be easily adjusted to make any size sheaf, and the drive wheel is so made that it will work in very soft ground.

Yours truly, CHARLES BELLEMY, W. F. BELLEMY

THE GROOMSMAN TO HIS MISTRESS.

Every wedding, says the proverb, Makes another, soon or late; Never yet was any marriage Entered in the book of fate, But the names were also written Of the patient pair that wait.

Blessings then upon the morning When my friend, with fondest look, By the solemn rites' permission, To himself his mistress took, And the destinies recorded Other two within their book.

When the priest fulfilled his office, Still the ground the lovers eyed, And the parents and the kinsmen Aimed their glances at the bride; But the groomsmen eyed the virgin Who were waiting at her side.

Three there were that stood beside her; One was dark, and one was fair; But not fair nor dark the other, Save her Arab eyes and hair; Neither dark nor fair I call her, Yet she was the fairest there.

While her groomsmen—shall I own it?—Yes, to thee, and only thee—Gazed upon this dark-eyed maiden Who was fairest of the three, Thus he thought: "How blest the bride! Where the bride were such as she!"

Then I mused upon the adage, Till my wisdom was perplexed, And I wondered, as the churchman Dwelt upon his holy text, Which of all who heard his lesson Should require the service next.

Whose will be the next occasion For the flowers, the feasts, the wine? Thine, perchance, my dearest lady; Or, who knows!—it may be mine; What if 't were—forgive the fancy, What if 't were—both mine and thine!

LOTS OF RAW MEAT

A Parisian Scientist Declares That is a Cure for Tuberculosis.

He has tried it on a Number of Dogs With Effective Results.

Will science succeed in finding a means of preventing and of curing tuberculosis? Research has been made on all sides, yet to this hour the problem does not appear near solution, says a writer in the European edition of the New York Herald.

It is a fact, however, that attempts made with the most varied descriptions of serums have till now been fruitless. Isopertherapy—that is to say, the treatment of the disease by the use of animal juices—about to become more fortunate? Without desiring to forecast the future, but judging from the only experiments which M. Richet, of Paris, has just communicated to the Biological Society, one may reply in the affirmative, assuming it to be legitimate to form a but let us not anticipate events; while maintaining a just reserve let us wait until the clinic has pronounced his opinion.

Results from the observations made by this Paris professor that, in the first place, treatment by cooked meat causes the death of dogs more rapidly than any other treatment. On the contrary, dogs fed upon raw meat continue in good health and get fat.

Out of a lot of twenty-four dogs tubercularized nine months previously only two that were fed on raw meat survive. They are large and in perfect health, whereas the other twenty-two have long since died of the disease.

Out of another lot of dogs, also inoculated with tuberculosis products, only one, fed extensively with raw meat, survived and continued in good condition. The other dogs died within five months at the outside, in a state of extreme cachexy.

The juice of raw meat acts in the same manner as raw meat. The animals that were tubercularized and treated with the juice keep in good health; others treated in any other manner all die within periods ranging from one to five months at the outside.

If the curative properties of raw meat are evident, the prophylactic part played by it is not less so. In fact, animals nourished with the juice of raw meat in large quantities and subsequently inoculated, appear refractory to tuberculosis, as has been proved by the latest experiments related by M. Richet, where the animals prepared by alimentation with raw flesh continue perfectly well, while others are either dead or dying.

But what is the dose of raw meat that should be given to dogs in order to preserve them from tuberculosis? Of the dogs tubercularized by M. Richet, one received seven grammes of meat per kilogramme of the animal's weight; another twelve grammes, a third thirty-two grammes, and a fourth and last sixty-four grammes per kilogramme of its weight per day. The first died, but three others are in very good health. It may therefore be assumed that the average amount of raw meat required to preserve a dog inoculated with tuberculosis is from one to twelve grammes per day and per kilogramme.

As M. Richet showed in a previous communication, raw meat acts by its juice and not by its pulp. In fact, if one places a piece of raw meat, compressed, to extract the juice, beneath a tap of running water for twenty-four hours, and then presses it, one obtains a juice which is absolutely inactive.

To administer raw meat with which it is proposed to treat tuberculosis patients it must not be chopped or rasped; it must be scraped with a sharp knife; the pulp must be put into cold broth and thus dissolved. In this way one obtains a kind of soup over which one pours tepid broth or thin soup and even the yolks of one or two eggs.

In view of the results obtained by M. Richet, the preventive and curative treatment of tuberculosis by raw meat is to be recommended as the most effective means at our disposal at this moment for combating this terrible malady.

Every time a man invents a good scheme some other fellow comes along and makes a fortune out of it.

Temperance

Women hold up Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and "Favorite Prescription" as examples of what all medicines should be in absolute freedom from alcohol and narcotics. They are strictly temperance medicines. They contain no alcohol, neither opium, cocaine, nor any other narcotic. False formulas of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and "Favorite Prescription" having been published by ignorant or unscrupulous persons, Dr. R. V. Pierce as president of the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y., the manufacturers of his remedies, offers one thousand dollars for any bottle of these medicines which on analysis shall show the presence either of alcohol or of opium, cocaine, or any other narcotic.

Suits against the originators and publishers of these false formulas have been instituted, and in order to effectually stop the publication of these malicious falsehoods, Dr. Pierce asks that his friends will send him copies of any circular, pamphlet, or other advertisement, in which the statement is made that "Golden Medical Discovery" or "Favorite Prescription" contains alcohol or opium or other narcotics. A PATHETIC CASE.

Galveston Man Blown from Room Before His Wife's Eyes.

She has not Even Been Able to Find His Body—They Were Travellers.

New Orleans, Sept. 15. — One of the most pathetic stories of suffering in Galveston, was learned to-day, when the Southern Pacific train arrived here from Houston. Among the passengers were Mrs. Mary Quayle, of Liverpool, Eng., whose husband, Edward Quayle, was a tabulator on the Liverpool cotton exchange.

Mrs. Quayle and her husband arrived in Galveston on Thursday before the storm, and took apartments in the Lucas terrace, a fashionable place in the eastern end of the island.

On Saturday the day of the storm, Mr. Quayle was not feeling well and remained in his room most of the time lying down on a couch. When the storm became very bad after 8 o'clock he went to the windows, frequently hoping to see by an occasional flash of lightning whether or not there was danger of destruction.

Suddenly there came an unusually violent fit of wind and the window out of which Mr. Quayle was peering was literally sucked out as if by a mighty air pump, and he was taken along with it. Mrs. Quayle, instead of being drawn along in the direction of the storm, was thrown in the opposite direction against the door of her room.

When she came to her senses she found she was not severely hurt.

Sunday morning she searched throughout all the adjacent portion of the city for her missing husband. But not a trace of him was to be found. The search was kept up till Monday night, by which time all the wounds had been cared for in the best possible manner, and all the dead had become putrid. Mr. Quayle had on his person some very valuable jewelry and quite a large sum of money at the time he disappeared.
