We were informed last week that We were informed last week that considerable shooting was going on at the Eau. This is contrary to law, and should be stopped. People who go to the Eau in the spring to shoot curlew do not take a boat and goout into the middle of the Eau to find these birds, as they can only be found along the shore, and as considerable shooting is being indulged in on the open water, it is surmised that duck, not curlew, are the birds sought after. It is really too bad that the duck cannot be left alone, at the Eau, during the biding season. A good stiff fine on some of the offenders might have a salutary effect.—Blenheim News-Tribune.

DOGS AS LETTER CARRIERS

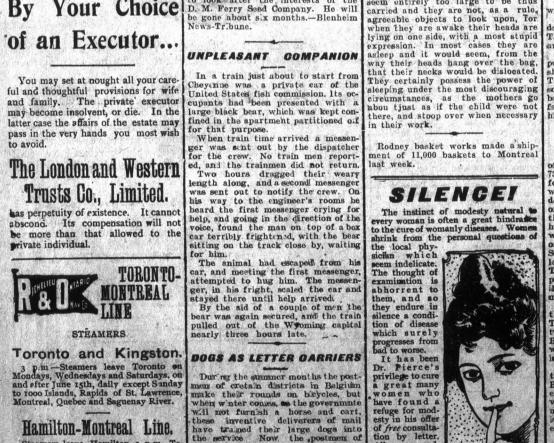

Dogs as letter carriers

During the summer menths the postmen of cretain districts in Belgium make their rounds on beyeles, but when with recomes, as the government will not furnish a horse and cart, these inventive deliverers of mail have trained their large dogs into the service. Now the postmen of these localities can be seen any winter day seated in their little carriages made especially for the purpose, passing swiftly along the country roads.

All the postmen in these districts have each one or two dogs, and a light dog carriage specially built for their service. In addition to drawing the carts the dogs act most usefully as guides for voung postmen. When a new postman is appointed, so reliable are the dogs, that no one is sent to indicate his route for him. He simply seats himself in the cart of the postman whose duty he has taken up, and allows the dog which draws it to go its accustomed route.

With hundreds of deliveries to make, the postman, however careful he is, is liable to make a mistake, but it is found the dogs never forget to call at a house they have been taught to inimelinde in their rounds. All the postman has to do is to recollect at what house he is no longer to make deliveries, and to leave them unserved.

VERY PHLEGMATIC

The streets of Yokohama and, for that matter, of all Japanese cities and towns, fairly swarm with children. It seems in many streets that there are more children than adults, which may be partially accounted for by the are more children than adults, which may be partially accounted for by the fact that many of the adults are indoors, while the children usually are not. They are of all ages, and when old enough romp around the streets and engage in their games with the greatest vim. A book could be written on this feature of street life in Japanese cities, and the subject would not then be exhausted. Almost every woman is carrying a child on her back, as the universal way of carrying them is in a sort of a bag, made by tying the ends of a piece of cotton cloth around the shoulders and depositing the baby in the receptacle thus formed. Some of these babies seem entirely too large to be thus carried and they are not, as a rule, agreeable objects to look upon, for when they are awake their heads are lying on one side, with a most stupid expression. In most cases they are asleep and it would seem, from the way their heads hang over the bag, that their necks would be dislocated. They certainly possess the power of sleeping under the most discouraging They certainly possess the power of sleeping under the most discouraging circumstances, as the mothers go abou tjust as if the child were not there, and stoop over when necessary

DOVER CENTRE.

DOVER CENTRE.

We are sorry to hear of the death of Mr. Cornellius Rive, who was in his 73rd year. Mr. Roe had been alling for some time, but some time ago was supposed to be improving, so his death will come as a shock to some of his friends. Mr. Roe was one of the oldest Dover settlers and during his residence in this township, he had won the esteem of a large number of friends. His funeral took place on Sunday, May 29th, and was one of the largest ever attended in this vicinity. The Masons and I. O. F. each took part in the burial service. The family have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

A garden party is to be held at the Presbyterian Church, on June 9. The attraction of the evening is between the Dover Centre and Mitchell's Bay teams, which will doubtless be well contested. Other sports will be indulged in also.

Quite a number from here attended the picule at the Bay on the 24th. B lle Jackson met with rather a novel experience. She had just left the woods when a wild pigeon bore down upon her. She succeeded in capturing it and took it home with her that evening.
